Psychologists say we humans need heroes. From a young age, heroes educate us about right and wrong.

And they lift us when we're feeling blue.

A perfect example for Warren is when native son Dave Grohl, a worldfamous rocker and leader of the band Foo Fighters, gave a free concert in Courthouse Square in August 2009 for the dedication of David Grohl Alley.

Before he sang "There Goes My Hero," he dedicated it to Warren police officer Joe O'Grady, who stood in the crowd misty-eyed and overwhelmed.

O'Grady, now retired, was ine ariving force behind creating the alley, which gave the town a sense of pride at a time when the city was suffering monumental job losses. Around that time, other Warren heroes dropped by, some with the same message of hope: I lived here like you at one time, and this is a good town. It's safe to say Warren has produced a sizeable number of famous people. From the late Fox News founder Roger Ailes to boxer Ernie Shavers, "Dukes of Hazzard" star Catherine Bach, actor Austin Pendleton, astronaut Ron Parise, movie director Christopher Columbus and historical figures such as suf-

Opening Wick vault reveals even more

Vindy.com

I had the great chance and luck to bump into a new book about Youngstown's Wick family written by Lillian Reynolds Reeher of Grove City.

A story I wrote about it ran in The Vindicator a couple of weeks ago.

Lillian found the childhood scrapbooks of Mary Wick – daughter of James Lippincott Wick, a leading Youngstown industrialist who ran Falcon Bronze Co. and was a top civic activist for much of the 20th century. With his wife, Clare, they championed many city and Valley organizations that remain vital still today, including Youngstown College (now Youngstown State University). Mill Creek Park Board of Trustees, Youngstown Chamber of Commerce, YMCA, Mahoning Valley Historical Society and more.

Mary Wick's scrapbooks were left to be discovered at a flea market by a stranger – Lillian – who just happened to be a historian and writer.

"I feel I was meant to find them," said Lillian.

Sharing the news of Lillian's book launched a flood of emails to me that I want to share.

Of the many stories we get to publish in the Vindy, we've learned that nostalgic items of any kind are instant wins with readers. The new Wick book was no exception.

Here you go:

I've always been interested in local history from the local millionaire industrialist families.

My great-uncle lived on the corner of Fifth and Crandall.

Most of Mary Wick's contemporaries are likely long gone, my mother among them.

Mom knew all the Wicks, including Mary, as they all attended The Rayen School together.

As adults, they continued to keep in touch through mutual friends & reunions on the North Side. My mother grew up on Alameda, the youngest of four children born in 1918 to L.B. & Mary Happer Grindlay.

Her oldest brother was the renowned Dr. John H. Grindlay, once a surgeon in the Mayo Clinic.

North Siders had a club called the North Hill Study Club. But to this day, I don't know much about it.

Mary Wick may have been a member, but I can't vouch for that. It might be worth exploring ...

Thank you for writing such a great article.

The above items from Vindy readers are neat in that they take the opening of one vault by us and voluntarily open more.

Netflix series on abuse prompts calls for priest's files

BALTIMORE

A Netflix documentary series has prompted calls for the Baltimore Archdiocese to release a dead priest's files.

The Baltimore Sun reported Saturday that the show about the priest's alleged abuse led to more than 11,000 signatures on an online petition. Archdiocese spokesman Sean Caine said state law bars the release of much of the confidential information.

'The Keepers" focuses on the unsolved death of a Catholic nun and abuse at then-Archbishop Keough High School. The priest at the center of the show is A. Joseph Maskell.

He denied abuse allegations and was never charged before his 2001 death. But the archdiocese has since paid $472,000 in settlements to alleged victims.

"The Keepers" explores the theory that nun Cathy Cesnik was killed in 1969 because she knew about Maskell's abuse.

signed by authors with personal notes to Zevon.

Among the books are collections of W. Somerset Maugham and Graham Greene novels as well as detective fiction. Some are by friends like Hunter S. Thompson, Carl Hiaasen or Stephen King, who dedicated a book to Zevon after his death.

She and her daughter decided to sell them to raise money to support a community retreat house that Crystal Zevon bought in her village of East Barnet, Vt.

YOUNGSTOWN Although Northern Ireland's "Troubles" officially ended nearly 20 years ago, divisions remain in the country.

That's why the Mahoning Valley Ülster Project, now in its 30th year, remains important, said Greg Hartz, who helps lead the program.

Each year, Mahoning Valley families host 12 teenagers from Northern Ireland for a one-month stay. This year's group arrived Monday and will be in the Youngstown area until July 26.

"At the end of the month, the teens will have bonded together," said Hartz. "During the month we talk to them about tolerance, eliminating prejudice and becoming a peacemaker in their community. The hope is that they take that home with them, whether here or in Northern Ireland, and use it to spread the peace initiative wherever they live." The Ulster Project was started in 1975 by religious leaders in the U.S. and Northern Ireland, and there now are chapters around the country. At that time, Northern Ireland was in the midst of a violent conflict over the country's constitutional status - unionists, who were mainly Protestants, wanted to remain part of the United Kingdom, while nationalists, who were primarily Catholics, wanted the country to be part of a united Ireland.

old feelings don't just disappear.'

The Ulster Project pairs the Northern Irish teens half of whom are Catholic, and the other half Protestant – with families who have kids of a similar age.

Throughout the month, the group will participate in a number of community service projects.

"It gives us an opportunity to give back to the community," said Hartz. "And it's also an eye opener for the teens."

They'll volunteer at Habitat for Humanity, food distributions at local churches, and more. They'll also visit numerous area churches, and do fun activities such as going to Cedar Point. On Friday, the project will host its largest fundraiser, an auction/dinner at St. Christine Parish Hall. For the Jenkins family of Poland, this is the second time they have hosted. "The first time I did it I didn't know anything about it, but it just seemed like an amazing opportunity for our family," said Jill Jenkins, whose son previously participated and whose 15-year-old daughter is now part of it. "It was a great experience to learn about Northern Ireland." Peter Camlin and Katie

"I've done Poland Idols for 11 years," said Cindy Best, first-year president of Celebrate Poland, on the grounds of Poland Village Hall. "It's fun seeing the contestants come back year-after-year.

Best's daughter, Brittany Best, a former Poland Idol contestant, is a voice performance major at Berklee College of Music in Boston and was one of the judges for Saturday's contest.

The Quinlan siblings, students at Boardman Glenwood Junior High School, were among about 25 contestants in four categories - kindergarten to fourth grade, fifth to eighth grade, high school and adult.

'It literally rained on my parade Friday," said Best.

But, she said, because of great community support, there was a crowd of about 300 for the Disco Inferno rock band performance squeezed in between the rain.

However, while precipitation threatened off-and-on early Saturday, the hot, muggy day did not keep away a crowd of people who enjoyed the events and one another.

At 241, how strong is US republic? America falls in stature from 'full democracy' to 'flawed democracy,' international index says

Associated Press

WASHINGTON N HIS 41/2 YEARS AS A STATE senator from Manhattan, Brad Holyman has handed out everything from flashlights to T-shirts at political rallies. But for a gathering held soon after President Donald Trump's inauguration, he decided on something more substantial:

Copies of the Constitution.

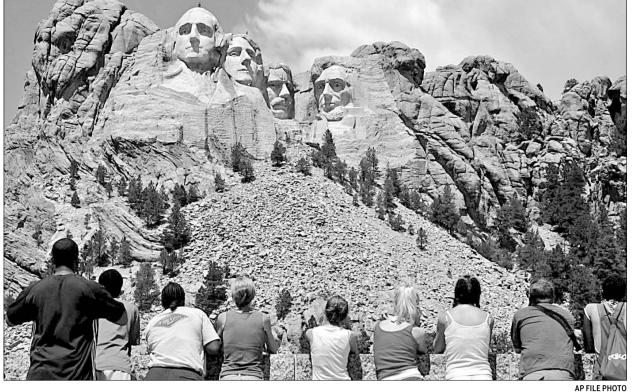

"My constituents had been asking me, 'What can I do to help?' 'How do I prepare myself?'" says Holyman, a Democrat in his third term who has since distributed thousands of copies. "A year ago, who would have imagined that giving away the Constitution would be seen as an act of resistance?

Americans have disagreed about government and civic life since the country's founding, about who should vote, who should run for office and the risks of political factions. But as the U.S. nears its 241st birthday, many say democracy itself is in the dock.

Trump, with his labeling the mainstream press the "enemy of the people" and his disparagement of "so-called" judges and other traditional checks on executive power, has critics anxious about not just a given policy but the fate of self-rule – at the same time that his supporters view his rise as the kind of anti-elitist triumph democracy is supposed to represent.

The debate extends from classrooms and policy institutes to popular culture, to the Trump-influenced staging of Shakespeare's "Iulius Caesar" at Manhattan's Public Theater and the wave of dystopian best-sellers such as "1984" and The Handmaid's Tale.'

Over the past two centuries, the country has become more democratic than many of the founders the standards activists have called for. Critics cite partisan gerrymandering, voting restrictions, the influence of money on elections and striking income inequality, saying the United States falls short of modern democratic ideals.

The Democracy Index, compiled by the British-based Economist Intelligence Unit, ranked the U.S. at 21st worldwide in 2016, tied with Italy and trailing Norway, Canada and Uruguay, among others. While Norway and several other Scandinavian countries are considered "full democracies," ac-wished – without ever reaching cording to the index, the U.S. last ideals, but never with so many year fell to "flawed democracy," receiving low scores for "functioning of government" and "political participation.'

"I think it's highly unusual and disconcerting to have so many people worried about the foundations of our democracy," says Wendy R. Weiser, who directs the Brennan Center for Justice's Democracy Program, based at New York University School of Law and focusing on voting rights and elections, among other issues. "We're always talking about democracy fundamental questions as we're doing right now.'

But when activists vow to revitalize democracy, they don't mean the society imagined by the men who helped create it.

"None of the founders envisioned our modern democracy, with its broad suffrage and competing political parties," says Gordon Wood, the Pulitzer Prizewinning historian of the Revolutionary War era. "Running for office was demagogic and dangerous. The founders believed and struggling to live up to our in equality, but they essentially of being too pro-British or pro-French, a division marked by two ongoing concerns: The country would relapse into British-style monarchy or fall into violence and lawlessness like the murderous "Reign of Terror" during the French Revolution.

In 1788, the year before the French Revolution began, Americans were deciding whether to ratify the Constitution. One concern, James Madison wrote in the Federalist Papers, was "men of factious tempers, of local prejudices, or of sinister designs, (who) may by intrigue, by corruption or by other means, first obtain the suffrages, and then betray the interests of the people.'

Some founders lived long enough to watch, and bemoan the political rise of Andrew Jackson in the 1820s. Trump and supporters have cited Jackson as a favorite predecessor in the White House, a populist who defied the establishment and broke down boundaries against who might become president. Trump ally Newt Gingrich, the former House Speaker, has written that Trump, like Jackson, is "an outsider and a disruptive force chosen to break up existing Washington power structures."

But Thomas Jefferson, in sentiments critics have echoed about Trump, worried that Jackson "had very little respect for laws and constitutions" and added that "His passions are terrible.'

Historian Sean Wilentz calls Trump "almost a caricature of the Caesar-like character the (Constitution's) framers so deeply feared.'

For him, both those who ardently support Trump and those who resist his policies are evidence of American exceptionalism.

luso said. "Maybe we've turned a new leaf and people are feeling patriotic again."

Eder Flag Manufacturing Co. in Oak Creek, Wisc., reported flag sales up 15 percent year-over-year in May. Polling from Gallup found 75 percent of Americans said they were "very proud" or "extremely proud" to be American in March. That is the lowest number recorded since the polling firm began asking the question in 2001. The previous low was 81 percent.

"You respect the office," he said. "We were blessed to be born in this country."

Daisher, who said his eyes water at the first note of taps, believes younger generations are less patriotic. At a recent flag retirement ceremony, he lamented that most participants were older.

"I cannot stand it when the national anthem is played and the young men do not remove their headgear," he said.

People don't have to agree with one another to love their country equally, Serrano said. Conservatives think their beliefs and political views are correct, and so do liberals. But both parties feel they are putting the country first.

These are things that make many Americans proud.

"We all share that in common whether you hold one political view or a different view," he said.

His own devotion to the U.S. is unequivocal.

"I love this country because of the different cultures we experience here," Serrano said. "And the opportunity this country has. and the freedom and security and economy ... everything honestly."

WAVE THAT FLAG

Nick Peluso, who owns and operates Western Reserve Flag Co., said the Valley is a very patriotic area. About 90 percent of his business consists of selling U.S. and Ohio flags as well as military flags. The company is in the midst of its busy season - Memorial Day through Veteran's Day.

"It's just what our coun-try stands for," Peluso said of the flag. He said patriotism means supporting your country, your government, your military and even law enforcement.

The constant protests in the nation bother him.

'The people that bash this country and don't appreciate what we have here ... it irritates me," he said.

His company has seen an unusually high number of flag sales over the past year. The spike is more significant than in past election years. "It was exceptional," Pe-

While respondents identifying as Democrats reported a sharp decline, Republicans reported a slight uptick over the last year. Gallup recorded a 25 point gap in patriotic feelings between Democrats and Republicans, the highest in the poll's existence.

Peluso said 90 percent of the people coming into his shop during the election were Trump supporters.

RECOGNIZING VETERANS

Dave Daisher's patriotism is rooted in his service to the country. He's the chaplain of VFW post 4237 in Austintown. He served in the Air Force during Vietnam.

