VALLEY DEALS 365PLANNING, COORDINATION FOR TRUMP RALLY TOUTED

Logistical triumph

Officers from the Youngstown Police Department patrol the grounds of the Covelli Centre ahead of President Donald Trump's rally Tuesday night. Law-enforcement authorities agreed the planning for the president's visit went well.

Staff report

YOUNGSTOWN

THE OVERALL ASSESSMENT by those who made Donald Trump's visit Tuesday to both Struthers AMVETS and the Covelli Centre safe for the president and public is that pre-planning and agencies' coordination on the ground worked well, but some lessons were learned for the next big event.

From the time Trump's visit was confirmed to the time he arrived in the Mahoning Valley, the center and other groups helping with the appearance had a busy eight days to prepare.

"In dealing with the Secret Service and the amount of security, it was unlike anything we ever had" before, said Eric Ryan, Covelli Centre executive director. "They called the shots. They're the boss, which is much different than anything we normally do."

"We had to assist in the producing of the event with the stage and the setup of the facility," he said. "The preparation from the security detail was extremely intense. Anybody in the facility had to have background checks, anybody working had to have a background check."

The biggest challenge, Ryan said, was providing concessions to guests. Unlike at other events, the backstage area was locked down, meaning venue staff didn't have access to the main kitchen and refrigeration in that area.

NOTHING LIKE THIS EVER GOES PERFECTLY. THERE ARE ALWAYS BUMPS IN THE ROAD. BUT ON BALANCE, IT WAS A FABULOUS EVENT."

MARK MUNROE,
chairman, Mahoning County Republican Party about Trump rally in Youngstown

That issue led to longer concession lines than they preferred, Ryan said.

If the venue were to host a similar event in the future, Ryan said the arena likely would bring in portable refrigeration.

Ryan said he "absolutely" would want the arena to host a president again.

"It was a great experience for our entire team, and I thought for the city as a whole," he said. "Anytime you can host a president of the United States, it's a huge honor."

Mayor Terry Stocker got a brief bit of face-time with President Donald Trump at the tail end of the commander-in-chief's visit Tuesday night at the Struthers AMVETS Post 44.

The president arrived at the post just before 6:30 p.m. and spoke to 150 veterans for 14 minutes. He then left for a public rally at the Covelli Centre in Youngstown.

Just as Trump was leaving the post, Stocker said he came face-to-face with the president. The mayor complimented the president's tie — a reference to the fact that both men were wearing blue ties — and thanked Trump for the visit.

Stocker, a Democrat, said he also used the opportunity to mention what he believed were the most important local issues — economic development, the opioid crisis and the Youngstown Air Reserve Station in Vienna.

Stocker said the president replied with something like, "Help's on the way," though the mayor acknowledged Trump might not have been able to hear over the din.

"I tried to make the best of my 25 to 30 seconds with him," Stocker said of the interaction. "It was an honor to have the president here. It's a one-time thing."

Ride accident at state fair kills at least 1

COLUMBUS

A swinging and spinning amusement park ride called the Fire Ball malfunctioned and broke apart on the opening day of the Ohio State fair on Wednesday, hurling people through the air, killing at least one and injuring seven others.

Five of the injured were in critical condition and the other two were in stable condition at area hospitals, Columbus Fire Battalion Chief Steve Martin said. The man who was killed was one of several who were thrown when the ride malfunctioned, Martin said.

Fewer restrictions on traffic cameras not expected to change Valley policies

By SARAH LEHR

YOUNGSTOWN

Mahoning Valley communities say they have no immediate plans to change their use of speed cameras, despite an Ohio Supreme Court ruling that grants broader authority to local governments to use the devices.

The court Wednesday upheld cities' use of traffic-camera enforcement for a third time, striking down as unconstitutional legislative restrictions that included requiring a police officer to be present.

The ruling was 5-2 in support of Dayton's challenge of provisions in a state law that took effect in 2015. The city said it improperly limited local control and undercut camera enforcement that makes cities safer by reducing red-light running and speeding.

Trump: Bar all transgender troops from US military

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

President Donald Trump abruptly declared a ban Wednesday on transgender troops serving anywhere in the U.S. military, catching the Pentagon flat-footed and unable to explain what it called Trump's "guidance." His proclamation, on Twitter rather than any formal announcement, drew bipartisan denunciations and threw currently serving transgender soldiers into limbo.

"Please be advised that the United States Government will not accept or allow Transgender individuals to serve in any capacity in the U.S. Military," the commander in chief tweeted.

Trump wrote that he had consulted with "my generals and military experts," but he did not mention Defense Secretary Jim Mattis, the retired Marine general who less than one month ago told the military service chiefs to spend another six months weighing the costs and benefits of allowing transgender individuals to enlist. At the time, Mattis said this "does not presuppose the outcome of the review," but Trump's tweets appeared to have done just that.

The Pentagon has refused to release any data on the number of transgender people currently serving. A Rand Corp. study has estimated the number at between 1,320 and 6,630 out of 1.3 million active-duty troops.

Criticism for Trump's action was immediate and strong from both political parties.

His action is "harmful, misguided and weakens, not strengthens our military," said Democratic Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand of New York.

John McCain, the Arizona Republican and Vietnam War hero, said Trump was simply wrong.

"Any American who meets current medical and readiness standards should be allowed to continue serving," he said. "There is no reason to force service members who are able to fight, train and deploy to leave the military – regardless of their gender identity."

U.S. Rep. Tim Ryan of Howland, D-13th, in response said: "I am disgusted by President Trump's decision to ban transgender Americans from serving in the United States military. As we face growing threats in North Korea, ISIS and other actors around the world, it is more imperative than ever that we are recruiting the best and brightest Americans to defend our nation. Yet Donald Trump's hateful and discriminatory decision arbitrarily reduces our pool of applicants. This is a nonissue being made into an issue to score cheap political points rather than address legitimate national security concerns. Donald Trump is quick to tout his love of the troops, but it is clear that his love and support is conditional.

Aggravated-theft case

BOARDMAN

An aggravated-theft case in which a Youngstown woman is alleged to have stolen $200,000 from a township business will be presented to a Mahoning County grand jury, according to court records. That determination was made at a hearing Tuesday in Mahoning County Area Court.

Charged is Adriann Bunch, 44, of Sheridan Road. She is accused of stealing the money from her former employer, State Alarm Inc. on Market Street, over a period of several years. She worked as a payroll employee. Bunch was arrested in June. She is free on bond.

Court dismisses appeal in Hill case

WARREN

The Ohio Supreme Court on Wednesday dismissed the federal public defender's appeal to disqualify the Trumbull County Prosecutor's Office from Danny Lee Hill's new trial appeal in the 11th District Court of Appeals.

