WALTER SCOTT ASKS...

TOM HOLLAND

The London-born Lost City of Z star, 21, was introduced as Peter Parker/Spider-Man in Captain America: Civil War. He dons the Spidey suit again to headline his very own film, Spider-Man: Homecoming, opening July 7.

How does this Spider-Man differ from the previous ones? This is the first Spider-Man movie that exists entirely in high school. What makes Peter such a relatable character is that he's going through these ridiculous changes in his life while having to remain normal and at high school.

What's your favorite new Spidey gizmo? I think little "Droney" is the coolest part, because it's fun that he has a relationship with a drone. It's going to be a really funny relationship between superhero and superbot, if you like.

Was filming in the jungle for The Lost City of Z harder than wearing the Spider-Man suit? They both come with their difficulties. Filming in the jungle is all-encompassing—there's no escaping Mother Nature; it's relentless. Then filming in the Spider-Man suit is similar because once you're in it, you're in it. You can't go to the bathroom, you can't drink water and it's just one big sweat bucket.

Were you a Spider-Man fan growing up? I was a huge fan. Huge. I had multiple costumes and Spider-Man bedsheets. He's always been my favorite superhero. The fact that I'm playing him now is so bizarre for me.

📌 What crazy thing did he do in his Spider-Man audition? Go to Parade.com/holland to find out.

What ever happened to the actor who played odd brother Dwayne in Little Miss Sunshine?

—Mary S., Fremont, Neb.

A: You're thinking of Paul Dano, 33, who was later nominated for a Golden Globe for his portrayal of Beach Boy Brian Wilson in the musical biopic Love & Mercy. Dano is a versatile actor who tends to disappear into his roles (like Pierre in last year's BBC drama War & Peace). In his latest project, Netflix's Okja, which began streaming June 28, Dano plays an animal rights activist trying to help a young girl and her best friend—a massive, genetically engineered animal she's brought with her from South Korea to New York.

It's hard to imagine a family more overexposed than the Kardashian/Jenner clan. Aren't they ready to lay low for a while?

—Carrie F., Baltimore, Md.

A: Hardly! Kylie Jenner, the youngest of Kris Jenner's five daughters, will star in the E! docuseries Life of Kylie, premiering July 6. She feels that even though America has watched her grow up on TV since age 9, the new show will shine a different spotlight on yet another angle of her famous family. "This isn't Keeping Up With the Kardashians," says Kylie, 19, the founder and CEO of her own line of makeup, Kylie Cosmetics. "It's like a therapy session."

How One Zoo Helped Save the Mountain Gorilla

Finding work for poachers, teaching children to read—Columbus Zoo's people-first philosophy in Rwanda pays off.

By M.B. Roberts

Imagine sitting in a clearing in Africa and having a group of endangered mountain gorillas saunter over to you. That was Charlene Jendry's experience in Rwanda in 1992. "They were so close I could feel their breath," says Jendry, then a gorilla keeper at Ohio's Columbus Zoo and Aquarium, on her first trip to Karisoke Research Center, established by primatologist Dian Fossey of Gorillas in the Mist fame, inside Volcanoes National Park.

For someone who cared for zoo gorillas but had never seen them in the wild, this was the manifestation of a dream—especially since the numbers of the endangered species had dwindled to around 250.

One night the dream took a terrifying turn. Park patrolmen brought a critically wounded poacher to the camp for emergency treatment. Jendry and her campmates, none of whom were medical doctors, scrambled to provide first aid for someone who was shot while illegally hunting the very gorillas they were trying to save.

"I looked into his eyes," she says. "He was thin. His clothes weren't fancy. I thought, He's not the enemy. He's just a man trying to feed his family. There's got to be a way to help this man and help the gorillas."

PEOPLE FIRST

Back in Ohio, Jendry told her boss, Jack Hanna, then the zoo's director, about her concerns. At the time, Hanna was becoming well-known for his appearances with wild animals on TV shows such as Good Morning America and Late Show With David Letterman, and later became famous for his own programs, including Into the Wild and Wild Countdown.