"I put time in the military, and, of course, I respect what that affords us the ability that flag stands for," Daisher said.

There are presidents Daisher has disagreed with and congressman he doesn't care for, but in his view, that has nothing to do with patriotism. Patriotism is about respecting the standards on which the Founding Fathers built the country.

to poor parenting. He said the current generation was raised by hippies, who had a disregard for patriotism.

Education, through events such as the flag-retirement ceremony the VFW and American Legion posts in Austintown held on Flag Day, could restore that love of country that comes natural to older generations.

THE NEXT GENERATION

Jacob Schriner-Briggs, who graduated from Youngstown State University this spring, is part of that younger generation. He considers himself patriotic, but he said that includes a willingness to be critical of the country.

We live in a country to change things and influence government," he said. "If we're willing to get lazy and accept things as they are, that erodes the concept of patriotism."

Schriner-Briggs is more critical of the Trump administration than he was the Obama administration, but he said that doesn't mean he's less

WARREN Continued from A3

Warren has produced many professional athletes, including baseball player Bill White and NFL players Korey Stringer, Mario Manningham, Randy Gradishar and four members of the Browner family – Aaron, Joey, Keith and Ross.

Arguably the most famous Warren resident of all time is Cleveland Browns and Miami Dolphins receiving great Paul Warfield, born Nov. 28, 1942, when his family lived on Cedar Street, which no longer exists but was off of Pine Avenue just east of the former Republic Steel mill.

The Warren engineering department found Cedar Street on some old maps, just south of Roanoke Avenue, where the Warren City Schools parks its buses.

The Warfield family home after that, the one where the Warfield family lived when Paul was in high school, is at North Park Avenue and Federal Street Northeast on the North End.

In September 2013, Warfield came to Warren for the dedication of a life-sized statue and monument to him and his career near the the school district's Mollenkopf Stadium, where he played.

The two double-sided panels tell some of his story - Hall of Famer, member of 1964 Cleveland Browns championship team and Miami Dolphins championship teams of 1972 and 1973.

He also was a state champion in the long jump in Ailes, who was forced out of Fox News last year over accusations of sexual harassment, also was a top political consultant to presidents Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush.

Blank and Dean, who also knew Ailes, said Ailes was generous, including to various causes in Warren. He always asked that his donations not be revealed to the public, Blank said.

Like Grohl, Catherine Bach, who starred as Daisy Duke on "Dukes of Hazzard," lived only a short time in Warren. Her father, Bernard Bachman, was an efficiency expert at the Lordstown Ordinance Depot and was born in South Dakota, her birth certificate says.

The family lived on Laird Avenue near Harding High School when Catherine was born March 1, 1953.

In an interview in The Repository of Canton, Bach said she "basically grew up in South Dakota" because her father was in Warren in the Air Force, "then he took my mom back to the ranch in South Dakota."

She is perhaps best known for the short, denim cut-off "Daisy Dukes" shorts she wore in the show, which ran on television from 1979 to 1985.

> ing us horse around, he insisted we always do the right thing – sit up straight, no chewing gum, and he was the one who got us down to Perkins Park to try out for Little League," Dean said of Paul's father.

"Every time we looked around, we were doing something together," Dean said: They played baseball, basketball and football together and sang in the church choir. Paul Warfield served as best man in Dean's wedding.

Dryden Warfield took steps to protect Paul from situations that might have derailed his future, such as staying out late, Dean said.

"If I stopped over at Paul's house and I said we're going over to Nancy's and it was 9, 10 o'clock, his dad simply said no. He was a no-nonsense but a good guy. I think his dad was a reason he was able to stay focused," Dean said.

During that trip, Ailes said he had always taken the traditions and values he acquired in Warren "everywhere I've traveled." Ailes lived on Belmont Street Northeast near Paige Avenue, which is close to Harding.

Ailes' birth certificate says he was born May 15, 1940, while his parents were living on Bingham Avenue Northwest, not far off of Parkman Road. His father, Robert E. Ailes, was a milliron operator at Packard Electric.

Blank was marketing director at Fortune magazine when he and Ailes would sometimes get together for lunch or a drink.

Given the mishmash of information Trump's commission will receive, it's unclear how useful it will be or what the commission will do with it. Trump established the commission to investigate allegations of voter fraud in the 2016 elections. but Democrats have blasted it as a biased panel that is merely looking for ways to suppress the vote.

New Hampshire Secretary of State Bill Gardner, a Democrat who is a member of Trump's Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity, defended the request Friday. He said the commission expected that many states would only partially comply because openrecords laws differ from state to state.

"If only half the states agree, we'll have to talk about that. I think, whatever they do, we'll work with that," said Gardner, adding that the commission will discuss the survey at its July 19 meeting. He said he has received calls from unhappy constituents who said they didn't want Trump to see their personal information.

"But this is not private, and a lot of people don't know that," he said

White House spokeswoman Sarah Huckabee Sanders blasted the decision by some governors and secretaries of state not to comply.

"I think that that's mostly about a political stunt," she told reporters.

It's not just Democrats bristling at the requested information.

Mississippi Secretary of State Delbert Hosemann, a Republican serving his third term, said in a statement he had not received the com07-02-17 mission's request. If he does receive it?

"My reply would be: They can go jump in the Gulf of Mexico, and Mississippi is a great state to launch from," he said. "Mississippi residents should celebrate Independence Day and our state's right to protect the privacy of our citizens by conducting our own electoral processes.'

In a federal court case after a contentious U.S. Senate primary in Mississippi in 2014, a group called True the Vote sued Mississippi seeking similar information about voters. Hosemann fought that request and won.

No state election official planned to provide the commission with all of the information requested - even Kansas, where commission vice chairman Kris Kobach is secretary of state. He sent the letter asking for the names, party affiliations, addresses, voting histories, felony convictions, military service and the last four digits of Social Security numbers for all voters.

A spokeswoman for Kobach's office said the last four digits of Social Security numbers are not publicly available under Kansas law and would not be handed over. That was the case in many other states, noted in statements from top election officials and responses to queries from reporters for The Associated Press.

Officials in 10 states and the District of Columbia said they would not comply at all with the request. Those states are California, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Mexico, New York, South Dakota, Tennessee and Virginia.

Fisherman charged in wife's lake killing despite no body

Associated Press

A commercial fisherman's story about his wife disappearing into the depths of Lake Erie on a boating trip isn't adding up, and Pennsylvania authorities believe they know why. They say he's the one who put her there.

Christopher Leclair, 48, is jailed on a charge of criminal homicide in the presumed death of his wife of nearly 26 years, Karen, whose body has not been found.

the Doris-M, when she got a queasy stomach and decided to sit on a bucket perched on the side. He said when he glanced over to check on her 15 minutes later, she was gone, having apparently fallen overboard. He then contacted the Coast Guard.

Two days later, a review of surveillance video from the Erie-Western Pennsylvania Port Authority led state police to arrest Leclair. The vid-Leclair told authorities he eo showed he got on the boat alone that Sunday at a dock cameras, however, showed Leclair getting on the boat with his wife the day before – and returning hours later without her.

The Coast Guard spent more than $600,000 on a 30-hour search that covered about 1,400 square miles. They officially declared Leclair's 51-year-old wife dead. Investigators believe her body is still in the lake.

Investigators are conweighted it down with nets,"

The surveillance video strongly suggests Karen Leclair's body is in the lake, Kline said. "If that's not the case, you know, why wouldn't he talk to us? If he dropped her off on another dock or whatever, he surely would be more cooperative, Kline said.

Leclair's attorney, Bruce Sandmeyer, said his client "is continuing to assert his sidering "the possibility he innocence." He wouldn't address the discrepancy be-

Trump doesn't seem to heed calls to tone down tweets Associated Press BRIDGEWATER, N.J.

President Donald Trump escalated an intensely personal feud with two highprofile talk show hosts Saturday, suggesting without evidence that their network is biased against him.

The president's stream of insults has pained politicians from both parties who have appealed to him, without apparent success, to stop the 140-character bursts of character attacks and focus on running the country.

Trump lashed out at Joe Scarborough and Mika Brzezinski, co-hosts of MSNBC's "Morning Joe," on Twitter on Saturday. From his New Jersey golf club, he said: "Crazy Joe Scarborough and dumb as a rock Mika are not bad people, but their low-rated show is dominated by their NBC bosses.'

Trump also said that Greta Van Susteren lost her nightly show on MSNBC because she "refused to go along w/ 'Trump hate!'" MSNBC confirmed this week that Van Susteren, previously a longtime anchor at Fox News, was being replaced.

NBC declined comment on all the tweets Saturday from the president. "Morning Joe" just finished the highest-rated quarter in the show's history. MSNBC never officially gave a reason for replacing Van Susteren's show; it did, however, lag in the ratings compared with the network's other shows. Trump drew broad condemnation for his tweets on Thursday calling Brzezinski "crazy" and saying she was "bleeding badly from a facelift" when he saw them at his Florida estate. The comment was decried as sexist and vulgar by many Democrats and Republicans. The MSNBC personalities said Friday that Trump was lying about their December encounter and they questioned his "unhealthy obsession" with their program.

It was not clear if Bello knew Dr. Fracy Sin-Yee Tam, 32, who was killed in the shooting on the 16th and 17th floors of the hospital and was, like him, a family-medicine doctor. Hospital officials said Saturday that Tam normally worked in one of the hospital's satellite clinics and was covering a shift in the main hospital as a favor to someone else. Adding to the chaos, authorities said, was a fire alarm that went off when Bello attempted to set himself ablaze, the flames extinguished by sprinklers, shortly before he shot himself. ## In final stages of Mosul fight, US plays larger role

Associated Press

MOSUL, IRAQ The day after Iraq's prime minister declared an end to the Islamic State group's caliphate, U.S. Army Col. Pat Work and a small team of about a dozen soldiers drove through western Mosul in two unmarked armored vehicles to warn Iraqi forces of a pressing threat: friendly fire.

The American colonel had a series of urgent faceto-face meetings with generals from the Iraqi Army, the federal police and the Iraqi special forces ahead of a major offensive Saturday morning to drive out the remaining IS positions in Mosul.

American troops are taking on an increasingly prominent role in the fight. Once largely restricted to working within highly fortified Iraqi bases, U.S. commanders now travel in and around Mosul with small teams of soldiers, sharing intelligence and advising plans of attack, revealing how the U.S. role in Iraq has steadily deepened throughout the operation to retake the country's second-largest city.

The gains in the Old City bringing Iraqi troops closer to victory against IS in Mosul have also meant the three branches of the country's security forces are now fighting in closer quarters than ever before.

The U.S.-led coalition's fight against IS in Iraq has slowly expanded over the past three years from a campaign of airstrikes carried out by coalition forces who largely stayed within heavily fortified bases to an operation with some 6,000 American troops on the ground, many operating close to frontline fighting. The evolution suggests that despite a large training program designed to generate enough soldiers to retake Mosul, Coalition officials assessed Iraqi forces lacked the tactical skills to conduct the operation without close support.

Youngstown city schools moving in right direction

T HAS BEEN A YEAR OF DRAMATIC change in the Youngstown School District, orchestrated in large part by Chief Executive Officer Krish Mohip. Mohip, a veteran public school educator from Chicago, was hired 12 months ago by the special academic distress commission to guide the system out of statemandated academic watch - a small step up from the initial designation of academic emergency.

Mohip has been on a roller coaster ride since he came to Youngstown, and is only now beginning to master the twists and turns of saving a dying school system.

"No one could've prepared me for what I was walking into, and I admit I was a little optimistic while doing my strategic plan with the fast time line to get it done, but the goals are still right and are just dependent upon us," the CEO told The Vindicator in a year-inreview interview.

What he walked into was the epitome of public-education dysfunction. The administration was in tatters, morale among principals and teachers was at an all-time low, students were amassing F's in state tests in unprecedented numbers and an unacceptably large number of parents chose to disconnect from the schools.

As Tom Humphries, Youngstown/ Warren Regional Chamber president and CEO, put it, "For the first year, [Mohip's] done an outstanding job considering the circumstances and the challenges he's been faced with - walking in from another state into that role."

Humphries was one of the business and community leaders who determined that the Youngstown district was in need of a major overhaul. The eight-member group joined forces with the Ohio Department of Education to develop the Youngstown Plan, which was the basis of House Bill 70. The law went into effect in 2016.

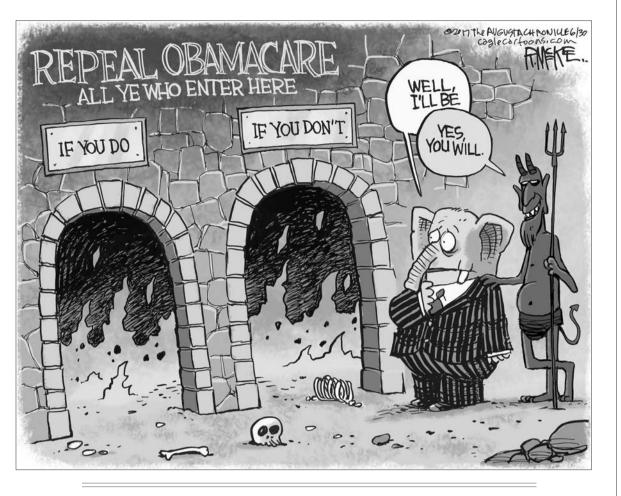

The appointment of the Youngstown School District Academic Distress Commission and its hiring of Mohip set the stage for the changes that are being implemented.