Judge Diane Grendell, joined by Judge Thomas Wright, refused to disqualify the prosecutor's office from the appeal.

The federal public defender's office appealed Judge Grendell's decision to the court. The prosecutor's office had asked the court to dismiss the appeal.

Prosecutor Dennis Watkins said he is pleased the appeal was dismissed because starting over with a newly appointed prosecutor would have been a "tremendous burden on the justice system and added expense to the taxpayers."

Hill, 50, is on death row for killing Raymond Fife, 12, in 1985. A visiting judge ruled in 2016 against Hill's request to get a new trial based on the unreliability of bite-mark evidence used at Hill's trial.

A gas line was broken about 12:15 p.m. Wednesday after a Youngstown State University Police cruiser crashed into a building at Wood and Walnut streets while chasing a suspect.

The man was wanted for a crime on campus and was caught, a spokesman for YSU police said.

The road was closed down as Dominion East Ohio crews repaired the gas line. There were no injuries.

Info about overdoses

WARREN

The Trumbull County Mental Health and Recovery Board and Trumbull County Combined Health District believe people are getting the wrong message about how frequently the same people are being revived from drug overdoses.

Data collected by the health district in 2016 show that only 10 naloxone kits out of 350 were used to revive people who had previously been revived with the drug.

There is a misconception the same individuals are being revived over and over, said Kathy Parilla, public health nurse for the health department. For information or to obtain a naloxone kit, contact the health district at 330-675-2590, option 3, to schedule an appointment.

New tennis court, amphitheater dedicated in Beaver Township's Woodworth Park

"This is one of the most beautiful things they ever did here," Bill and Judy Pontuti of Beaver Township said of the new stage in Woodworth Park that was dedicated Wednesday evening with a ribbon cutting and musically christened by the Mule Face Brothers country trio.

"They have a wonderful thing here," said Lorrie Lesnansky of Youngstown, who brought her mother, Dorothy Monaco of Boardman, and Youngstowners Frank and Julie McLennan, formerly of Beaver Township, to enjoy the outdoor concert.

The Pontutis and the Lesnansky party were among about 150 people who took advantage of a warm evening to bring their lawn chairs or to sit on benches to listen to the concert. The new brick and concrete stage and a new tennis court adjacent to the stage and other improvements to the park were made possible by a $500,000 gift to the parks by a township resident who wishes to remain anonymous, said Scott Conway, township park administrator.

Woodworth Park is at 255 Warren Ave. off Western Reserve Road between Market Street and Southern Boulevard.

The anonymous donor has been around Woodworth Park all his life and financed the new tennis court, which was finished in early spring, because he loved to play tennis. Work on the new amphitheater, which is 40 feet wide by 24 feet deep, began in October 2016 and cost about $146,000, Conway said.

Fitch choir to perform at Carnegie; will raise funds for trip

By BILLY LUDT

AUSTINTOWN

Austintown Fitch High School Concert Choir submitted a successful audition for the chance to perform under Grammy Award-winning composer Eric Whitacre at Carnegie Hall in New York.

"I thought it was a total long shot, seeing as it's an international competition," said choir director Bill Klein.

It turns out, it wasn't.

Fitch Concert Choir will head to New York in April for four days to train and perform with Whitacre.

On Aug. 6, the choir will perform at Woodside Community Garden, 4105 Elmwood Ave., at 6 p.m. to raise money for the trip.

Unfortunately, Klein said, taking all 50 members of the choir to New York is expensive. He said the kids fell silent upon finding out they were selected, and Klein was puzzled by their reaction. But they burst into excitement shortly after.

"It was one of those moments when you get to tell your kids that you're going to do something incredible," Klein said.

Woodside chairman Dale Basista contacted Klein before the community garden opened in May about a choir member singing the national anthem during ground-breaking. He said he'd like to make choir performances at the garden an annual event.

"I said to myself, 'Hey, we have all this room out here, why don't we have the Fitch Concert Choir perform here?'

Man convicted in child-porn case appeals sentence

By JUSTIN WIER
jwier@vindy.com

YOUNGSTOWN

The Ohio 7th District Court of Appeals heard arguments Wednesday in the case of Rex Bosley, a former Austintown Middle School girls' basketball coach who was convicted on 15 counts of possessing child pornography last year.

Judge Shirley J. Christian of the Mahoning County Court of Common Pleas sentenced Bosley to 7½ years in prison – six months for each count included in Bosley's guilty plea, served consecutively.

Rhys Cartwright-Jones, Bosley's attorney, appealed Judge Christian's sentence, arguing that the sentences should be served concurrently.

The state failed to prove Bosley had a pattern of downloading pornographic videos and images involving children, Cartwright-Jones argued, and the "well over a hundred" videos and images state investigators found could have been downloaded in one file.

At a sentencing hearing, the prosecution said the videos and images were "likely" amassed over a period of time.

"Likely" isn't clear and convincing," Cartwright-Jones argued. "Likely" isn't evidence."

Judge Mary DeGenaro said the files depicted different children, which means they are different crimes. She argued that one video with multiple children is analogous to three people sitting in a car that is car-jacked.

"I'm having a hard time not seeing consecutive sentences in this case," Judge DeGenaro said.

Judge Cheryl Waite said that even if he downloaded several files contained in a zip file, it appears Bosley's intent was to get multiple videos.

"It was one push of a button, but there were several things collected in his file," she said. "He wanted several things."

Ralph Rivera, assistant Mahoning County prosecutor, argued the case for the state.

"Each image when you have multiple images, that's the course of conduct," Rivera said.

Judge Waite asked if Bosley knew when he clicked download that the hypothetical file contained multiple images or videos.

"Most likely, yes," Rivera said.

Rivera argued that because Bosley pleaded guilty to 15 different counts, he is guilty of 15 separate crimes, which dictates consecutive sentences.

Still, Cartwright-Jones argued the government had every opportunity to use data from the files to prove they were downloaded separately and failed to do that.

"The word 'likely' is the only thing the prosecution gave us," Cartwright-Jones told the court. "You just can't allow that."

parking problems.

He said officers with Youngstown State University police and the deputies with the Mahoning County Sheriff's Office were also a great help, especially in sending rallygoers to additional parking lots once the main Covelli lot was full.

Butler said one advantage he and others had was a week to plan for the event and to assemble enough resources for the visit.

Another advantage was the site itself, Butler said. The Covelli Centre has hosted several events that drew a crowd similar in size to the rally, so police already have experience in handling a large amount of traffic downtown in a short period.

Another advantage the city has is it has hosted political events for major national candidates before, so it has experience working with the Secret Service.