"Charlene asked if the zoo could help," says Hanna. "I said,

"Yes. Let's just do something." Partners in Conservation (PIC), the Columbus Zoo and Aquarium's signature conservation program, was born. Its goal: to connect partners in the U.S. (school kids, donors, volunteers, zookeepers) with partners in Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (veterinarians, park rangers, teachers, government officials) to destroy the cycle of poverty that threatens animal habitats.

25 YEARS OF HELPING

In the years since its founding, PIC has sent more than $6 million to Rwanda, funding and backing a long list of projects, in collaboration with local organizations in Africa.

In addition to helping educate Rwandan children, PIC trains and hires trackers, guides and porters and supports 16 artisan cooperatives, providing job alternatives such ism business, the reduction of poverty in Rwanda, as well as the veterinary care provided by Gorilla Doctors have all helped increase gorilla numbers.

Meanwhile, a new generation of animal lovers is supporting PIC with events such as the Rwandan Fête, an annual fundraiser that takes place at the zoo every September. An up-and-coming as pottery and candle making to 400 men and women who otherwise might have resorted to poaching. The nonprofit pays the salaries of three veterinarians on the staff of Gorilla Doctors, a conservation organization that treats gorillas in their native habitats. It also provides annual medical exams for trackers, guides and porters who work with the gorillas.

IS IT WORKING?

There are still fewer than a thousand mountain gorillas left on earth (current count: 880), but their population is increasing at about 4 percent per year. The regulated tour-crop of young veterinarians currently studying in the new field of conservation medicine will soon be ready to sign on with Gorilla Doctors. And zoo reps continue to visit U.S. schools to share their philosophy and what PIC does in Rwanda, says Jendry. "The kids come up with their own projects, like raising money to plant a million trees at the buffer zone of the forest." All of the efforts continue to be celebrated by their biggest cheerleader: Jack Hanna.

"This zoo hasn't just saved a species of animal," he says. "They've saved a lot of people's lives."

By Marilyn vos Savant

Do all people have the same ability to float in water? My husband says he can't float because his bones are denser than mine. Could this be true?

—Megan Piehler, Kirkland, Wash.

The ability to float varies with many factors, some of which are more important than others. People with a higher proportion of fat will float more easily, while those with heavier bones and more muscle mass will sink more readily. And yes, this means that women tend to float better than men.

LIVING THE AMERICAN DREAM

World Series MVP Ben Zobrist and his wife, singer Julianna Zobrist, count their many blessings—family, freedom, country and, of course, baseball.

Call it Julianna Zobrist's aha moment. Seven years ago, after watching her husband Ben Zobrist's late-night baseball game, she stepped into a stadium elevator while holding her then-infant son, Zion. A woman turned to her and in a baby-talk voice said, "Oh, Mommy! Please get me in bed. Don't be so mean. I really should be in bed."

Ben, Kruse and Zion

New mom Julianna felt gut-punched. "I had just rocked my baby to sleep in my lap in the stands and had Bud Light thrown over my head," the Christian pop singer says. "I thought, Maybe she's right—he should be in bed. Maybe he should be sleeping a normal schedule and not be on planes and traveling."

She told the story to Ben, who several years later would be named MVP when the Chicago

Cubs, the team he signed with in 2015, ended a 108-year drought and won the World Series.

“He said, ‘Jules, that’s not us. That’s not our life,’” Julianna recalls. “That was the turning point for me. I realized I’m either going to be living in fear of what other people think or I’m going to have to own who I am and who we are as a family.”

Two kids later—Zion’s sisters Kruse, 5, and Blaise, 1, have since joined the family—the Zobrists are still traveling, watching Dad play, watching Mom sing, staying up late, praying together and doing things precisely their way.

SIX-DAY RULE

It goes back to 2004. Ben, who was playing for the Wisconsin Woodchucks of the summer collegiate Northwoods League (he was voted MVP and led his team to the 2003 league championship), got drafted by the Houston Astros. He was soon traded to the Tampa Bay Rays, and his major league career was underway.