ACADEMIC RECOVERY PLAN

A three-year academic recovery plan developed by the CEO in the first 90 days of his tenure and approved by the commission and the state is the blueprint for change.

Just about every aspect of the system is undergoing scrutiny, but the most dramatic move involves the return of neighborhood schools. The aim is to ensure that students throughout the city have the same academic opportunities and programs, and to engender parental participation.

Great work if you can get it

Bertram

How would you like to get paid for 40 hours a week even though you work only 32.5 hours?

In the private sector, such a question would be dismissed as nonsensical. After all, no legitimate employer will pay an employee for 7.5 hours a week for doing nothing.

But in the public sector especially government – that scenario is played out more often than taxpayers imagine.

Your tax dollars at (non) work, so to speak. Case in point.

The Trumbull County Budget Review Committee, which was appointed by the commissioners to analyze government's revenues and expenditures, made 19 recommendations, including this one:

'Revise the current workday schedule of 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. with a one-hour paid lunch and two, 15-minute breaks, resulting in 6.5 hours of work for 8 hours of pay."

It's not hard to imagine the reaction of the 12 members of the committee when they reviewed the labor contracts and discovered that gem.

Indeed, seeing it in print - The Vindicator on June 3 detailed the committee's recommendations - must have made county Commissioners Daniel Polivka, Frank Fuda and Mauro Cantalamessa cringe.

How do elected officials explain to their economically hard-pressed constituents that county employees are being paid for hours they do not work?

TALKING POINTS

Polivka, Fuda and Cantalamessa would do well to fashion their talking points from what the budget review committee wrote: "Salaries and other payroll related expenditures are the largest expense for the county's general fund. "The TCBRC recommends that Trumbull County's .... policies be reviewed and revised in a manner consistent with statewide standards for communities comparable in terms of unemployment, household income, property values, poverty levels, etc. Where applicable, these policies should be aligned in a manner consistent with what is minimally required by statute.'

The reconfiguration also involves the two high schools, Chaney and East, which will offer the same programs, including STEM and visual/performing arts.

The district has been split into two high school regions, with students leaving eighth grade going to either Chaney or East.

Mohip has gone to great lengths to assure parents and students that both high schools will have the same commitment to safety and discipline.

In addition to reorganizing the schools, Mohip has conducted in-depth evaluations of the administrative and teaching staffs, upgraded curricula and reached out to the community,

But it's not all peaches and cream.

The teachers union is pushing back on the CEO's desire to give teachers a raise because it means reopening the current contract. The union leadership does not believe Mohip when he says he wants to deal with only the wage issue and will not make any other changes.

He also is still getting pushback from the Youngstown Board of Education, which has been marginalized as a result of the Youngstown Plan. The elected members have no governing authority and only play an advisory role.

However, Mohip told The Vindicator that one of his goals for his second year is to open more lines of communication between the administration and the board.

But despite the accomplishments in his first year as CEO, there remains the issue of the state standardized tests and how well Youngstown students will perform.

It is unrealistic to expect a major improvement in the test scores this year. A move in the right direction will reassure the public. However, failure will not be an option next year.

Mohip has his work cut out for him.

Living in fear of GOP health plan

Tribune News Service

The harshest impacts of the GOP's Obamacare repeal legislation will be felt by those Americans who are already the most vulnerable.

Individuals and families who needmaternitycare,emergency services, or mental-health care treatment will no longer have those services guaranteed. Twenty million Americans who rely on the Medicaid services they receive under Obamacare risk returning to the frightened lives they led in the past.

I know what that's like, having spent most of my life as an uninsured man. I remember when health care services and the ability to obtain prescription drugs depended primarily on state funding and state law. Some states provided low income service; some provided minimal services, or none.

But then, under Obamacare, 22 states expanded access to Medicaid. Since 2012, I have been enrolled in a Medicaid plan that has provided quick access to check-ups, prescription drugs and cancer treatment (which I need).

The thought of going back? It's unimaginable. I am among the 20 million Americans

> Three weeks after the presidential election, I met with my care coordinator, Lois, who works for UnitedHealthcare, my Medicaid provider.

I have a history of extraordinarily high blood pressure and issues with kidney and prostate cancer. Lois checks in every three or four months to see if I have been taking my medications and if I have any new health issues. She appraises how she can help.

Lois' job is to provide preventive care and give people like me some sense of confidence and normalcy with regard to our health issues. Her position was created by Obamacare, which has pioneered a more holistic approach to health.

During a recent check-in, Lois went through her usual questionnaire. "Have you been having mobility issues?" "Have vou been anxious, or stressed?' Usually I answer with a nonchalant "nope." But this time, I blurted out, "So this is all going to end soon, I guess."

Lois' expression was overtaken with worry. "I just can't believe that could happen," she told me. "He can't leave 20 million people without health care.

Now it looks as though the answer to that question is, "Yes, he can."

In early May, the House passed an Obamacare repeal bill, which polls showed is hugely unpopular. Even President Donald Trump eventually acknowledged that the bill, shepherded through by Speaker Paul Ryan, a Republican from Wisconsin, was "mean."

GOP senators promised a better bill and hammered one out in secret. Democratic Sen. Chuck Schumer of New York said the Republicans kept their bill "under the cover of darkness because they're ashamed of it, plain and simple."

And no wonder. The version, as we all now know, includes no substantial improvements on the House bill.

Twenty-two million lowincome Americans who received care during the Obama years have been returned to a situation of fear and insecurity. The Republicans have seemed unmoved by appeals to their sense of decency. We cannot allow this to stand.

The current collective bargaining agreements require Trumbull County to pay up to 90 percent of the *em*ployee's (emphasis added) portion of the Ohio Public Employees Retirement System (PERS) contribution.

The committee is recommending that management and bargaining units collaborate to eliminate all taxpayer contributions to employee portions.

In layman's terms, the workers are getting a free ride for their retirement benefits.

 Management should assess the present policy on sick-leave payout upon retirement and reduce it to no more than the statutorily required amount. It should also review the vacation time conversion policy. Management should work towards the elimination of all contractual language pertaining to health insurance, including premiums, copayments and deductibles.

The committee members believe that such a move would serve to develop employee awareness of the growing costs and impending challenges regarding health-care coverage.

ofAnimals around the world travel to Pamplona, Spain, because they have the time and money to run with the bulls. But before these tourists even board their flights to head back home, the bulls they ran with are dead. What most revelers don't realize is that the bull runs are simply a prelude to the daily bullfights in which, one-by-one, bulls are stabbed to death in the city's bullfighting arena.

I was an infantry soldier in the U.S. Army. I grew up eating meat and never gave animal rights a second thought. But one day, while I was still serving, I attended a friend's wedding. Outside the host's home, there was a friendly stray cat who, I learned, the host intended to shoot. I sneaked the cat into the barracks until I could get him safely to my parents' house.

Something had clicked inside me. If I cared so much about this cat, I asked fused by the frenzy of the myself, what about other run – is led into the bull-animals in trouble? Every pattern that I had clung to began to fall away. I've been Every year, people from vegan for almost two years, and my only regret is that I didn't make the switch sooner.

Running for, not with, the bulls

This evolution in my thinking is why I will be attending the Running of the Bulls – not to run with them but for them.

MEDIA SPIN

The media spin this event as a contest of courage, but the deck is stacked against the bulls before they even step foot on Pamplona's cobblestone streets. The bulls are kept in corrals and released when rockets are let off, frightening and disorienting them. During the run, they must flee through streets filled with screaming crowds of drunken revelers who often prod them with sticks and rolled up newspapers. They careen into each other and often slip, fall and smash into buildings.

Every night, each bull – already exhausted and confighting arena. The torture begins when men on horses repeatedly stab him with brightly colored darts called banderillas, until he is dizzy, weakened from blood loss and enduring agonizing pain. The matador (Spanish for "killer") comes in only when the bull is already near death. His ears and tail may be cut off as sadistic "trophies" before his body is dragged from the arena.

People around the world, including many Spaniards, are condemning this blood sport. But those who travel to Pamplona to participate in the Running of the Bulls help perpetuate the carnage.

Bullfighting is one of the most reprehensible acts committed against animals in Europe today. How can there be sport when one party can never win or even choose to participate? Bullfighting needs to be consigned to the history books, and my mission is to make this a reality.

Two of the most prized items of Babe Ruth memorabilia - both owned by actor Charlie Sheen sold for more than $2 million each at auction.

Ruth's 1927 World Series ring had a winning bid of $2,093,927 at the first Lelands.com Invitational Auction. The 1919 contract of Ruth's sale from the Red Sox to the Yankees went for $2,303,320. Both started with bids of $100,000.

Leland's said the winning bidders had not come forward as of Saturday. Earlier in the week, Sheen revealed himself as previous owner.

"These record-breaking prices show once again that Babe Ruth dominates the baseball auction world the same way he did the game," Lelands.com founder and chairman Josh Evans said.

The five-page contract is the Yankees' copy that Barry Halper once purchased from former owner Jacob Ruppert's estate. That Ruppert copy was sold to Sheen in 2005 and hasn't changed hands until now.

There were three copies of the Ruth contract. The Red Sox copy was sold for $996,000 to a Yankees fan during an auction at Sotheby's in 2005. The American

Thomas wins first stage of Tour de France DUESSELDORF, GERMANY

Chris Froome's most loyal support rider finally got some glory of his own.

Geraint Thomas won the wet and slippery opening stage of the Tour de France on Saturday and claimed the yellow jersey.

It was the first Grand Tour stage victory for Thomas, who has escorted Sky teammate Froome to Paris for three Tour victories.

Thomas took just over 16 minutes to cover the almost entirely flat 14-kilometer (8.7-mile) individual time trial up and down the banks of the Rhine River in downtown Duesseldorf.

Stefan Kueng finished second, five seconds behind, and Vasil Kiryienka was third, seven seconds back.

Froome finished sixth, 12 seconds behind, and gained time on all of his expected challengers. He finished about 40 seconds ahead of Richie Porte and Nairo Ouintana.

US Men beat Ghana in Gold Cup warmup EAST HARTFORD, CONN.

Dom Dwyer scored in his international debut, joining Sydney Leroux to become the first husband-and-wife couple with goals for the United States, and the Americans beat Ghana 2-1 on Saturday in an exhibition ahead of the CONCACAF Gold Cup.

A 26-year-old English forward who gained American citizenship in March, Dwyer put the Americans ahead in the 19th minute with an acrobatic volley.

Brad Guzan saved Asamoah Gyan's penalty kick in first-half stoppage time, and Kellyn Acosta added his first international goal in the 52nd minute on a low free kick from just outside the penalty area that went through the wall and in on a bounce past goalkeeper Richard Ofori.

OAKLAND, CALIF. One of the NBA's biggest bargains until now, Stephen Curry is about to receive his massive payday.

Golden State general manager Bob Myers said Friday

two time MVP once the free agency moratorium ends Thursday.

The champion Warriors confirmed that in an email to The Associated Press on Friday night.

"We intend to enter into a Player Contract with Stephen once the Moratorium Period ends," Myers said.

Curry's agent, Jeff Austin of Octagon Sports, first told ESPN that the deal will be worth $201 million over five vears, a record for the NBA. Austin didn't immediately return emails from AP.

Curry, who won the MVP in 2015 and '16 and earned $12 million this season, averaged 28.1 points in the playoffs while also contributing 6.7 assists and 6.2 rebounds. He said when the season ended he was looking forward to receiving a hefty raise while still focused on a team-first approach as he, Kevin Durant and the others try to build a dynasty after capturing the franchise's second title in three years against LeBron James and the Cavaliers.

Swiss star about to begin pursuit of eighth Wimbledon title

Associated Press

LONDON Write off Roger Federer at your own peril.

The guy's been considered done by some folks at various times over the years, whether because of age or a bad back or a bum knee or a — gasp! —  $4^{1/2}$ -season drought without a Grand Slam title.

And yet here he is, about to turn 36 next month, about to tie a record by playing in his 70th major tournament and, lo and behold, back to his old status as a popular pick to take home the title when Wimbledon begins on Monday.

He is seeking an unprecedented eighth men's championship at the All England Club.

"A player like Roger, as long as he's playing, you know, he's going to have a chance to win a Grand Slam. The day he will stop playing, that's when he will have no chance to win," said Stan Wawrinka, a three-time major champion who has played much of his career in his Swiss countryman's considerable shadow.

"We all know as players, we all see on the court, we all see when we practice against him," said Wawrinka, who is friends with Federer and has teamed with him to win a Davis Cup title and an Olympic gold in doubles.

he consulted with several doctors. Federer figured he would need a month off, maybe two. He was told that at least four months off was the proper way to heal. That meant no Olympics, no U.S. Open, no matches at all for years (that January. That was Federer's first major championship since Wimbledon in 2012, when he was a mere 30 years old.

Some more time off would come during this season: Federer skipped the claycourt circuit, including the French Open, despite being healthy.

"I was ready to play in Paris," he said. "Í just dídn't feel ready to go yet."

Federer wanted, he explained, to give himself the best chance to succeed on his best surfaces, grass and hard courts.

'We all felt the same way, that it's better to save myself and give it all I have for the rest of the season - not just the grass-court season, but looking beyond that, too, all the way to the American summer, staying on a 'fastcourt tennis' sort of mindset," he said.