There also were enough officers working the rally so that officers working their regular patrol shifts were not needed for the most part. Butler said some officers were called in briefly to help move protesters back when the motorcade arrived.

A couple of protesters were removed from the event but there were no arrests inside or outside the arena related to the rally or the protests, Butler said.

He added his office has not received a complaint from a man whose removal was captured on video and went national after it was posted on social media Wednesday. The video shows the man being grabbed first by the back of his shirt, then the front of his shirt close to the man's throat.

Butler said police would investigate if a complaint is filed.

POLITICIANS' VIEW

Both Mahoning County political party chairmen reported a smooth day.

Republican Party Chairman Mark

Munroe said he has been inundated with phone calls and text messages from people congratulating him on how the event turned out.

He noted though the president had some delays in D.C., the rally started just about on time.

"I think all of the security issues were well-handled. In spite of the large number of tickets that were requested, the crowd management seemed to be pretty good," Munroe said. "I talked to people both inside and outside the event, and, to a person, they were pleased. There was concern that some of the people outside were not going to have a good experience. I think in general they did."

For Munroe, the presidential visit set off a flurry of preparations. He was on the phone daily with people from the president's team, he said.

"When they plan a trip like this, they need local support to make this stuff happen. They need advice about venues, about the participants, they need volunteers to help make stuff happen," he said. "We provided drivers for the motorcade. We provided volunteers at the Covelli Centre" and at AMVETS.

In all, he estimated that about 100 local volunteers helped with the event.

Munroe, who has helped with past presidential visits to the Valley during his 40 years in local politics, noted one lesson he took away from the experience: the importance of being responsive to the needs of the White House staff in charge of these events.

Overall, he said, "Nothing like this ever goes perfectly. There are always bumps in the road. But on balance, it was a fabulous event."

David Betras, the county's Democratic Party chairman who led a protest in the city's Central Square, said things went smoothly on his side, too.

"No one was arrested. No one was ejected. It was peaceful," he said.

The protest also required quite a bit of preparation, Betras said. Organizers had to secure a permit from the city, set up fencing, and hire security.

Lees said the cameras the city uses, provided by a Maryland firm, Optotraffic, have to be manually operated, so the ruling would not apply to the cameras in use.

Lees said he wants the cameras operated by a uniformed officer because it lends a sense of "fair play" to the process.

"We don't plan on dealing with fixed cameras despite the recent Supreme Court decision," Lees said.

Lees said the cameras are working in the city, reducing the number of accidents on Interstate 680.

Police focus on school zones and highways, concentrating on I-680 between South Avenue and Meridian Road, where the speed limit is 50 mph.

Current figures were not available Wednesday, but as of the end of February, 17,505 citations had been issued with 11,363 people paying the civil fines. That's a collection rate of 65 percent. Total fines paid as of that date were $1,416,863, with the city receiving $920,961 of that total. The city keeps 65 percent of the fees. Optotraffic gets 35 percent.

Speeders face civil penalties of $100 for driving up to 12 mph over the speed limit, $125 for 14 to 19 mph over the limit, and $150 for those driving at least 20 mph over the limit.

LIBERTY COMMENTS

Liberty Township has been using a manned speed

camera since summer 2016. It's unclear whether the Ohio Supreme Court ruling will apply only to cities, which have broader authority, or whether it extends also to villages and townships.

Trustee Jodi Stoyak said she is satisfied with using only manned cameras. An advantage, she said, is that officers can use their powers of observation.

An officer has discretion about whether to pull someone over when using the speed cameras operated in Liberty, Youngstown and Girard. Typically, however, the officer stays on the side of the road without pulling anyone over and the driver learns of the ticket later via a civil citation in the mail.

There are no immediate plans to change how Liberty uses speed cameras. Stoyak said she would defer to the opinion of Police Chief Richard Tisone, who was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Trustees Chairman Stanley Nudell said he's pleased with the township's current camera use and would oppose adopting unmanned cameras.

"We're doing it for safety reasons, we're not doing it to gouge people for money," Nudell said.

The township uses its camera on state Route 11, state Route 193, state Route 304 and a Shady Road school zone. Township police do not use the camera on Interstate 80 within the township because the township

STRUTHERS VISIT

Before his talk at Covelli, the president stopped in Struthers for a more intimate gathering at AMVETS Post 44, 305 Elm St. The event, included press and about 150 veterans, but was closed to the public.

Police were in the area to direct traffic. While Trump was speaking, a woman hit Struthers Detective Emma Brenoel with a car and then drove away.

The accident happened about 6:30 p.m., just blocks from the AMVETS post. Police say the car's mirror clipped Brenoel in the side while turning left from Elm Street onto Fifth Street.

Brenoel suffered a shoulder injury and was released from a hospital after an X-ray. City officials said Brenoel is sore, but otherwise fine.

Police believe the driver is a white woman between 65 and 70 with dark hair and glasses. She is believed to have been driving a silver 2014 Kia Sorento. A license-plate number is not available, but the car had a handicap sticker. If you have any information, contact police at 330-759-9849 and ask for Capt. Dan Mamula.

Apart from the hit-and-run, Struthers Mayor Terry Stocker said Trump's visit to the city went off without a hitch.

The city used its full roster, including reserve and part-time officers, to coordinate traffic and security in partnership with the Secret Service. Officers with Campbell, Lowellville and Poland provided backup, as part of the city's mutual-aid agreement.

The city also used its large firetrucks to block traffic surrounding the AMVETS post and called the street department to put up barricades.

Officials are still crunching numbers, but Stocker estimates the presidential visit cost the city between $8,000 and $9,000.

"People were really honored to have the president in our town," Stocker said. "It really was a historic event."

ing back and forth like a pendulum and spinning in the air when it crashes into something and part of the ride flies off, throwing riders to the ground.

In a statement, Republican Gov. John Kasich said he was "terribly saddened by this accident, by the loss of life and that people were injured enjoying Ohio's fair."

Kasich said he has ordered a full investigation and also ordered that all fair rides be shut down until additional safety inspections can be completed.