“We decided that if we were going to do this baseball thing, we were going to do it together,” Julianna says. “Neither of us was naïve; we knew the divorce rate in baseball is 84 percent. So we implemented a six-day rule, where we try to never be apart for more than six days.”

Except for extreme circumstances—such as when Julianna was far along in her pregnancies—they’ve met their goal.

“She wants to be with me, the kids want to be with Dad and I want to be with all of them,” says Ben, 36. “So we do it. But it’s not always easy.”

Julianna, who is the one tasked with the almost daily packing up and shuttling of the kids, agrees. But then she gives a breezy shrug. “It’s all about planning,” the 32-year-old says.

Prior to every baseball season, which runs from spring training in February to early November if the team makes it to the World Series, the Zobrists sit down and create a schedule around Ben’s games. Julianna has purposefully taken it slow with her career as a Christian artist to accommodate her young family and their travel schedule. But, whenever possible, she still books recording sessions, interviews, speeches to women’s groups and performances, usually in the city where the Cubs are playing. She even performs at Cubs games, where she’s honed her renditions of “The Star-Spangled Banner” and “God Bless America.” And when Ben walks up to bat, it’s Julianna’s music you hear (most recently her cover of “Bennie and the Jets,” recorded with Elton John’s blessing).

During the season, the older kids are home-schooled by a tutor at home in Chicago and on the road. During the offseason, they attend school in Franklin, Tenn., where the Zobrists have a second home.

Staying together means the family is always in motion.

“I travel constantly, but I’m still trying to get used to it,” says Ben. “But the kids see our life as an adventure, which they get from their mom. She always treats it as an adventure, and they’ve caught it from her. They adapt so well to all these scenarios we put them in, and it’s benefited our whole family.”

WHEN JULIANNA MET BEN Julianna, the daughter of a pastor, was a junior in high school in Iowa City, Iowa, when she met Ben Zobrist, the son of a pastor from Eureka, Ill., through her brother-in-law Dan Heefner, who played baseball with Ben at Olivet Nazarene University in Bourbonnais, Ill.

“There were no sparks the first time,” she says, laughing.

But their paths kept crossing, first in Daytona Beach, Fla., where Julianna’s parents had taken her for spring break and Ben was playing in a baseball tournament.

Soon after, Ben transferred to Dallas Baptist University and ended up playing baseball with Julianna’s brother Jeff, who became his roommate and talked up his sister. (“You’ll love her. She’s smart and funny. She just dresses weird.”)

Then, during her sophomore year at Belmont University in Nashville, Julianna heard from Ben on a particularly bad day.

“I threw out my back in dance class and broke up with this guy I was hanging out with,” she says. “That same day, Ben emailed me to ask how I was. He was always interested in my life and my heart.”

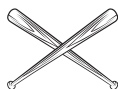

That day, Julianna started praying about him.

“I prayed that God would either put this guy in my life

‘Ben is the most steady individual you’ll ever come across. Nothing fazes him. He’s so very grounded. I’m the sprouting wildflower. He’s the consistent soil.’

or shut that door,” she says.

Two weeks later Ben showed up at Belmont with Julianna’s brother to surprise her for her birthday. Ben and Julianna started dating immediately, and she says if he had asked her to marry him that night she would have said yes.

“He seemed so serious,” says Julianna. “I knew that if I fell in love with him that it would be the real thing.”

Ben and Julianna were married in 2005 and took to the road as Ben, a utility player (he mostly plays second base but has also played third base, shortstop, first base, designated hitter and outfield), played for the Tampa Bay Rays, the Oakland A’s, the Kansas City Royals and now the Chicago Cubs.

Those Cubs fans, Julianna says, are hands down the most passionate of any team in any sport, especially after the team became world champs last year—thanks in large part to her husband, who drove in the first of two go-ahead runs in the top of the 10th inning during their thrilling Game 7 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

“There is so much emotion with Cubs fans,” she says.