Leaning back in his chair with arms crossed, he said of missing the French Open: "I kind of never regretted it, even though it hurt.

He tuned up for Wimbledon by winning a grasscourt tournament in Halle, Germany. In the final, he walloped one of the game's up-and-coming talents — Alexander Zverev, someone 15 years his junior — as if to prove that the kids can wait their turn.

Tennis' old guard is still in charge of the sport.

FLORIDA PANTHERS tandem.

Team releases veteran Jagr

Making official what was suspected for some time, the Panthers revealed Saturday that they are going forward without the future sure-fire Hall of Fame forward Jaromir Jagr. On a day dominated by free-agent signings - like adding forwards Evgeny Dadonov, Radim Vrbata and Micheal Haley - the biggest news out of Florida was that Jagr is no longer in the Panthers' plans. "I can't say enough. It was an honor to be touched by a legend," said general manager Dale Tallon, who ultimately made the call to move on. "I was torn. It was a tough couple weeks, or months, whatever it was. Can't thank him enough. What he did for our kids, for myself and everyone in this organization, you can't measure it."

Jagr was with the Panthers for 2<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> seasons. He'll turn 46 next season, still wants to play and is coming off a 46-point season for a Florida team that wasn't exactly loaded with offensive weaponry. But in the end, a person with direct knowledge of the negotiations told The Associated Press, the two sides were simply too far apart on financial terms to make any more talks feasible.

ANAHEIM DUCKS Fowler, Miller

sign out west

Cam Fowler agreed to an eight-year, $52 million contract extension with the Ducks on Saturday, keeping the cornerstone defenseman with the club through the 2025-26 season. Ryan Miller agreed to a two-year, $4 million deal to leave Vancouver for the Ducks as a free agent, teaming with John Gibson in Anaheim's goaltending

Fowler has been a fixture on the Ducks' blue line ever since he unexpectedly fell to them at No. 12 overall in the 2010 draft, and the Ducks now can keep the U.S. Olympian through the prime of his career. He was outstanding last season, excelling on both ends of the ice while racking up 11 goals and 28 assists.

CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS

Sharp returns on one-year deal

Patrick Sharp figured he would return to Chicago. He just wasn't sure he would play for the Blackhawks again.

Sharp, a high-scoring winger who helped them win three Stanley Cup championships before getting traded, will once again suit up for Chicago next season. The 35-yearold veteran agreed Saturday to a one-year contract that guarantees $800,000. He could earn an additional $200,000 in incentives.

Sharp said he could have signed for more money elsewhere. But the lure of returning to the team where he enjoyed his greatest success was too strong.

Sharp spent 10 seasons with the Blackhawks from 2005 to 2015 and had 511 points, including 239 goals. He scored more than 30 goals four times in that span and helped transform Chicago into one of the most successful franchises.

Sharp got dealt to Dallas in a salary cap move after the Blackhawks beat Tampa Bay for the championship in 2015.

He has 277 goals and 322 assists in 14 years with Philadelphia, Chicago and the Stars. But he had seasonending hip surgery in March after missing most of December because of a concussion and finished with just eight goals and 10 assists.

J.J. Redick made his intentions for next season clear with three simple words.

"Trust the process," he tweeted.

In the NBA these days, that only means one thing.

Redick agreed on a $23 million, one-year deal with the Philadelphia 76ers on Saturday, according to a person with direct knowledge of the negotiations. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because nothing can become finalized until the NBA's summer moratorium is lifted on Thursday.

the whole game."

Those fastballs were coming in as quickly as 84 mph according to the radar gun of a Kent State scout who was sitting behind home plate. Larimer, a 2017 high school graduate, will walk on with the Golden Flashes this upcoming season.

SBA pitcher Nick Bensen hung with Larimer for much of the game until the wheels came off in the sixth inning. With the Falcons leading 1-0 after one of Anderson's RBI doubles in the first inning, Noah Laster led off the sixth with an infield single.

Dylan Rotz walked and after a fielder's choice to get Laster at third, Anthony Michalski was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

Brendon Myers hit a slow roller toward second baselowing just one run to score instead of two. It became a moot point the next batter though when Rock singled in two runs to bust the game open at 4-0.

'The second and third times through our kids saw [Bensen] a little bit," Timko said. "He did a good job. A break here or there and it might have been a different ball game."

One of those breaks came in the first inning when SBA had runners on first and second with one out. Kyle Campbell ripped a line drive that was sure to get into right field but it struck baserunner man Matt Cos- Anthony Coffi in fair territory. By rule, Coffi was out and the ball was dead. Larimer struck out the next hitter to end the threat.

With Larimer holding a four-run lead in the later innings, that lead easily could have felt like double digits.

"I knew I had my teammates behind me and they're a good defense," Larimer said.

The win pushes Astro Falcons to 14-2, comfortably in first place in the Cene Division with the best record in Class B. SBA saw its twogame win streak snapped, falling to 4-12.

'The played us tough last time too," Timko said. "We only won by [three] last time. Any time you have a morning game and they have a decent pitcher like they had on the mound [it'll be close].

'But they didn't have everything Wyatt had.'

ley Cup championship for a second consecutive season, general manager Jim Rutherford told the Penguins' pending free agents to test the market and report back if they want to return.

There's not much room at the inn and it turns out that the Penguins will look very different as they try for a three-peat next season. As free agency opened Saturday, Pittsburgh signed defenseman Matt Hunwick and goaltender Antti Niemi but lost winger Chris Kunitz, center Nick Bonino and defensemen Trevor Daley and Ron Hainsey.

Arguably the Penguins most important move came late in the day when the re-signed restricted free agent defenseman Justin Schultz to a $16.5 million, three-year deal with an annual cap hit of $5.5 million. Rutherford said locking up Schultz was a priority.

Schultz is sticking around, but Bonino saw change coming with veteran goaltender Marc-Andre Fleury taken in the expansion draft by Vegas and 40-year-old center Matt Cullen mulling retirement. "It's tough leaving the Penguins, for sure, but it seems like a lot of the guys I was really close with whether it was Cully, Kuni, Flower, Dales — guys like that are kind of going their own way," said Bonino, who signed a $16.4 million, Hunwick got a three-year deal worth $6.75 million for an annual cap hit of $2.25 million, while Niemi signed a one-year deal at $700,000. Hunwick, 32, will help replace Daley as a right-shooting defenseman and Niemi will back up Matt Murray.

Kunitz signed a one-year deal worth $2 million with incentives from Tampa Bay, Daley left for a $9.5 million, three-year deal in Detroit and Hainsey for a $6 million, two-year deal in Toronto.

Daley said as much as he enioved his time in Pittsburgh, he was excited when the Red Wings reached out to him and expressed an interest in having him be a key part of their efforts to get back to the playoffs. He called joining Detroit "a no-brainer."

Hunwick spent the past two seasons with the Toronto Maple Leafs and is a veteran of 479 NHL games. Niemi, who won the Stanley Cup with the Chicago Blackhawks in 2010, had been with the Dallas Stars before they bought out the final year of his contract.

Rutherford said the Penguins, who still need to sign restricted free agent defenseman Brian Dumoulin and forwards Conor Sheary and Josh Archibald, aren't in a salary-cap crunch this offseason.

Keep things moving, light with bad golfers

I played in an outing last week and - without naming names — a friend of mine thought that "playing with bad golfers" would be a good topic to write about. So why not?

My friend's suggestion was along the lines of how to keep your patience when playing with someone who is struggling to make double bogeys.

I've thought about that for a while, and I actually think this is a good topic to address

We all like playing with our buddies. And I'm a big believer that playing with people better than yourself makes you better in the long run.

But what happens when we end up playing with someone who just can't find the club face?

How do we prevent a cart partner's 113 from affecting our possible 72?

Well, it depends on how well you can compartmentalize within your own brain.

Golf is a mental challenge. With sometimes minutes between shots, we golfers have an infinite amount of negative thoughts to keep out of the main frame when it's our turn to hit. Remembering the good shots while blocking the bad ones is a key to playing good golf. So watching someone in your own group hit three straight shanks certainly makes staying positive even harder.

My suggestions are:

One, help as much as possible before it starts to affect

you. And two, try to keep it fun.

Personally, I'm not a huge fan of giving tips on the course. I think giving a player another swing thought to consider only slows things down. But I do think it's important to help move a struggling player along. Follow their shots. Help find a vardage. Fill in a divot. Maybe even rake a sandtrap. Anything you can do to help keep play moving-until it detracts from your own game. If you find you're spending all your time caddying instead of playing, you're being too nice.

The other thing I like to do is try to lighten the mood. No one likes to play bad golf. And we all know how one bad shot can lead to two more. Having been there myself, I know the extra pressure one can place on himself after hitting a number of bad shots in a row. Multiple that by a number of consecutive holes and it gets hard to pull the trigger.

That's where a little mood reset can go a long way. Personally, I'm a joke fan. I always try to have one or two in my mind that I can use when needed. But it can be a funny story or a golf anecdote. Heck, maybe even a new press for a side bet. Anything to help get the struggling player to take a few breaths and reset their own mind.

The key is, do what you can to help bring the player back to where they were on the first tee - ready for some fun on a golf course. one-on-one with Perry.

The two matched each other birdie for birdie and were tied on the 18th, when Perry wound up in the rough above and to the left of the pin. He chipped it past the hole and down a ridge but was able to leave himself a tap-in for bogey. "I think what we probably both wanted to accomplish today was to get some cushion on the field," Triplett said.

"Kenny hit a lot of good shots. He and I were just, I think, trying to keep pace with each other more so than the guys behind us."

Brandt Jobe matched the tournament record with a 62 — the same score that Triplett had on Thursday - shooting 29 on the back nine to move into third. Fred Couples and Tom Lehman each shot 70 to head into the final round at Salem Country Club tied for fourth, at 7 under.

After two days of low scores — each round has set a low cumulative record the wind picked up on Saturday afternoon and made the 6,815-yard, Donald Ross-designed course more of a challenge.

That is, for everyone except Perry and Triplett, who were the only two players in the last seven twosomes to come in under par.

Triplett holed out from a bunker for an eagle on the 525-yard sixth hole, but made his only bogey of the day on No. 7. Perry also gave up a shot on the seventh to remain tied for the lead until Triplett chipped in again on No. 9.

"I've always been what I consider a reasonable to very good chipper," Triplett said.

"I don't think they're going to go in all the time, but I'm not that surprised when they do.'

Perry fell two behind but closed the gap and tied it up with a 30-foot putt on No. 16 that left Triplett muttering to himself and the crowd. "I just said that Kenny Perry is not a very nice man," he said with a smile.

Bernhard Langer started three strokes off the lead in his attempt to win a third straight senior major. But he was one of those hurt by the afternoon wind, shooting 72 and finishing the day at nine back.

He said the two leaders seem to be feeding off each other's success.

"It's phenomenal how they play," Langer said.

under after the best round of the day, a 65. There was little wind Saturday, and the greens were softened by a thunderstorm that caused a 90-minute delay, but TPC Potomac played as difficult as ever.

KPMG WOMEN'S PGA CHAMPIONSHIP OLYMPIA FIELDS, ILL.

When the wind picked up in the afternoon and the sun beat down on Olympia Fields, Chella Choi delivered a smart, steady performance. The kind that wins major championships. Choi shot a 4-under 67 on Saturday to grab a share of the lead with Danielle Kang heading into the final round of the KPMG Women's PGA Championship. Kang birdied No. 18 to join Choi at 10 under, setting up a final pairing of two players looking for their first major title. Jiyai Shin rocketed up the leaderboard with a 64, the best round of the day and good enough for third all by herself at 8 under. Defending champion Brooke Henderson was another stroke back after a 69.

FRENCH OPEN GUYANCOURT, FRANCE

Swedish golfer Alexander Biork shot a 1-under 70 to share the lead with Peter Uihlein of the United States at 8 under after a difficult third round of the French Open on Saturday. Bjork moved into contention after making three birdies on the way back to the clubhouse, after two bogeys on the front nine. Uihlein was consistent but unspectacular, opening with a bogey and canceling that out with a birdie on the 14th hole for a par 71 to keep his overnight score. Uihlein has won once on the European Tour, in 2013. Bjork seeks his maiden victory. Englishman Tommy Fleetwood, who was level in third place with Bjork overnight, made par to stay one shot behind in a share of third heading to the final round on the Golf National course that will stage the Ryder Cup next year. NASCAR CUP SERIES

Ricky Stenhouse Jr. wins crash-filled race DAYTONA BEACH. FLA.

Ricky Stenhouse Jr. raced to his second victory of the season - and second on a restrictor-plate track - Saturday night at Daytona International Speedway.

Stenhouse picked up his first career NACAR Cup Series win in May at Talladega.

He earned this one for Roush Fenway Racing on a two-lap overtime sprint when leader David Ragan tried to block the field and lost momentum. Stenhouse squirted by and held on for the victory.

Clint Bowyer was second, followed by Paul Menard, Michael McDowell, Ryan Newman and Ragan.

Brendan Gaughan, AJ Allmendinger, Erik Jones and Chris Buescher rounded out a bizarre top 10. Many of the top contenders were knocked out in accidents, including Stenhouse's girlfriend, Danica Patrick.

She also was out of the race when he won at Talladega.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. scraped the wall in a race billed as his final Cup Series start at Daytona. NASCAR's most popular driver felt like his right rear tire was going flat as he entered a turn, started to slow and then brushed the wall and flattened the right front tire.