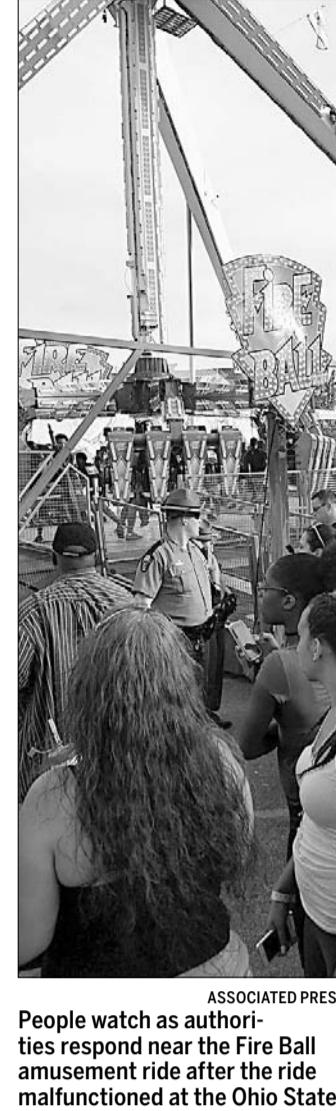

On its website, Amusements of America says that since its debut in 2002, the Fire Ball has become "one of the most popular thrill rides on the AOA Midway." The company description of the ride says it swings riders 40 feet above the midway while spinning them at 13 revolutions per minute.

The company did not immediately return a phone message seeking comment.

The ride, did, however, pass inspection before the fair opened.

The fair did not immediately respond to a request seeking comment. In a post on its Twitter page it said: "There has been a report of a ride incident. We are investigating and will report information as available."

The Ohio State Fair runs through Aug. 6.

cluding Toledo and Springfield, said the law's restrictions made traffic cameras cost-prohibitive.

The court also ruled as illegal requirements that an officer be present when cameras were being used, that there must be a lengthy safety study and public information campaign before cameras are used, and that drivers could be only ticketed if they exceeded the posted limit by certain amounts.

A majority opinion written by Justice Patrick Fischer found those three restrictions "unconstitutionally [limit] the municipality's home-rule authority without serving an overriding state interest."

Ohio has been a battleground for years in the debate over camera enforcement. Critics say cities use them to boost revenues while violating motorists' rights. Supporters say they increase safety and free up police for other crime fighting. The state's highest court has twice previously ruled for cities using cameras.

Ohio Attorney General spokesman Dan Tierney said the case couldn't be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court because it involved a solely state law.

YOUNGSTOWN REACTION

Youngstown Police Chief Robin Lees said the ruling will not affect his department's use of speed cameras, which are operated by a uniformed officer.

Lees said the cameras the city uses, provided by a Maryland firm, Optotraffic, have to be manually operated, so the ruling would not apply to the cameras in use.

Lees said he wants the cameras operated by a uniformed officer because it lends a sense of "fair play" to the process.

Liberty Township has been using a manned speed camera since summer 2016. It's unclear whether the Ohio Supreme Court ruling will apply only to cities, which have broader authority, or whether it extends also to villages and townships.

Trustee Jodi Stoyak said she is satisfied with using only manned cameras. An advantage, she said, is that officers can use their powers of observation.

The township uses its camera on state Route 11, state Route 193, state Route 304 and a Shady Road school zone. Township police do not use the camera on Interstate 80 within the township because the township law director has advised officials state law does not grant township police the authority to enforce traffic violations on interstates.

Under the township's contract with Optotraffic, the township collects 65 percent of fine revenue, and the company collects 35 percent.

GIRARD REACTION

Girard uses its speed camera throughout the city, including on I-80. The city has a contract with Blue Line Solutions of Athens, Tenn., which allows the city to collect 60 percent of fine revenue and receive compensation from the company for police overtime. Since adopting the camera in summer 2016, the city has collected more than $1.1 million, Girard Mayor James Melfi said. That money funded the purchase of three police cruisers and more than $500,000 in street paving, the mayor said.

Melfi said he is satisfied with the city's manned cameras, as it allows police officers to use their judgment and potentially pull over speeders. The mayor said he wouldn't necessarily rule out adopting unmanned cameras, however, if city council were to vote in favor of them.

Girard previously operated an unmanned red-light camera, though the city was forced to abandon that camera

Austintown prepares for 5th annual National Night Out

By BILLY LUDT
bludt@vindy.com

AUSTINTOWN

One night a year, communities across the U.S. and Canada leave their homes and residents to spend an evening out meeting local safety and law-enforcement personnel.

The township will have its fifth annual National Night Out event at Austintown Township Park, 6000 Kirk Road, from 5 to 9 p.m. Tuesday. Admission is free and open to the public.

National Night Out is a yearly event in participating communities across the U.S. promoting stronger relationships between law-and-safety-enforcement agencies and the neighborhoods they serve.

Local police and fire and ambulance first-responders will attend and interact with residents.

"[Police] would rather meet with members of the community this way than under other circumstances," said event organizer Shawne Wilfong. "They are good, hard-working people who want to help residents in any way they can."

Ohio State Highway Patrol, fire and SWAT vehicles will be present for public viewing, and the township police department will give a police-dog demonstration.

"The community usually doesn't get to interact with police on this level," said Sgt. Kathy Dina of Austintown Police. "National Night Out allows citizens to meet with police in a good way."

Wilfong has organized each of Austintown's National Night Out events, and she said it has grown in attendance every year.

"She took the ball and ran with it, and she's done a great job with it," said park supervisor Todd Shaffer.

People dressed as the Minions from Dreamworks' movie series "Despicable Me," Nickelodeon's animated series "Paw Patrol," Belle from "Beauty and The Beast" and Marvel's Captain America will be present to take photos taken with the children. Free crafts, a bounce house, face painting, a DJ, a live band and concessions also will be available.

"We're trying to do some things this year that we haven't done in previous years," Wilfong said.

She said anybody is welcome to Austintown's Night Out, not just residents.

For information about the township's celebration, visit the Austintown Night Out Facebook page.

Traffic stop turns into foot chase, ends with stun gun

Staff report

AUSTINTOWN

What started as a random traffic stop turned into a foot chase and ended with a suspect subdued by a stun gun.

Wardell Prather, 37, of Wilkinson Avenue, Youngstown, was taken to St. Elizabeth Youngstown Hospital after reportedly breaking free from an officer's grip and fleeing, police said.

According to a police report, Prather was a passenger with Timothy Liddell, who was stopped on Mahoning Avenue for driving with a suspended license. The report says police asked for Prather's license to see if he could drive Liddell's vehicle.

Police then discovered Prather was wanted on a warrant on drug charges in Lawrence County, Pa.

Police followed Prather on foot after he fled the car. The report says police initially stopped Prather with a stun gun in a driveway on Kleber Avenue.

Police said he fell face first onto the concrete, and continued to resist police, requiring two more discharges from a stun gun. The pursuing officer used the stun gun because Prather was continually "grabbing the left side of his waistband ... even though he was wearing a belt."

The report says Prather told police, "I was totally in the wrong, I panicked and ran and deserved everything I got."

Police said Prather had in his possession three cellphones, $1,370 in cash, a car-rental agreement, a Chase credit card and two Cracker Barrel gift cards, the report said.