“It’s generational. When we won, it was as if all these memories and family stories were relit in one night.”

“People are so grateful,” says Ben, nicknamed “Zorilla” by fans. “Strangers come up and hug me on the street. Then they ask if we’re going to win again this year.”

AMERICAN DREAM

By anyone’s barometer, the Zobrists are living the American dream. But it’s a dream they both say they never had.

“I honestly dreamt of lesser things,” says Ben, who was on track to become a youth pastor when his baseball career began to heat up. “I remember thinking, Man, it’d be awesome if I could be a professional baseball player someday. But I never thought I’d get to the major leagues. I never thought I’d get to the World Series.”

Julianna’s aspirations were equally humble.

“I grew up hoping I could get a scholarship and study music,” she says. “And if music didn’t work, I’d study science. I dreamed of things, but I never dreamed this big.”

To some, sunglasses are a fashion accessory...

But When Driving, These Sunglasses May Save Your Life!

Drivers' Alert: Driving can expose you to more dangerous glare than any sunny day at the beach can... do you know how to protect yourself?

The sun rises and sets at peak travel periods, during the early morning and afternoon rush hours and many drivers find themselves temporarily blinded while driving directly into the glare of the sun. Deadly accidents are regularly caused by such blinding glare with danger arising from reflected light off another vehicle, the pavement, or even from waxed and oily windshields that can make matters worse. Early morning dew can exacerbate this situation. Yet, motorists struggle on despite being blinded by the sun's glare that can cause countless accidents every year.

Not all sunglasses are created equal. Protecting your eyes is serious business. With all the fancy fashion frames out there it can be easy to overlook what really matters—the lenses. So we did our research and looked to the very best in optic innovation and technology.

Sometimes it does take a rocket scientist. A NASA rocket scientist. Some ordinary sunglasses can obscure your vision by exposing your eyes to harmful UV rays, blue light, and reflective glare. They can also darken useful vision-enhancing light. But now, independent research conducted by scientists from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory has brought forth groundbreaking technology to help protect human eyesight from the harmful Real fruit makes these syrups extra vibrant—use fresh or thawed frozen.

Drizzle toppings slowly so they soak into the ice.

A COOL

Visit Parade.com/frozen for an out-of-this-world Galaxy Ice Cream recipe.

There's nothing more Hawaiian than shave ice, the chilly treat that's shaved from blocks of ice and flavored with sweet syrups. We've updated it for the Fourth of July with patriotic toppings made with fresh berries and sweetened coconut milk. Hawaiian shave ice is fluffier than snow cones (made with crushed ice). We made ours with a blender, but if you're picky about your ice, invest in an inexpensive machine (like the Hawaiian Shaved Ice S700, $50, hawaiianshavedice.com).

FOURTH OF JULY SHAVE ICE

1. Combine 10 oz thawed frozen blueberries, ½ cup sugar; ½ cup water and pinch of salt in a medium saucepan over medium-high. Mash with a potato masher. Bring to a boil; cook 3 minutes, stirring. Cool slightly. Transfer to a blender; puree until smooth. Strain through a fine-mesh strainer; stir in ¼ cup cold water. (Boost color with natural food coloring, if you like.)
2. Combine 16 oz thawed frozen strawberries, ½ cup sugar; ½ cup water and pinch of salt in a medium saucepan over medium-high. Mash with a potato masher. Bring to a boil; cook 2 minutes, stirring. Cool slightly. Transfer to a blender; puree until smooth. Strain through a fine-mesh strainer; stir in ¼ cup cold water. Cool syrups to room temperature. Cover; refrigerate at least 1 hour and up to 2 days.
3. In a small bowl, mix 1 (11.25-oz) can sweetened condensed coconut milk or sweetened condensed milk with ½ cup cold water.
4. Shave 8 cups ice by pulsing in a blender (or use a shave ice machine). Scoop into paper cups and drizzle with fruit syrups and milk. Serves 8.