He made his way to pit row, but lost two laps while getting repairs. The damage likely will end Earnhardt's chances of picking up his 18th career victory at the famed speedway. Earnhardt was the pole-sitter and overwhelming favorite to win the race. He clearly had one of the fastest cars in the field and spent much of the first two stages up front.

Earnhardt announced in April that this would be his final full-time season in NASCAR's top series. He plans to drive a handful of races in the second-tier Xfinity Series, but has not committed to running at Daytona again.

NASCAR XFINITY SERIES

William Byron wins second straight race DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.

William Byron got his second win of the season, and this time he got to do it in front of his bosses. Byron won his second consecutive Xfinity Series race on Saturday by leading a 1-2 finish at Daytona International Speedway for JR Motorsports. Byron raced to his first career Xfinity victory last weekend at lowa, but team owners Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Rick Hendrick weren't at the track to see him.

This time, Hendrick was the first person to the window of his car in victory lane. The 19-year-old became the youngest series winner at Daytona. He used a push from teammate Elliott Sadler to clear the traffic on the restart. Byron was aided when Erik Jones was knocked out of line, and it gave Byron a clear lead. An accident behind the lead pack caused the race to end under yellow.

Mets 7, Phillies 6

NEW YORK
Asdrubal Cabrera hit a go-ahead homer on his bobblehead day, part of a four-run rally in the seventh inning that carried the Mets past the Phillies. The Mets overcame three errors and a shaky start by Zack Wheeler in his return from the disabled list to win their second straight against Philadelphia.

Brewers 8, Marlins 4

MILWAUKEE

Domingo Santana hit a two-run homer off Giancarlo Stanton's glove, sparking a seven-run second inning that lifted Milwaukee over Miami. Santana tied it with a home run to right off Tom Koehler (1-3), who walked Travis Shaw to start the second. Stanton jumped and got the tip of his mitt on the ball, but it bounced off and fell into the seats.

Reds 5, Cubs 3

CINCINNATI

Right-hander Jackson Stephens lasted five innings in his major league debut and drove in the goahead runs with a bases-loaded single to lead the Reds over the struggling Cubs. The Cubs' fourth loss in five games dropped them to 40-41, well off their pace from a year ago (51-30) when they were on their way to an NL Central title and a World Series championship.

Cardinals 2, Nationals 1

ST. LOUIS

Alex Meija's first two major league hits – including an eighth-inning home run - were the difference as the Cardinals defeated the Nationals. The Cardinals have won four straight and six of their last seven. Washington, which is the only team in the National League yet to be shut out this season, has lost three straight and five of their last seven.

INTERLEAGUE

Braves 4, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, CALIF.

Dansby Swanson hit a tiebreaking double off closer Santiago Casilla in the ninth inning to drive in Danny Santana — one of two unearned runs scored by Atlanta and the Braves held on to beat Oakland.

Everyone would agree that Geir Helgemo, from Norway, is one of the world's best players. He was South, in today's deal. North-South would have defeated the four spade contract providing they took three heart tricks before giving up the lead. Helgemo's light response caused his partner to compete to five diamonds. There were two top trump losers and the clubs would have to be played for no losers lie of the cards.

Helgemo ruffed the opening spade lead, led a heart to dummy's queen, and ruffed dummy's last spade. He cashed the ace and king of hearts before crossing to dummy with the ace of clubs. The queen of diamonds was led, hoping to induce a cover by East should he hold king doubleton, but East won with the ace perforce. East was down to all black cards and chose to lead a spade rather than a club into dummy, not that it mattered. Helgemo ruffed in dummy while shedding a club from his hand.

Another trump was led to West's king, and it was his turn to suffer. West was also forced to yield a ruff-sluff and another club was discarded by Helgemo as dummy ruffed. Five diamonds bid and made -- magical!

You may have heard the phrase: "Just because a contract is hopeless is no reason to go down in it". We don't think Helgemo wrote that phrase, he just lives by it.

Girl power: TV, films break out young, new action stars

By SANDY COHEN AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES

From the murderous Laura in "Logan" to the mysterious Eleven in "Stranger Things" to the audacious determination of Mija in "Okja," which opened Wednes-day, powerful young girls are starring in mainstream action fare like never before.

Though Nancy Drew was solv-ing mysteries in the 1930s and Buffy slayed vampires all through high school in the late 1990s, young girls are rarely shown as heroes in programs aimed at general audiences, said Mary Celeste Kearney, director of gender stud-ies and a professor of film, television and theater at University of Notre Dame.

mainstream stuff and what their brothers and their dads and boys are watching, those girls are nev-er there," Kearney said. "And now they are, and that's huge.

It means girls don't have to look to grown-up heroes such as Kat-niss Everdeen in "The Hunger Games" or Rey in "Star Wars: The Force Awakens." Like 10-year-old Elliot on the flying bicycle in "E.T. the Extraterrestrial," girls are having awesome genre adventures as powerful young kids onscreen. The Duffer Brothers said gen-

"Eleven was the centerpiece of the show for us always and was always gothe lab ... I think we liked the idea because it wasn't something we had seen before.'

A second little girl is joining the cast for the show's second season, which premieres Oct. 31.

TV provides nonpartisan offerings for July 4

By LYNN ELBER AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES Happy nonpartisan Fourth of July!

In this rancorous political environment, America's birthday is a chance for people to leave the verbal fireworks aside, at least briefly, and understand and appreciate what they've got.

TV, which typically revels in left-right shouting matches, instead is cooperating with shows that help do just that - among them an unusual documentary from Emmy-winning documentarian Alexandra Pelosi.

HBO's "The Words That Built America" (7 p.m. EDT Tuesday) offers an unabridged reading of the Declaration of Independence, the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights by politicians of all stripes, celebrities and even kids.

Chuck Prystash, Peggie Prystash and CJ Prystash show off some of the breakfast dishes offered at their Landmark restaurants in Boardman and Austintown. Landmark was recently named by readers of The Vindicator as one of the best in the area.

Vindicator's readers voted it as one of the best restaurants in the Mahoning Valley through a social media poll.

"We are people persons," said Chuck Prystash, co-owner of Landmark at 7424 Market St., directly across from Southern Park Mall; and also 109 S. Meridian Road. "We treat customers like family. We joke around with them."

"They feel comfortable coming here," added Peggie

Prystash, Chuck's wife and co-owner of the business.

On a busy morning at Landmark's Boardman location, a group of gentlemen await for their" table to open up.

They often come to Landmark on Wednesdays for the coffee and the conversation. The conversation ebbs and flows from politics to sports and maybe some local gossip.

It's a comfortable atmosphere with good coffee, good food and good service – the waitresses and waiters here know to have certain tables venture to say ready for certain guests. The that's why The servers also remember the orders for their usual customers.

"It's the hospitality," Bob Stefko of Poland says why the group enjoys Landmark

'They have good breakfast," added Bob Sherwood of Boardman. Landmark is a mostly breakfast and lunch joint.

Chuck and his late stepfather, Donald Folkwein, decided to go into the restaurant business together back in the early 2000s.

Landmark Restaurant is known for its comfortable atmosphere and tasty comfort food. The restaurant specializes in a solid breakfast.

As the daughter of House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi, the filmmaker sees the partisan divide firsthand. The especially bitter 2016 presidential election inspired her and Sheila Nevins, who runs HBO's documentary unit, to develop the inclusive project.

The film is brief, 45 minutes, and simply executed: Facing the camera solo, each person reads a self-selected passage from one of the documents. Participants include President Donald Trump and his five living Oval Office predecessors; U.S. senators, congressmen, Supreme Court justices and, among the stars, Samuel L. Jackson, Robert De Niro, Meryl Streep and Common.

Author David McCullough provides historical context with a spare narration.

"The Constitution is the rulebook for how this country operates" and provides a framework to assess what's happening in government now, Pelosi said.

"Maybe if people were forced the read the document and how the system works, they wouldn't say half the things that come out of their mouths on cable

Are you cut out for a work-from-home job?

By COURTNEY JESPERSEN NerdWallet

Telecommuting has become synonymous with convenience, flexible schedules and, yes, pajamas. You don't have to commute, spend money on transportation or dress up. But despite the appeal and laid-back reputation, there are challenges.

'Not everybody is cut out for working from home,' says Jack Aiello, a psychology professor at Rutgers University. From your work style to your work space, here's what to consider before working You'll want to discuss your schedule as well. You may work more efficiently in a position that allows for time at home as well as in the office.

Gallup's State of the American Workplace report found that employees who spend at least some of their time working remotely have higher engagement than employees who never work remotely. The magic formula for engagement nappens when employees spend 60 percent to 80 percent of their time working off-site, the report found. Solis says it's important to build in time for face-to-face contact. "I think it's good to show your face," she says. "It's good to see your coworkers. It's good to feel connected. It's good to feel part of a community of work."

Eventually, the dinner

keep the restaurant open later than 3 p.m. The heavy focus on breakfast has earned Landmark for its healthy supply of doughnuts, which are made fresh at the Austintown location.

"We have people come through to get some on their way to South Carolina," Peggie said. "I have people who mail them."

YOUR PERSONALITY

from home.

Certain personalities make effective at-home employees.

"Above all else, two things are required to be a successful work-at-homer: the ability to be a self-directed, focused planner and a healthy dose of introversion," Kit Yarrow, a consumer psychologist and professor emeritus at Golden Gate University in San Francisco, said in an email

Yarrow says extroverted workers prefer more person-to-person contact than many at-home jobs provide.

Telecommuters interact less with co-workers than their workplace counterparts. That solitude can be hard for those who are sociable. Aiello savs.

But don't count yourselves out, social butterflies. Yarrow says personalities aren't black and white. The "mildly extroverted" can make teleASSOCIATED PRESS commuting work if they watching Netflix, some telehave an after-work social life, for instance. Renting a co-working space can also provide a social outlet for remote employees.

YOUR ENVIRONMENT

If you live with other people, Aiello says, it's essential to have a separate space where you won't be interrupted. You need at least a door that closes you off from the rest of the house.

Be realistic about potential distractions.

And while society may paint a picture of at-home workers on the couch bingecommuters have a tendency to work too much because they never leave their work environment. Many check their email at nighť, Aiello says Remedy this with boundaries, says Cassidy Solis, senior adviser for workplace flexibility with the Society for Human Resource Management, a trade association. Solis, a telecommuter herself, sets expectations; she won't respond to emails outside regular working hours unless there's a pressing deadline.

YOUR EMPLOYER

Finally, your employer and supervisor will have a lot to do with your success at home.

IBM made news in May when it called telecommuters back to the workplace. As companies re-evaluate telecommuting, so should employees.

Ask about whether you'll be included in meetings and how frequently you'll get feedback from management. Teleconferencing and regular check-ins can help alleviate feelings of isolation by fostering a team environ-

It'll also keep you in the eye of leadership, she adds.

WILL IT WORK?

If you fit the criteria and want to explore telecommuting, Solis recommends checking your company's existing policies, drafting a proposal and starting with a trial period.

Even if you don't check every box on the ideal-telecommuter checklist, working from home could still work for you.

'Most people, with the right mindset, can actually enjoy not having to put that suit on for the day or do that commute," Aiello says.

If not, there's always the office.

Get the best grill for your money

Given all the new gas grill styles and features, it just might be time for you to ditch your old flame, says Consumer Reports.

"Construction quality varies widely among the models we tested," says Cindy Fisher, Consumer Reports' test engineer for grills. "Some are wobbly and made of lower-quality parts, while others feel solid from the lid down." Her advice? Be sure to look at a grill's construction before you buy.

Consumer Reports offers this overview of what to consider.

$400 OR LESS

In this popular price range, you'll find grills in every size, from portable to large. But don't expect extra features. And though Consumer Reports' testing shows that price isn't a predictor of performance, it is often tied to quality of construction. So think twice about a large grill that costs just a few hundred bucks.

 Construction. Not all stainless steel is created equal. To keep prices down, manufacturers tend to use thin-gauge stainless, which can make for a flimsy grill. Trading stainless for a well-made model that's painted or porcelaincoated enameled steel might get you a longer-lasting grill. Inspect so make sure connections are snug. The fewer the bolts, the better, because they can rust. Heft the grates and check what they're made of. Porcelain-coated cast iron can chip and rust.

$400 TO $700

You'll find all the sizes except portables here, including a much wider selection of large grills. Be aware that a big and bulky grill doesn't necessarily have a large cooking surface.

 Construction. Expect a sturdier grill, perhaps one with welded joints. A quick look will tell you if they're welded or bolted together. The more stainless a grill has, the more the grill costs, usually.

ly be bolted together, not welded, should be the norm, so pick them thin-gauge painted-steel carts asup and make sure they have a nice heft.

> Check the burners with the same thing in mind: They should be heavier than the ones on cheaper grills. Keep an eye out for a grill with a 10-year warranty - you'll start to see them at this range.

$700 TO $1,000

Expect the small to large grills in this price range to be well-built. Here is where you start to find features touted to make grilling easier.

Construction. Go with a stainless-steel cart with an enclosed cabinet and, if possible, drawers. All the visible seams should be welded to provide a clean look, and the grill. The parts will usual- Heavy stainless or cast-iron grates the cart should be sturdier than sembled with nuts and bolts. Grill carts should have metal casters rather than plastic ones.

$1,000 AND UP

You'll find more large grills to choose from and a wider selection of features. As for quality, Consumer Reports notes that you can expect grills in this range to last for many summers to come.