His additional charges are resisting arrest and obstructing official business.

Man faces charges in assault on officers

Staff report

BOARDMAN

A township man faces numerous felony charges, accused of assaulting two police officers.

Michael West, 20, of Roche Way is charged with two felony counts of assault on a police officer, one count of felony obstruction of official business and a misdemeanor count of resisting arrest.

He was arrested Tuesday after being released from an area hospital and was in the Mahoning County jail Wednesday.

The charges stem from an incident reported about 3 a.m. Sunday on Sylvia Lane. According to a police report, a caller reported someone had knocked on their window and was running up and down the street.

West

When police arrived, the man, later identified as West, reportedly attempted to flee and then proceeded to assault both of the officers who responded.

The officers reported West was not subdued by stun guns or batons, and that he punched and wrestled with them and attempted to bite them. Both officers were treated for injuries at an area hospital.

West is scheduled to appear in Mahoning County Area Court today for arraignment.

TRUMBULL COUNTY

Coroner's office updates status of several cases

Staff report

WARREN

The Trumbull County Coroner's Office on Wednesday updated the status of several cases under its jurisdiction and explained the need it has for more space to handle drug-overdose deaths.

The coroner ruled the death of Wallace Bonzer, 58, of Howland to be natural causes, the result of heart disease.

His body was found in his truck in the Eastwood Mall parking lot Saturday afternoon after his family reported him missing.

Bonzer had been experiencing chest pains and was on the way to see a doctor when he stopped to use an ATM machine at a bank at the mall, the coroner's office said.

The office still is trying to identify the body of the man found in a burned minivan on Pershing Avenue Southwest on Monday morning.

The office is attempting to use dental records to determine whether the body is that of the man who owned the van.

The man, 31, of Parkman Road Northwest, is missing. There also has not been a ruling on whether the death is a homicide.

Meanwhile, the office is using space outside the county morgue in Trumbull Memorial Hospital to store bodies of people for autopsy purposes because of the high number of pending coroner's cases.

Shelley Mazanetz, a coroner's investigator, said the office sometimes asks for help from local funeral homes and St. Joseph Warren Hospital.

The extra space has been needed about three times in the past three months. By comparison, the practice was only necessary occasionally a year ago, Mazanetz said.

Drug-overdose deaths are one reason the number of coroner's cases has increased, she added.

Man arrested on drug charges after chase

Staff report

YOUNGSTOWN

Reports said police found two bags of suspected crack cocaine Wednesday morning that a man tossed out of his car while he was being chased by police.

Officers were called about 10:55 a.m. to West Princeton

Avenue and Hillman Street on the South Side for a report of gunfire when an officer spotted a car with bullet holes in the body and windshield turn onto Hillman.

The car failed to stop when the officer pulled it over, and he chased it on several South Side streets.

During the chase, reports said the driver tossed a bag out the window at West Woodland and Oak Hill avenues. That bag was later found by other officers.

The car stopped just after crossing Market Street at West Woodland Avenue because of a mechanical problem, reports said.

Reports said the driver, Raheem Satterwaite, 31, of Youngstown, was arrested on charges of fleeing and eluding and possession of crack cocaine and booked into the Mahoning County jail. He is expected to be arraigned today.

Township Trustee Ted Lyda thanked Conway and his advisory group for their hard work in bringing the tennis court and stage projects to fruition.

"We're going to continue on," Lyda said. His fellow trustees are Ron Kappler and Larry Wehr.

Bill and Darlene Disotell of Boardman said they usually come to Woodworth on Wednesday evenings for the country-western and polka groups.

The concert was a true family affair.

Arrested after OD

BOARDMAN

A township man faces a criminal charge after a drug overdose he reportedly suffered.

Township police Tuesday arrested Shawn Fekety, 41, of Sheridan Road on a warrant for inducing panic.

According to a police report, the charge stems from an April 23 incident in which police were dispatched to Fekety's address for a reported overdose. Fekety was treated with naloxone, a medication that restores breathing for victims suffering an opioid overdose.

Fekety was released on a summons to appear in Mahoning County Area Court today.

Pipe bomb is disarmed

The Youngstown Police Department Bomb Squad today disarmed a functional pipe bomb at a home on Summerberry Lane.

Lt. Doug Bobovnyik, head of the bomb squad, said the bomb was armed with black powder and had a fuse.

Niles police said the situation is under investigation and more information would be available in the coming days.

County to refinance

WARREN

Trumbull County Auditor Adrian Biviano says the refinancing of about $15.4 million of Trumbull County debt from 2011 through this year will save the county more than $1.1 million.

The commissioners Wednesday authorized the refinancing of notes for projects such as $1.5 million for the Prosperity Waterline project in western Trumbull County and $1.25 million for renovations to the county jail and former Talmer Bank building on East Market Street downtown.

Competent to stand trial

WARREN

Jack Sheetz, 48, of Utica, N.Y., has stipulated to a report saying he's competent to stand trial in a 1996 Howland Township rape and burglary case.

Sheetz is charged in Trumbull County Common Pleas Court with rape, aggravated robbery and aggravated burglary, accused of breaking into the home of a 75-year-old woman on Orchard Avenue Southeast in December 1996 at night and raping her.

Howland police detectives submitted additional physical evidence from the case to the state's crime lab in 2015, and DNA on an item matched DNA on file for Sheetz, leading to Sheetz's indictment.

Sheetz was renovating the home next door to the woman and living there at the time of the crime, police said. The victim has since died.

Collected by CSEA

WARREN

The Trumbull County Child Support Enforcement Program worked on about 20,700 cases and collected more than $31 million in 2016, the agency reported.

Statewide, child support establishes paternity for more than 56,416 children born to unmarried parents each year. With nearly 941,000 cases, Ohio collects $1.8 billion dollars per year on average. Child support is a growing income source for single-parent families, making up 39 percent of their total income.

The program impacts more children than any other public program in Ohio, except public education, Trumbull County CSEA says. One in three children are affected by the program.

Video targets driving

ITASCA, ILL.

The National Safety Council is putting a new spin on the fight to end distracted driving by using a new music video, "Everybody Just Drive Tonight," a cover song of the 1980s pop tune by Wang Chung, "Everybody Have Fun Tonight," which uses a comedic edge to bring awareness to distraction, one of the leading causes of preventable road deaths, said Larry N. Kingston, executive director of NSC Ohio Chapter 25 in Youngstown.

A NSC survey of drivers to determine their behaviors and beliefs about distracted driving found that two-thirds of drivers have felt unsafe because of another driver's distraction, but just 25 percent feel their own distractions have put themselves or others at risk.

"Everybody Just Drive Tonight" can be downloaded via YouTube, accessed at distract-eddriving.nsc.org, and shared on social media using the hashtag #JustDrive.

Man indicted on 4 counts of assault

Staff report

NEWTON FALLS

A Mantua man has been indicted on four counts of felonious assault, accused of driving his pickup truck into his brother's vehicle in May, risking injury to his brother, an infant and two juveniles.

Michael A. Harvey, 23, of Mennontine Road, will be arraigned today in Trumbull County Common Pleas Court on the charges. If convicted, he could get more than 30 years in prison.

The Trumbull County Sheriff's Office was called at 7:56 p.m. May 18 to the 2500 block of South Canal Street in Newton Township, where deputies found skid marks, smashed mailboxes and debris.

Harvey's brother, 22, of Newton Falls advised deputies that Harvey drove up behind them on Canal and side-swiped his vehicle, then got in front and hit his brakes, trying to cause an accident. Both vehicles spun out on the road.

Harvey's brother said the dispute had to do with Harvey's ex-girlfriend.

In addition to Harvey's brother, the victim's 6-month-old daughter was in his truck as were two males, both 17, of Newton Falls. No one was injured.

A woman in another vehicle witnessed the incident, deputies said.

Deputies found Harvey a short distance away and arrested him.

Man gets 2 life sentences in rape case; judge tells defendant, 'you are the evil'

By JOE GORMAN
jgorman@vindy.com

YOUNGSTOWN

A judge sentencing a man to consecutive life terms after he was convicted on 20 counts of rape said he would not fail in his job as the defendant failed in his.

Judge Lou D'Apolito of Mahoning County Common Pleas Court told Tshombe Miller, 34, who was convicted by a jury in June on 10 counts of rape with a sentence of life in prison and 10 first-degree felony counts of rape for the rape of two of his daughters, that his job is to protect not just the victims in Miller's case but all of society.

As a father, Miller was supposed to protect his own children and he fell way short in that area, Judge D'Apolito said Wednesday.

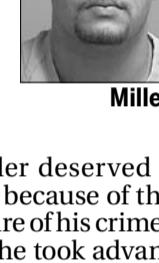

"The first duty of a father of two daughters is to protect them against the evil in this world," Judge D'Apolito said. "Tragically for them, you are the evil."

Assistant Prosecutor Jennifer McLaughlin said the abuse began when the girls were 10 and 12, respectively, and continued for several years until Miller was arrested in 2016 after an investigation by two separate county agencies.

McLaughlin said Miller deserved a life sentence because of the ongoing nature of his crimes and the fact he took advantage of his position as the father of the victims to repeatedly abuse them.

Miller's attorney, John B. Juhasz, asked for a sentence with a chance for his client to get parole. Juhasz said if the judge followed McLaughlin's recommendation, Miller would not be eligible for parole until he was 74.

Juhasz said if the parole board determined he was still a danger to society, he could be kept in prison if he was given a lighter sentence.

Miller declined not to speak because he is appealing his convictions and did not want to say anything that could be used against him in the appeal.

Trumbull grand jury gets drug-trafficking case

Staff report

GIRARD

The case of a man accused of drug trafficking has been bound over to a Trumbull County grand jury for further consideration.

Cyrano Clay, 29, of Youngstown appeared Wednesday in Girard Municip-pal Court for a preliminary hearing.

Liberty police stopped Clay about 2 a.m. Saturday for driving outside of marked lanes, according to a police report.

The car smelled of marijuana, and Clay, the driver, had a warrant out for his arrest on a minor traffic violation, police said.

Inside the car, police found a handgun under a cup holder, a bag of suspected marijuana, pills and an unidentified loose powdery substance.

Clay also is charged with driving without a license, possession of drugs, possession of criminal tools, improper handling of a firearm and violating the state's concealed-carry law.

US, Brazil probe
sect accused of abuse, trafficking

Ten former members of the Word of Faith Fellowship church say they have been contacted by U.S. federal and state authorities investigating allegations of abuse, forced labor and visa fraud after a series of Associated Press stories about the North Carolina-based evangelical sect, which has branches in Brazil and Ghana and affiliations in other countries.

In Brazil, the federal police told AP the justice department has asked for a 2012 inquiry to be reopened into complaints that Word of Faith Fellowship's two churches in the country were illegally sending minors to the United States. The country's foreign ministry said it was contacting the U.S. consulates in Brazil and U.S. law-enforcement agencies for more information and added that its embassy in Washington, D.C., was trying to reach Brazilians who came to the U.S. via the church.

This week, AP revealed how Word of Faith Fellowship took over two congregations in Brazil and created a pipeline of young laborers who say they were brought to the U.S. and forced to work for little or no pay.

Judge: Baby Charlie Gard will end life in hospice, not home

LONDON

Critically ill baby Charlie Gard will be transferred to a hospice and taken off life support unless his parents and a hospital agree on a plan that could potentially keep the child alive for a bit longer, a British judge ruled Wednesday.

High Court judge Nicholas Francis gave 11-month-old Charlie's parents and the hospital that has been treating him until noon today to come to terms on an end-of-life care plan for the infant's final hours or days.

The baby suffers from a rare genetic disease, mitochondrial depletion syndrome, which has caused brain damage and left him unable to breathe unaided. Recent tests found Charlie has irreversible muscular damage.

Sanctions bill hits hurdle over North Korea penalties

WASHINGTON

A new package of financial sanctions against Russia, Iran and North Korea has hit a snag in the Senate, where the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee has objected to the House's decision to include penalties targeting Pyongyang in the legislation.

Sen. Bob Corker, R-Tenn., told reporters Wednesday that he preferred to keep the North Korea sanctions in a separate bill that would be considered by the Senate. The last-minute hurdle may prevent passage of the measure before Congress breaks for its August recess.

But Corker insisted House and Senate Republicans would come up with a solution that ensures the bill becomes law.

Not-guilty plea in crash recorded on Instagram

LOS BANOS, CALIF.

A California teenager pleaded not guilty Wednesday to felony charges of vehicular manslaughter and drunken driving after she lost control of her car while livestreaming on Instagram and recording a crash that killed her younger sister.

Obdulia Sanchez, 18, appeared via remote camera in Merced County Superior Court, dressed in yellow inmate garb. She pleaded not guilty to all six counts and responded a "little bit" when the judge asked whether she understood the charges against her.

Ramnik Samrao, a public defender who represents Sanchez, said the teen believes she killed her sister.

Child killer put to death in first Ohio execution in 3 years

Associated Press

LUCASVILLE

A child killer was put to death with no apparent complications Wednesday in Ohio's first execution since a problem-plagued one 3½ years ago triggered an uproar over the reliability of the lethal injection drugs used by the state.