 Construction. Expect heavier-gauge stainless steel and more of it. Insist on top-notch fabrication with seamless welds - nothing should be shoddy. Heavy-duty grates are the norm. And a must.

neered six-ton "super pig" at its heart.

'In cartoons or movies, young girls are often portrayed as characters that need to be protected or rescued. I wanted to do the opposite," the filmmaker said in an email. "I liked that a young female character was the unstoppable guardian of a creature, and that she had to charge and break through all obstacles that stood in her way. I liked this feeling." Played by 13-year-old An Seo Hyun, Mija has grown up with Okja, and risks everything to protect the massive creature when the corporation that sponsored the super-pig program comes to claim its product.

One thing that's missing from "Okja" and the other projects is a stereotypical little girl who needs saving.

"Logan" writer-director James Mangold can't take credit for creating the young female mutant Laura – he mined the character from "X-Men" history. But Mangold cast an exceptional actress, 11-year-old Dafne Keen, and successfully brought a killer female character to the ultramale world of big-screen superheroes.

He chose to make Laura a child rather than the teenager she is in the comics because of the bond it would allow with Hugh Jackman's character and the shock it might elicit when Laura draws her claws.

Like Hit-Girl in 2010's Kick-Ass." Laura is a character created in her father's image. She's Wolverine's daughter and has just as much flesh-shredding power as her dad.

"I did think the shocking nature of Laura's ability to kill savagely would be all the more shocking, in a really wonderful way, that it was a girl and not a boy, that that lethalness would be exhibited by this little girl," Mangold said. "I wondered whether we could pull it off, whether the audience would truly believe this level of violence and intensity trapped inside an 11-year-old body. To me, that made it even more exciting to put it on the screen." Mangold said he took care with Laura's character, who's mute for the first half of the film and speaks only Spanish in the second, to "undermine the kind of cute factor of what this young woman would be and allow her to exist as her own unique character.' It's notable, too, that these young heroines are not all embodied by white actress-

Kearney says it's more than just the "Wonder Woman" éffect inspiring these empowered characters: "History has everything to do with this and the gender politics of different historical moments.'

The powerful women and girls onscreen reflect more progressive gender attitudes, she said, adding that some writers and producers may have been inspired to create such heroes out of a desire to see more real-life female leaders.

She noted the recent crop of characters all exist in "fantasy narratives," where people can have super powers.

"It's not in our reality; it's in some other reality, and that's really disheartening if you think about it in that way," she said. "Like girls are great as action heroes, but not as president of the United States, not in real life.'

TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX SHOWS

The Duffer Brothers note that Eleven is the show's most popular character and best-selling action figure. Mangold said that when his pre-teen sons visited the set during the making of "Logan," they were more inter-ested in Laura than Wolverine himself.

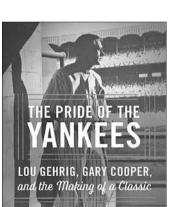

'They were completely mesmerized by her," he said. "It's really refreshing for evervone to see a kid, especially a young girl, who's not a kewpie doll first or a dimpled smile first, you know? That what's really going on there is someone in conflict, someone who's searching for something, someone who's capable – someone also, by the way, in my film who ends up offering pretty intense advice and wisdom and stability.'

Fact outhits fiction in 'Pride of Yankees'

By DOUGLASS K. DANIEL Associated Press

"The Pride of the Yankees: Lou Gehrig, Gary Cooper, and the Making of a Classic" (Hachette), by Richard Sandomir

The movie "The Pride of the Yankees" is the kind of Hollywood hokum that makes us feel good. And there's nothing wrong with that – as long as we know life is usually more complicated than a Gary Cooper movie. Recommending a makingof-the-movie book as more interesting than the film it explores is a compliment to the author. And in the case of this 1942 biopic about baseball great Lou Gehrig, an acknowledgement that time can be cruel to our youthful favorites. 'The Pride of the Yankees' is best remembered for Cooper re-enacting Gehrig's farewell speech at Yankee Stadium. In 1939 the slugger and first baseman was dying of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a nerve disease soon to carry his name. His oftquoted observation – "To-day, I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth" – set the standard for self-effacing courage. When Hollywood got involved in Gehrig's story, accuracy was destined to strike out. As author Richard Sandomir explains, producer Sam Goldwyn saw a Gehrig movie in terms of typical entertainment of the period: a portrait of a heroic figure with touches of humor and romance. For Goldwyn, the element of baseball was something to be "put up with. The studio publicity machine created a phony tale of a national search for the right person, whether actor or athlete, to play Gehrig. (Imagine Cary Grant, Spencer Tracy or Ronald Reagan in pinstripes.) It was all about ballyhoo because Cooper was under contract to Goldwyn and owed him a picture. Ticket sales and 11 Oscar nominations (it would win for film editing) proved Goldwyn was right to steer clear, for the most part, of baseball action scenes. Viewed today, however, the film can come off as a syrupy blend of cliches, falling short of the enduring charm of "Casablanca" and a handful of other wartime films. Not that Sandomir sees it that way. Overall, he still they heard one.

That includes demands for Trump's impeachment which, Pelosi said, don't reflect the reality of how and why such an action could be taken.

judges "The Pride of the Yankees" to be a classic that's true in spirit to its subject. But that pitch is batted away by the very elements thať máke his book worth reading. The New York Times writer researched Gehrig's life and the story behind the movie to provide an authoritative take on what's factual (not that much), what's fanciful (a whole lot) and what's a bit of both.

The Montana-born Cooper, more at home on the range than at home plate, needed lots of batting instruction, most of it taking place behind his Los Ange les mansion. One tale has it that he broke a window at neighbor Tyrone Power's house-twice. But Sandomir refutes the folklore that all baseball scenes featuring the right-handed Cooper were reversed so he would better resemble the lefty Gehrig. Some cinematic chicanery did take place, just not nearly as much as some have said, and Cooper managed to learn to throw with his left.

A heart-tugging moment in the film comes when an ailing Gehrig, waiting for his turn at bat, realizes he can't cut it anymore and takes himself out of the lineup, causing a shock wave in the stadium. In reality, Gehrig decided the night before and told his manager the next day. The crowd knew before the first pitch.

And then there's the speech. Sandomir points out that newspapers published different versions of Gehrig's farewell and that no complete newsreel of it exists. In real life, the famous line comes near the beginning of his remarks. In reel life, Cooper speaks the line at the end – the filmmakers knew a good wrap-up when

What happened to Fuller and Smith?

Q I would like to know what happened to actors Robert Fuller and John Smith of the old west-I would like to know what happened to actors ern series "Laramie." Are they still living and how old are they? I think Fuller was on "Wagon Train" and "Emergency!" but the last time I saw him was on a "Walker, Texas Ranger," in the mid '90s. I never saw Smith after "Laramie."

Fuller is still with us at 83 years old, com-A plete with a website, www.robertfuller.info. Although the Internet Movie Database does not list a screen credit for him since "Walker, Texas Ranger," in 2001, he still makes public appearances with his wife, actress Jennifer Savidge. During a June visit to the Memphis Film Festival, one fan, having learned Fuller no longer had his "Laramie' hat, presented him a specially made copy of it.

Smith continued acting after "Laramie," including in a guest role on "Emergency!" in the '70s but his screen acting ended around that time. He died in 1995 at age 63.

I'm wondering if you know when "The Gold-Q I'm wondering it you know when bergs" Season 3 will be released on DVD? I have researched everywhere on the internet and can't find anything. At one point, I did see somewhere that May 2017 was a release date, but it's still not available. It seems like the other two seasons came out pretty quickly, but season 4 just ended, and I'm still waiting on season 3 on DVD!

The show has not announced plans for re-A lease on DVD of either Season 3 or Season 4, although representatives of the show did not rule out releases. For now, both seasons are available as digital downloads via iTunes and Amazon.

My question may be a little outdated and pos-Q My question may be a little outdated and solution with the sense of the solution of the sense of the sens but is there a reason the first two seasons of "Knots Landing" were released on DVD, and not the remaining 12? Was the decision based on poor sales of the first two seasons?

"We'd love to release the rest of this series," the show's studio, Warner Bros., said in a widely reported statement in 2010. "The problem is that there are heavy music clearance costs involved. Our company is dedicated to resolving these long-standing music stalemates, but the process is very time-consuming. We certainly know of strong fan interest in this great series." The music rights appear to remain a problem. And they are made more so because, as TVshowsondvd.com has noted, sales of the first two seasons did not demonstrate widespread customer interest in buying other seasons. That lack of interest would not encourage Warner to invest in those music rights.

Will psilocybin prevent cluster headaches?

I've had cluster headaches for 20 years. Out of everything I've tried, there are only three things that work. To abort a headache, I inhale pure oxygen, and without fail, it is gone in five to 10 minutes. It's a true wonder drug!

Imitrex nasal inhaler also works, but it's slower than oxygen and extremely expensive.

To prevent clusters of headaches, I take several modest doses a year of psilocybin in the form of mushroom tea. I have some minor psychedelic effects, and the next day I have a lasting sense of positive self-confidence. A 2006 study at Harvard showed significant remission of clusters in test subjects using small doses of psilocybin.

Í've taken psilocybin more than 50 times in the past several years. I still have cluster headaches, but they are very few, far less intense and easily stopped with oxygen.

Cluster headaches pro-A duce excruciating pain so intense that the multiple attacks have been described as suicide headaches. That's in part because it is impossible to function during a bout of repeated, searing, onesided head pain.

High-flow oxygen is a treatment of choice for cluster headaches. So are triptan-type nasal sprays (Headache, July/August 2016).

Psilocybin is a hallucinogen derived from mushrooms. The Food and Drug Administration considers it a Schedule I drug, meaning that it has no currently accepted medical use and a high potential for abuse. That said, some studies suggest that psilocybin may be beneficial against these killer headaches (Neurology, June 27, 2006; Journal of Psychoactive Drugs, November-December 2015).

Q I read on your website that you should not drink coffee within one hour of taking a thyroid pill. My endocrinologist disagrees with you. He said I can have coffee right after taking levothyroxine, though I still should wait 45 minutes before eating breakfast. Since I started taking this medication 15 months ago, my thyroid level has remained the same even though I drink coffee right after taking my pill. Am Í just lucky? Years ago, Italian re-A searchers demonstrated that coffee interferes with the absorption of levothyroxine pills such as Synthroid (Thyroid, March 2008). A different formulation, Tirosint, isn't affected by coffee, although it is pricev (Expert Opinion on Drug Delivery, July 2014). The most important principle for taking levothyroxine is consistency. Taking it exactly the same way every day allows the physician to adjust your dose to your needs. I crossed the line a Q I crossed the line ... mal blood sugar to Type 2 diabetes and was put on metformin. I hate taking drugs. What can you tell me about metformin? # Is it time to take a timeout from timeouts?

For several reasons, I am not a fan of parenting magazines. First, they reinforce the impression that childrearing is a very complicated affair, requiring consulting with "experts" on a regu-lar basis (and yes, I am fully aware of the irony of that statement). Second, with every issue, said publications raise the Good Mommy Bar by giving women (their nearly exclusive consumers) more things to think about and more things to do. Third, they often render conflicting information and advice. Fourth, the advice they dispense is often just downright bad.

Regarding the latter, a case in point: An article in the April 2017, issue of Parents timeout. To put my remarks timeout. In and of itself, in perspective, I was one of however, timeout is simply the primary popularizers of timeout. During the early years of this syndicated column (1976 - 1990, roughly), I often recommended it and even hold the dubious distinction of coming up with the "one minute of timeout for every year of a child's age" formula.

Much to my chagrin, however, I eventually concluded that timeout worked only with children who were already well-behaved - obedient, respectful, responsible and so on. Said children only need occasional and magazine purporting to tell relatively minor "adjustparents how to properly use ments," which can include a child who does not fit that description - assuming that said child would even cooperate in sitting still for several minutes without being physically restrained (more on that shortly).

Using psychologists, psychiatrists and pediatricians as its expert sources, Parents makes the same recommendations I was making some 35 years ago - with one exception. Par*ents* cites a study done by researchers at Oklahoma State University that found that the need for timeout is reduced if parents issue warnings, as in, "Billy, if you do that again, I'm going to put you in timeout." I don't doubt that, but it's misleading. The goal of any disci-too weak a consequence to At best, warnings result in tiate ("If you don't go to tim-have significant impact on nothing more than a tem- eout, then you lose televiporary abatement (which is what the study measured) and usually make matters worse over time.

For the most part, the "New and Improved Time-Out Technique" that Parents magazine describes echoes my pro-timeout columns from the 1980s, before I concluded that when it came to "difficult" children, timeout was akin to trying to stop a charging elephant with a flyswatter. By adding warnings into the mix, how-ever, "New and Improved" becomes "Even Worse Than Before.

But by far the article's most absurd recommendations are highlighted in a sidebar titled "What If My Child Refuses to Go to plinary consequence is the limination of misbehavior. Time-Out?" In that event, parents are advised to negoeout, then you lose television for the rest of the day"), negotiate even harder ("Íf you go to timeout now and sit quietly, I will reduce your time from three minutes to two"), or put themselves in timeout. Yes, if your child refuses to go to timeout, go to your own room, saying something along the lines of "I'm not going to talk to you for three minutes because you hit your brother.'

Don't laugh. Some parents who read said article are going to do exactly that and wind up feeling even more wracked with frustration and guilt. Like I said: "Even Worse Than Before."

Rustic Adirondack furniture became popular in early 1900s

The Adirondack style started with a chair in 1903. Many wealthy folks from the East Coast wanted a cool place to live for the summer, so they started building homes in the Adirondack mountain area.

ANTIQUES & COLLECTING

Terry Kovel

Thomas Lee was vacationing in Adirondack town of Westport, N.Y., and he wanted comfortable outdoor chairs for his house. He made the chair from 11 pieces of wood and finally decided on the reclining chair with wide armrests now known as the Adirondack or Westport chair.

Lee had a local carpenter friend named Harry Bunnell, who made the chairs to sell. Bunnell patented the design in 1905. Lee never received any of the profit.

The houses in the Adirondacks created other pieces of furniture made of local wood, twigs and carving as decoration. The style was very much like Western or Rustic style today. It originally was all handmade of local wood by nearby carpenters. Sometimes there was added paint, or cutout and applied figures such as stars or animal profiles. Pieces are heavy looking and since they are made of logs, they are heavy to move.

An Adirondack bookcase on chest was in a Skinner auction and sold for \$6,150. It had carved diagonal lines on the trim around the two lower cabinet doors, two upper glass doors, plus a decorated center on each cabinet door and some applied burl decoration. Inside are three drawers and two shelves. It's definitely homemade and one of a kind. Can these be sold? I have a pair • of Royal Purple nylons, with back seam, in their original box. It reads " $10\frac{1}{2}$  style <sup>704</sup>/<sub>4</sub> nutria <sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>" on the end of the box. Are they of value, or should I just give them away? Collectors of vintage clothing A are interested in vintage stockings. Royal Purple was a trademark of Sears & Roebuck. Silk stockings were fashionable until nylon was invented. Nylon stockings were introduced at the 1939 New York World's Fair and were first sold in 1940. Stockings went out of fashion when pantyhose became popular in the 1960s. Royal Purple stockings have sold online for \$6 to \$35 a pair. The empty box has sold for \$4.50. My painting, I was told, was taken from a museum in Hungary. When the townspeople heard the Germans were coming, they broke into the museum so they could hide the paintings. This painting was hidden in my mother's cousin's house for years and brought to the U.S. when she came to visit in the 1960s. The cousin planned to give it to the Jewish family she helped to escape during the war, but gave it to my mother instead. We can't find a signature on the painting. What should we do with it?

Kelly Clarkson plans second picture book NEW YORK

After releasing a best-selling children's book, Kelly Clarkson is back for an encore.

HarperCollins Publishers announced Wednesday that the Grammy winner's "River Rose and the Magical Christmas" is coming out Oct. 24.

The picture book is illustrated by Lucy Fleming and continues Clarkson's "River Rose" series, which began last year with "River Rose and the Magical Lullaby." The new release also will include an original Christmas song by Clarkson.

Meanwhile, Clarkson is working on a new album, which also is expected to come out later this year.

Elvis Presley hit 'Love Me Tender' inspires picture book NEW YORK

One of Elvis Presley's biggest hits is the latest song to be turned into a picture book, and part of an effort to introduce the King to a new generation.

Dial Books for Young Readers told The Associated Press that a book based on "Love Me Tender' is coming out Nov. 13. "Elvis Presley's Love Me Tender" will be illus-trated by Stephanie Graegin and include an endnote by Presley's widow, Priscilla Presley.

Dial Books is calling the new release "a heartwarming ode" to the parent-child bond. Presley died 40 years ago this summer, and representatives for his estate are planning a merchandise program for infants and toddlers.

This is a bookshelf and cabinet made for a house furnished in Adirondack or Rustic style. It is 86 inches high and 46 inches wide. The chest is signed "DZ JR" in the wood. Its price is $6,150.

Thousands of paintings and sium and other minerals thought A. other works of art were taken during World War II. Most artwork was taken by the Nazis, but soldiers took some as "souvenirs," and townspeople took some to hide. There are several databases for stolen or missing art works. # Neighbor kid is on the prowl

Dear Annie: I never thought I'd find myself writing to you, but I need advice on how to handle a situation with my neighbors' 10-year-old son.

"Sam" comes into my yard, uninvited, at all hours of the day and night. He has climbed my apple trees and loaded his pockets with fruit, stripped my tomato plants bare, tram-pled my potato vines and knocked the stuffing out of my scarecrow. On one occasion, I even found him doing his "business" on my begonias! Annie, I was so horrified that I couldn't even speak. When his mother returned home from her yoga class that afternoon, I went over to talk with her. "Boys will be boys!" was about her only response. She also said, "The nanny is supposed to supervise him when he goes out."

I would put up a fence, but my town's zoning ordinances won't allow it. The rest of the neighbors are up in arms about this kid, as well. With gardening season starting again, I am worried that there will be a repeat performance of last year's reign of terror. My garden is my pride and joy, but with Sam on the prowl, not even a scarecrow is safe out there anymore. What can I do?

Ready to Throw in the Trowel

Dear Ready: This little garden gnome has made enough mischief, but his mother is the real troll here. It's time for another chat. Ask what she will do to ensure her son doesn't enter your yard again. This isn't just a matter of manners. If he were to get injured while climbing one of your trees, you could end up facing a lawsuit. Let her know that if he continues to trespass, you will contact local authorities. Good luck to you – and to your scarecrow.

Dear Annie: I am writing in reference to a letter from "Daughter," who is feeling torn and guilty about her participation in her mother's care.

It would be very helpful to caregivers if you would encourage them to find a caregivers support group in their area. We started such a group in our small town three years ago, and we continue to try to help caregivers get through their lives successfully. We have two hospice nurses and the director of the Area Agency on Aging as regular members, as well as a group of us who have been through it all. We encourage new members to let off steam, vent, cry, complain – whatever will help them at the time. Then we proceed to discuss their concerns and to help them find solutions to their problems. They leave the meeting feeling less alone and carrying a fat folder of written information to help them cope. Our direct concern is the well-being of the caregiver, though we can often find solutions for the patient in the process.

Our particular group meets in the local hospital, and some are sponsored by hospice groups and are also available to the public.

Thanks so much for your attention to this important matter. Caregiving continues to grow as our population ages.

Bills seek Ohio Aviation Hall of Fame DAYTON

Backers of a proposed Ohio Aviation Hall of Fame say the birthplace of the Wright brothers should honor its flight pioneers as other states do.

The National Aviation Hall of Fame is in Dayton. Yet supporters say a state-specific hall is needed to honor aviators who didn't rise to national prominence.

The Dayton Daily News reported that a bill in the Ohio House calls for a hall of fame to be built as part of a proposed $21 million "Triumph of Flight" monument near Dayton. Supporters for years have pushed the idea of a monument topped with a replica of a Wright brothers' plane, but funding has been hard to find.

A study led by University of Dayton students found that 34 states have aviation halls of fame.

The 4,000-ton rockslide blocked one of three popular routes into Yosemite, creating a commuting headache for hundreds of park employees and thousands of tourists who were forced to take detours.

Gediman says a 100-foot stretch of the road will be gravel, so motorists will have to slow down. The damaged road and a stone wall destroyed in the rockslide will be repaired later.

Car enthusiasts have their pick of destinations to get their fix while visiting Newport, with two car museums featuring classic and rare cars, the newest having opened in June. The Audrain Automobile Museum and the Newport Car Museum both place a strong emphasis on design and display the cars as works of art.

'What we're really talking about is good design, and how car design really re-flects art and social history," said David de Muzio, executive director of the Audrain Automobile Museum. "It's another way to understand what the cars are, why they look like they do.'

The museums fit in with the spirit of Newport, a resort destination known for its mansions, folk and jazz fes-tivals and beaches. Wealthy families have summered here for generations - bringing with them their cars.

There is a car culture here, and it goes right back to the late 19th century when Willie K. Vanderbilt was acquiring and racing cars. Some of the very first car races in the United States happened right here in Newport," de Muzio said. Cars became part of high society, as vacationers spending time at summer homes would parade their cars around town. Some of those car races were on the beach here, or on Bellevue Avenue, the leafy boulevard lined by Gilded Age mansions, de Muzio said. Both museums are drawn from private collections, and are different and complementary. The Audrain, which opened in 2014, is in a historic building on Bellevue, next to the International Tennis Hall of Fame. It rotates through four exhibits per vear of about 20 cars, drawn from a collection of 225. It has what de Muzio calls an "encyclopedic" focus, with a wide range of different makers and years, from pre-war cars to the present day. A recent exhibit, "Drop Dead Drop Tops," focused on convertibles and featured a range of cars, from a 1930 Pierce-Arrow Model A to a one-of-a-kind white and blue 2013 Bugatti Veyron 16.4L Grand Sport Vitesse "Le Ciel Californien." The exhibit even included curiosities such as a 1957 Ferrari Bimbo racer, a 12volt electric children's car booty from the ship of Black Sam Bellamy to the Portland Science Center. The wreck of Bellamy's Whydah was discovered by Barry Clifford in 1984.

Some of Clifford's more recent claims, including the purported discovery of Christopher Columbus' Santa Maria, have been disputed by a United Nations agency. The agency says Clifford's methods are unscientific and have damaged shipwreck sites. Clifford attributes the criticism to "politics" and defends his work.

2018 Alfa Romeo Stelvio: Take 5 with head of company at vehicle lauch ... page D2

should try less expensive fix first

By Ray Magliozzi Dear Car Talk:

My problem is I have a 2004 Silverado 4WD Z71 that I bought new, and over the years, the brakes have gotten terrible. I've been through the typical brake failures from rusted lines over the past six years and survived them all. So far. I love the truck; it still drives and handles well. The problem is that the brakes have no braking power. I have replaced all four rotors, the rear calipers, the brake booster, as well as the master cylinder, and, of course, all pads have been replaced at different times as they wore out. This truck will not lock up the brakes from any speed (barely on gravel). The only thing that has not been replaced are the front calipers. Could they have lost power over the years, even though they never stick? I wouldn't mind spending $400 to $500 more to get "like new brakes," but I hate to spend it if there's no guarantee of success. Any ideas? – Greg Well, one more untimely brake failure, and you could be looking at a 2017 Silverado, Greg. That's one idea.

Actually, disc brakes aren't supposed to lock up. But we're going to accept that the brakes are not as good as they used to be. So my first idea is to make sure there's no air in the brake system.

You say you replaced the rear calipers. A lot of people don't know that after replacing the rear calipers, the brakes at all four wheels need to be bled. If there's some air trapped in the system, that would certainly diminish your braking power. So bleed all four calipers, if you really know what you're doing. Or pay someone to do it for you if you're not sure. We use something called a power bleeder at the shop, which pressurizes the master cylinder. That makes the job pretty much foolproof, as long as you can count to four – which five out of seven of our guys can do. While you're bleeding the calipers, my second idea is to take a look at the wear on the pads, particularly at the front. If the front caliper slides are not working correctly, you'll often see more wear on the inner pad than on the outer pad. Those slides are supposed to pull the two pads together around each rotor. But if only one pad is doing all the work, the truck will take longer to stop. And since the front wheels do most of the stopping, bad caliper slides could make a big difference. But I wouldn't go spending hundreds of dollars to change the front calipers without evidence that they're faulty. Check the pad wear first, and see if the evidence is there. Finally, even though you replaced the power brake booster, it's possible that the booster isn't getting enough vacuum. There's a hose that runs from the engine manifold to the booster that could be collapsed or something. You can go to the auto parts store, take that hose off in the parking lot, ask them to sell you a replacement, and then put the new one back before you drive home. It's cheap and easy. And you'll know right away if it makes any difference. In the meantime, wear sneakers so you can open the door and drag your foot if necessary. Good luck, Greg.

By MALCOLM GUNN www.wheelbasemedia.com

VEN TO THE TRAINED eye, it can be tough to tell the difference between an Audi Q5 and a Q7, and a Q5 and a Q3.

Not that similarity is a bad thing. The outgoing Q5 and the revised 2018 model are clean cut in the looks department, with minimal body overhang ahead of or behind the front and rear wheels. They are devoid of gimmicky noses, overwrought sheetmetal and superfluous trim.

Old and new look related, which is the reason why determining the exact age of most Audis is difficult, although the 2018 Q5 uses the company's latest hexagonal grille that's spreading rapidly throughout the lineup.

Now assembled in Mexico – the first such Audi to be built there - the latest Q-ship also deviates only slightly in length and width, while the distance between the front and rear wheels is unchanged. There is, however, a bit less cargo space behind the reclining back seat than before, due to added rear legroom. When the second row is folded flat, however, there's now slightly more room.

What is different is the stiffer and lighter platform that also underpins other Audi and Volkswagen models. Combined with lighter suspension components, the new architecture ĥelps reduce the Q5's weight by close to 200 pounds.

Take 5 with head of Alfa Romeo at the launch of the Stelvio crossover

By Robert Duffer Chicago Tribune (TNS)

HE ALL-NEW 2018 ALFA Romeo Stelvio is crucial to the Italian performance brand's return to the United States.

The performance crossover is based on the Giulia midsize sedan introduced late last year, sharing the same 280-horsepower turbo engine, suspension, chassis, interior - just about everything, except the body. It is the brand's third model since returning to the U.S. in 2015 after a 20-year absence, and follows the low volume but lovable 4C and 4C spider two-seat sports coupe.