Ronald Phillips, 43, was condemned to die for the 1993 rape and slaying of his girlfriend's 3-year-old daughter, Sheila Marie Evans. He was given a three-drug combination never used in Ohio before.

As he lay on the execution table, he apologized to the child's aunt and half-sister, who were there to watch him die for his crimes.

"I know that Sheila Marie didn't deserve what I did to her," he said.

Donna Hudson, the victim's aunt, said: "God forgave him, but, I'm sorry, I don't think I can."

Phillips' case could open the way for the full resumption of capital punishment in Ohio, which has 26 executions scheduled through 2020, the next Sept. 13.

"I have confidence that we are going to continue to do this in a dignified, peaceful, humane way, and I'm committed to do that," Ohio Prisons Director Gary Mohr said just before Phillips' execution.

It was Ohio's first execution since 2014, when an inmate gasped and snorted repeatedly during a procedure that took an unusually long 26 minutes and involved a never-before-tried drug combination.

Gov. John Kasich reacted

by putting all executions on hold. The delays continued when the state had trouble finding new supplies of drugs and death row inmates sued over Ohio's proposed new three-drug combination, saying it would amount to cruel and unusual punishment.

The drugs include midazolam, a sedative used in some problematic executions in Ohio, Arkansas and Arizona. The inmates were backed up by 15 pharmacology professors who said midazolam is incapable of inducing unconsciousness or preventing serious pain.

Phillips lost his final appeal Tuesday when the U.S. Supreme Court denied his requests for more time to pursue the challenge to the new drug combination or his claim that he deserved mercy because he was only 19 at the time of the crime.

He died about 10 minutes after giving his final statement. He showed no signs of distress. His chin dropped and his belly heaved slightly as the lethal drugs were administered.

7 defectors bring defeat for repeal of 'Obamacare'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

After seven years of emphatic campaign promises, Senate Republicans demonstrated they didn't have the stomach to repeal "Obamacare" on Wednesday when it actually counted. The Senate voted 55-45 to reject legislation to throw out major portions of Barack Obama's law without replacing it.

Seven Republicans, including Sen. Rob Portman of Ohio, joined all Democrats in rejecting a measure by GOP Sen. Rand Paul of Kentucky that would have repealed most of former President Obama's health care law, with a two-year delay but no replacement. Congress passed nearly identical legislation in 2015 and sent it to Obama, who unsurprisingly vetoed it.

Yet this time, with Republican President Donald Trump in the White House itching to sign the bill, the measure failed on the Senate floor. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that repealing "Obamacare" without replacing it would cost more than 30 million Americans their insurance coverage and that was a key factor in driving away more Republican senators than Majority Leader Mitch McConnell could afford to lose in the closely divided Senate.

The result frustrated other GOP senators, some of whom expressed disbelief that their colleagues would flip-flop on legislation they had voted for only two years ago and long promised to voters. Of the current Republican senators, only moderate Susan Collins of Maine opposed the 2015 repeal bill.

The real-world implications of repeal have proven sobering to GOP senators answering to voters who've come to rely on expanded insurance coverage under the law.

It's not over yet. But what the party's senators might end up agreeing on instead is far from clear.

Sunbathers are being evacuated from the beach in La Lavandou, French Riviera, as plumes of smoke rise in the air from burning wildfires Wednesday.

Wildfires force evacuation of 12,000 in French Riviera towns

Associated Press

BORMES-LES-MIMOSAS, FRANCE

Backed by planes dropping water and fire retardant, more than 1,000 firefighters battled wildfires Wednesday that billowed smoke into the sky over France's southern Cote d'Azur coast and forced the evacuation of 12,000 people.

Large swaths of Mediterranean forest have been left bare and blackened after three days of fires. About 250 trailer homes, a hangar, an atelier and several vehicles were burned in the blazes but no one so far has been injured, according to the prefect of the Var region.

The residents and tourists were evacuated early Wednesday after a ferocious fire whipped by strong Mistral winds spread from La Londe-Les-Maures to around the picturesque hilltop town of Bormes-Les-Mimosas. About 60 people were evacuated by boat from nearby Cap Benat.

Prime Minister Edouard Philippe traveled to Bormes on Wednesday night to fly over the devastated region and meet with firefighters and evacuees staying in gyms and other public spaces. Dozens spent Tuesday night on the nearby La Lavandou beach.

Further south of the French mainland, flames ate through 4,950 acres of forest on the northern end of the French Mediterranean island of Corsica, in what was the largest blaze in France.

Tourist Francoise Roparse, who was visiting the south of France, was among the evacuees awakened in the middle of the night who found shelter in a sailing club near Bormes.

"First, it was a bit the panic," Roparse said. "We tried to gather all important things ... Obviously, we forgot a lot."

The local government provided food for those forced from homes, some 2,500 sandwiches, fruit and drinks, community center director Nathalie Franche said.

Regional governments were es-specially challenged because their economies depend on tourism. The fires hit at the height of the summer season.

Fires were also blazing across parts of bone-dry Portugal and Italy.

As thick black smoke billowed above the crests of hills, Col. Eric Martin of the Var firefighting unit told BFM-TV that French crews were trying to contain the flames that had run through 3,210 acres around Bormes. Four planes and a firefighting aircraft dropped water and retardants on the blazes.

The airport in Toulon, a city 18 miles from La Londe, was briefly closed Wednesday, as well the Fort de Bregancon, which sits on a rock off the coast of Bormes.

The wildfires began raging along France's Mediterranean coast Monday, forcing smaller, scattered evacuations as flames reached a corner of Saint-Tropez. Since Tuesday, French firefighters had conducted about 100 operations.

Further east, another 400 firefighters were battling a blaze in Artigues that burned up to 4,200 acres of forest.

E-cigarettes might help smokers quit

Associated Press

People who used e-cigarettes were more likely to kick the habit than those who didn't, a new study found.

Nicotine patches, gums and medications are known to aid smoking cessation, but there's no consensus on whether vaping devices can help anti-smoking efforts. The U.S. research is the largest look yet at electronic cigarette users, and it found e-cigarettes played a role in helping people quit.

"It's absolutely clear that e-cigarettes help smokers replace cigarettes," said Peter Hajek, director of the health and lifestyle research unit at Queen Mary University in London, who wasn't part of the study.

Smoking rates have been generally declining for decades. Health experts have credited taxes on tobacco products and anti-smoking ads for the drop.

E-cigarettes have been sold in the U.S. since 2007. Most devices heat a liquid nicotine solution into vapor and were promoted to smokers as a less dangerous alternative since they don't contain all the chemicals, tar or odor of regular cigarettes.