Despite underwhelming sales against stalwart competitors such as the BMW 3-Series, Mercedes-Benz C-Class and the new Jaguar XE, Giulia came at a time when the premium compact sedan segment has shrunk as consumers opt for bigger, more versatile crossovers. Like the Jaguar F-Pace crossover, which became Jaguar's best-selling model after just one year of sales, the Stelvio could help establish a new era of Alfa Romeo.

During the recent Stelvio drive program outside Nashville, Tenn., we talked with Reid Bigland, Head of Alfa Romeo, about the Stelvio and the brand. The interview has been edited for length and clarity.

Q: How important is the Stelvio to the brand?

A: It falls into the largest premium segment in the U.S. (25 percent of premium sales are midsize crossovers) so by being Alfa's first SUV in our over 105-year history, it's an important product offering for us.

Q: Does the success of the brand depend on the Stelvio?

A: No, I wouldn't put all that pressure on the Stelvio. We're in it for the long term. Any brand that can be in existence for 105 years must be doing something right. We're focused on creating a driving experience that's unlike any other vehicle in the marketplace. There's a connectedness between driver and car that is really unique in today's auto world.

Q: The Stelvio compares to the Jaguar F-Pace, which is now Jaguar's best-selling model.

A: With respect to the F-Pace, it shows how consumers are wired to SUVs. Look at Porsche. When I was a kid it was all 911. Porsche sales are 70 percent SUVs now. Maserati, Alfa's sister company, introduced the Levante last year and it has become 50 percent of Maserati global sales already. Hopefully the Stelvio will have a similar impact for Alfa Romeo.

Q: Compared with how many models and trim levels are offered by BMW and Mercedes-Benz, Alfa's portfolio feels narrow.

A: We believe there are people out there looking for an alternative to a good German car, and by taking driving dynamics to the next level and offering a little more emphasis on style, hopefully we can fill that void for consumers.

Q: How is Alfa addressing the old reputation of quality and mechanical problems?

A: We're aware of the potential concern. All I can tell you is we have the most advanced manufacturing processes going on at the Cassino factory (in Italy), the quality control is exceptional, we have secondary checks when the vehicles hit the port of Baltimore, as well as in China, and we're very focused on delivering the highest quality car that can be developed.

Alfa Romeo offers a 4-year or 50,000-mile bumper-to-bumper warranty, as well as a 5-year or 100.000-mile powertrain warranty.

5 fast facts about

the 2018 Alfa Romeo Stelvio

The 2018 Alfa Romeo Stelvio performance crossover follows the 4C and 4C Spider two-seat sports kart and the Giulia midsize sedan in the Italian brand's return to the U.S. after a nearly 25-year absence.

Based on the overwhelming popularity of crossovers, the Stelvio is crucial to the brand's success.

• Stelvio is based off the Giulia midsize sedan, sharing the same aluminum 2-liter direct injection four-cylinder turbo engine churning out 280 horsepower and 306 pound-feet of torque. Same eight-speed automatic transmission, same chassis, same suspension, same interior. Different body: Stelvio is 2 inches longer, 9 inches taller, and 2 inches higher off the ground. Stelvio can be equipped to tow up to 3,000 pounds. Stelvio comes standard with all-wheel drive, with a rear-wheel-drive bias, so 100 percent of torque can automatically shift to the rear wheels at highway cruising speeds when it's most efficient, for instance. It gets an EPA-estimated 24 mpg combined, 2 mpg less than Giulia. On the other hand, for racing, four wheels planted on takeoff give it more grip, less slip. The Ti trim hits 60 mph in 5.4 seconds, with a top speed of 144 mph. Stelvio costs about $2,000 more than Giulia.

• Stelvio is named for the famed Stelvio Pass in the Italian Alps on the northern border. The highest paved mountain pass in Italy includes 48 hairpin turns at an elevation of 9,000 feet, enabling Alfa to call Stelvio an "SUV for the S-curves." Mechanically, it has perfect 50-50 weight distribution, which is always good for balance on the track and mountain passes. Alfa also claims the "the most direct steering ratio in its segment," meaning that every degree turn of the steering wheel is matched by a degree turn of the wheels, at a ratio of 12 to 1. So a full turn of the steering wheel (360 degrees) results in a 30-degree turn of the wheels. Bottom line? More precise, direct steering.

• The premium midsize crossover segment accounts for 25 percent of all premium vehicle sales, the most in the segment by a lot, according to Alfa Romeo. All premium marques have a performance crossover option, it seems, so Alfa has work to do to establish it from the competition. Competiphoto courtesy of Alfa Romeo tors are the Porsche Macan, Audi Q5, BMW X3, Lexus NX and Mercedes-Benz GLC, but the vehicle most closely aligned with what Alfa is trying to do is the Jaguar F-Pace. Within a year of its release, the F-Pace became the best-selling Jaguar, and it is the hottest vehicle in the U.S., meaning it spends the least amount of time on dealer lots of any vehicle. Sedans aren't selling. The Stelvio must.

• It is a performance crossover with no pretense to off-road capability, aside from a hill descent button and an available towing package with a capacity of 3,000 pounds. The dashboard is spartan, the controls are simple, the design emphasis is on drivability and nothing more. This is sweet relief from Land Rover, Porsche and the German makes.

• The Stelvio Quadrifoglio, with a 505-horsepower 2.9-liter twinturbo V-6, is due in the first quarter of 2018. The Stelvio in Sport, Ti or Lusso trim levels hit dealers in the last week of June.

go back to cool again. Also, it seems that it starts to cool once the engine temperature reaches 190 degrees.

We have been to the VW dealer, and they have not been able to fix the issue. They have now said, at this point, we need a whole new air conditioning unit. We hate to spend $1,500 for a new unit when there could be another solution to this problem.

WELCOME to International AutoCross, a puzzle dedicated to the automobile enthusiast! AutoCross will test your knowledge of cars, brand names and auto-related people from all over the world. Good luck

My husband and I are so confused. Is there another solution?

Love your column ... read it every week! Thanks. - Cynthia

There's always another solution, Cynthia. There's rolling down the windows, or putting a five pound bag of ice on your lap.

It sounds like you may very well need a compressor, Cynthia. That's the $1,500 solution. I assume they've verified that the refrigerant level is fine, or even recharged it for you.

But there's a small chance you just need something called a high pressure switch. If the pressure of the refrigerant inside the compressor is too high, the high pressure switch will cut power to the compressor clutch, so the compressor doesn't blow itself up. And while the compressor clutch is deactivated, you'll get hot air. So maybe that switch has gone haywire?

Normally, a scan will pick that up. But if the switch wasn't misbehaving when your dealer had the car, he could have missed it. And the dealer may not have wanted to put in the time to investigate further. He's too busy trying to figure out where to park all those VW diesels he's been buying back.

So I suggest you take the car to an air conditioning specialty shop. Let them diagnose it, and ask them to check the high pressure switch, too. The switch is cheap. But even if they confirm that you need a compressor, get an estimate from them. Who knows? Their price might be cheaper than the dealer's. Good luck.

The optional Virtual Cockpit replaces traditional dials with a screen that can be changed to show different information in different layouts. This is the interior of the performance-minded SQ5.

Audi Q5

Also new is the Q5's powerplant. The turbocharged 2.0-liter fourcylinder puts out 252 horsepower and 273 pound-feet of torque. The previous turbo 2.0 made 220 horses and 258 pound-feet. A new quick-shifting seven-speed automatic transmission with paddle shifters replaces the eightspeed automatic.

The hot-performing SQ5 comes with a 354-horsepower supercharged 3.0-liter V-6 matched to an eight-speed auto. The engine makes 369 pound-feet of torque.

Audi claims the Q5 will reach 60 mph from rest in 5.9 seconds, while the SQ5 does it in 5.1.

Four-cylinder fuel economy is rated at 23 mpg in the city, 27 on the highway, and 25 combined (previously 20/27/22).

The drivetrain comes with an updated Quattro all-wheel-drive system. Instead of working full-time on a 40:60 front:rear basis, the "Quattro with Ultra Technology" system acts like any front-wheel-driver under normal conditions and engages the rear wheels only when tire slip is detected. It weighs less the previous system and is more fuel-efficient.

Q5 pricing starts at $42,500 for the Premium trim that comes with tri-zone climate control, leather seat covers, rain-sensing wipers and a 180-watt 10-speaker audio system. Also standard is Audi's drive select system that lets you pick from five different engine, suspension and steering modes, including Comfort, Dynamic (sport) and Efficiency (eco) settings. The Premium Plus trim adds a panoramic sunroof, heated front seats, fancier interior trim, hands-free power liftgate and a number of active safety technologies.

Selecting the top-trim Prestige gets you navigation, 19-speaker Bang and Olufsen-brand sound package, and parking assist with a surround-view camera.

The Prestige is also equipped with Audi's virtual cockpit, consisting of a 12.3-inch screen that replaces the traditional instrument cluster. They system allows the driver to combine speedometer and tachometer displays, in varying sizes, with a navigation screen and a variety of infotainment selections. The virtual cockpit can be handy, but it could also be more distracting than having these controls centered in or above the dashboard as they are for the lower trims.

Any way you order it, the Audi Q5's elegant styling and high-end content are tempting, even if the advancements in technology seem incremental. For an entry-luxury utility that was already at the head of the class, that will do just fine.

5 Shocking things your home inspector won't check

by MAUREEN CLINE Special to The Vindicator

H OME INSPECTORS ARE quite thorough. Before you buy a house, they'll scrutinize things you never thought to look at in your many walk-throughs, from cracks in stucco to how well the toilet flushes.

In fact, their checklists include over 1,600 features, all with the goal of helping you decide whether the home is in good enough shape for you to close this deal – or whether you should back out while you can. Given that a basic home inspection costs $300 to $500 but could save you thousands in repairs, that's a sweet deal!

And yet, home inspectors don't check everything.

For one, conditions such as mold, radon, or asbestos that require laboratory samples or equipment are the stuff of specialty inspections, which cost extra or must be conducted by other specialists. Ask your Realtor if you want information on how to have a test done.

Here's what home inspectors conducting a basic search aren't eyeballing, and what you can do if you want to make sure your prospective new home checks out on all counts.

ELECTRICAL OUTLETS BEHIND HEAVY FURNITURE

For one, basic home inspections evaluate only the stuff these professionals can see or access easily. That means if furniture is blocking certain areas, your home inspector isn't about to throw out his back to lug it aside.

TOP OF FORM/BOTTOM OF FORM

"I've had china cabinets in front of an electrical panel, and there's no way we're going to move that stuff," says Frank Lesh, executive director of the American Society of Home Inspectors, headquartered in Des Plaines, IL. Instead, ask the home seller to move such items in advance so the inspector can do his work without heavy lifting.

ROOF

Home inspectors will gamely climb onto your roof and check for missing or warped shingles and make sure flashing and gutters are in good shape. There's one huge caveat: Your roof should be less than three stories tall and not too steep. If it is, they'll probably pass. After all, if they fall, it's a long way down!

"We'll go up on roofs if it's safe," says Lesh. "But if it's raining or it's too high, we're not able to get to it."

It's reasonable to worry about the roof, which is a big-ticket item. You can hire a specialized roof inspector for $500 to $750 to examine roofs that a regular inspector will avoid. Some, hoping to get business if they turn up issues, will even inspect it for free; others charge according to location, roof height, and material. If they can't climb onto roofs, they can perform an infrared inspection that assesses temperature differences along your roof to determine where heat is escaping.

FIREPLACE AND CHIMNEY

Home inspectors will typically open and shut dampers to make sure they're working, and shine a flashlight up the chimney to check for big obstructions like a bird nest. But that's typically where their inspection ends.

Want more? A fireplace inspector can perform a Level 1 inspection to look for soot and creosote buildup, which could start a chimney fire. This extra inspection will cost about $80 to $200. If the home has experienced an earthquake or major storm, a chimney inspector will perform a Level 2 inspection, which adds visits to the roof, attic, and crawl space to check for damage ($100 to $500).

SWIMMING POOL

Basic home inspectors will turn on pool pumps and heaters to make sure they're working. But inspectors won't routinely evaluate cracks or dents in the pool. For that, you'll need a professional pool inspector, who will run pressure tests for plumbing leaks. He'll also scrutinize pumps, filters, decking surfaces, and safety covers. The cost will hover around $250 or could be free, if you end up hiring the pool company for regular maintenance.

WELL AND SEPTIC SYSTEM

If your inspector works in areas where wells and septic systems are common, for an extra fee ($150) he might test your well water and check that your septic system is running correctly. But if most houses he inspects are on public well and water, you'll have to hire a well inspector.

Well inspectors – typically employed by companies that install or repair such systems – will collect water samples for lab analysis for coliform, arsenic, and other harmful bacteria and chemicals. They will ensure that well parts such as seals, vents, and screens have been properly maintained and that the well and pump can produce enough water. This will cost around $250.

Does the home have a full-on septic system? Then for $100 to $200, a septic system inspector will check your tanks, baffles, and piping; evaluate the inside of septic tanks using a camera to check on concrete conditions; and make sure wastewater is going into the tank, not leaking to the surface.

Please remember the Home Inspectors in our area are very good at what they do. Most of the time if they see a problem that is out of their scope of expertise, they will request that you take it a step further and hire a contractor that is proficient in that area. Also, the county inspects Well and Septic systems. Make sure they pass the inspection and know the inspection is typically good for one year from the inspection date, county rules may vary.

Listen to what the home inspectors and your Realtor® tells you. It can end up saving you a lot of money in the long rūn.