Researchers analyzed and compared data collected by the U.S. Census from 2001 to 2015, including the number of adult e-cigarette users from the most recent survey.

About two-thirds of e-cigarette users tried to quit smoking compared with 40 percent of nonusers, the study found. E-cigarette users were more likely to succeed in quitting for at least three months than nonusers – 8 percent versus 5 percent.

Trump's visit to the Valley nothing more than a show

WHAT WAS THE PURPOSE of President Donald J. Trump's visit to the Mahoning Valley on Tuesday evening? From the reaction of the 7,000 or so true believers to Trump's hour-long speech at the Covelli Centre, the event was a political victory lap.

But for the rest of the residents of the Mahoning Valley who were hoping for an address of substance from the president, the visit was no different from the three campaign appearances in the area during last year's presidential race.

Indeed, from the moment the visit was announced by the Trump/Pence campaign, it was clear the president was counting on a friendly crowd in the Valley as an antidote to what he has described as the poisonous political environment in Washington.

He wasn't disappointed.

Trump and Vice President Mike Pence have wasted no time in switching from election to re-election mode. The political rallies such as the one at the Covelli Centre are designed to keep their supporters engaged and build grassroots support for their agenda.

However, the chants of "Make America Great Again," "Build That Wall," "USA, USA," along with the loud boos when Trump mentioned Hillary Clinton, the Democratic nominee for president last year, and former President Barack Obama were nothing more than feel-good political drama.

For the Mahoning Valley, which is facing challenging times because of the troubling developments at the General Motors Lordstown assembly complex and the uncertainty surrounding the Air Force Reserve base in Vienna, Trump's appearance was of little consequence.

The speech the president gave could have been delivered at any rally around the country. There was nothing specific about his visit to Youngstown, other than a brief mention of seeing the abandoned factories and Mrs. Trump asking her husband, "What happened?"

RESURRECTING MANUFACTURING

The president said he told his wife, "Those jobs [that] have left Ohio, they're coming back ... the factories are coming back."

And Trump then said to the crowd, "Don't sell your house."

But he never said how he intends to reopen the closed factories.

Indeed, he made no mention of the fact that the third shift at GM's Lordstown complex has been eliminated and that the number of employees is now down to about 3,000.

More than 1,000 auto-related jobs were lost as a result of the third-shift elimination.

The president also did not acknowledge the fact that demand for the Chevrolet Cruze has decreased, resulting in an oversupply. Production has been halted intermittently for several weeks because car buyers are switching to SUVs and trucks.

Thus, rather than make a promise that cannot be kept, namely reopening the factories that have been closed for decades, we believe Trump should focus on the here and now.

Indeed, we would invite him to return to the Mahoning Valley on Sept. 19 so he can join the region in commemorating the shutdown of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube's Campbell Works and the subsequent end of major steel production in this once manufacturing center.

It has taken 40 years for some people in the Valley to finally admit that big steel isn't coming back, which is why comments like those made by the president are counterproductive.

As we've pointed out previously, Vallourec Star is a shining example of the new manufacturing paradigm. The France-based company spent more than $1 billion on a state-of-the-art, high technology steel pipe-making complex. Vallourec Star serves the oil and gas industry.

It is noteworthy that the two plants are not as labor intensive as the steel mills of the bygone era. The number of workers at the complex has hovered around 500.

Rather than talking about resurrecting the old factories, Trump should assign a White House official to explore an expansion of the America Makes additive manufacturing initiative in downtown Youngstown.

While Trump's campaign speech had the desired effect of re-energizing his base in this region, as president, he has a responsibility to tell the truth about the economic future of old industrial areas like the Mahoning Valley.

US faces a constitutional crisis if Trump fires Robert Mueller

President Trump has openly declared war on Robert Mueller, the special counsel investigating the Russian saga. The president clearly wishes he could fire Mueller; his associates say he's mused about that for weeks. Now, by stepping up the pressure, he's moving toward a showdown, and a possible constitutional crisis.

There's plenty of other craziness billowing from the White House: lawyers considering whether the president can pardon himself, the president publicly denouncing his attorney general for failing to protect him. But the clearest portent of a crisis is the president's increasingly evident desire to be rid of the meddlesome prosecutor, who appears to be doing his job too well.

The trigger: Mueller's investigators have reportedly begun looking for evidence of Trump family business deals with Russians – deals the president says never existed.

According to the Washington Post, Trump was especially angry about reports that Mueller was seeking his tax returns, documents the president has guarded fiercely even when it was politically risky to do so.

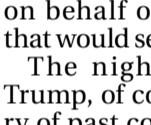

TWO-FRONT ATTACK

So far, Trump and his growing army of lawyers are attacking Mueller on two fronts.

First, the scope of Mueller's mandate. Trump told the New York Times that if the special counsel looks into the workings of his family firm, "That's a violation."

"The investigation should stay within the confines of Russian meddling in the election," his press secretary, Sarah Huckabee Sanders, explained. "Nothing beyond that."

That's an unusually narrow definition of the special counsel's mandate – unreasonably narrow, in fact. When Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein appointed Mueller as special counsel, he gave Mueller authority to look into "any links and/or coordination between the Russian government and individuals associated with the campaign." If Trump had business relationships with Russians who could be acting on behalf of Vladimir Putin, that would seem quite relevant.

Doyle

The nightmare haunting Trump, of course, is the history of past counsels – especially Kenneth Starr, who took an inquest into Bill Clinton's family finances and turned it into an investigation of sex and perjury.

Back then, Democrats objected to Starr's expansive definition of his mandate. But he was an independent counsel; Clinton had no power to fire him and never seriously tried to remove him from office. As a special counsel, Mueller is in a different position. Unlike an independent counsel, he reports to the Justice Department.

He can't be fired just because the president is worried about what he might find. But he can be removed if he violates department regulations – which made Trump's use of the word "violation" intriguing.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

Trump also attacked Mueller on another front, one that initially seemed puzzling: the notion that the special counsel is burdened by multiple conflicts of interest.

The day before Mueller was appointed special counsel, Trump interviewed him as a possible director of the FBI, a post he previously held from 2001 to 2013. "He wanted the job," Trump told the New York Times. "Talk about conflicts." (Except it's not clear why that would constitute a conflict.)

"There were many other conflicts that I haven't said, but I will at some point," Trump added.

Here's an exotic one: White House advisers told the Post that Mueller once had a dispute with the Trump National Golf Course near Washington over membership fees.

If that's the best they can do, they'd better keep looking. But that's the point: Trump and his aides sound as if they're looking for any excuse to get rid of Mueller. "Conflict of interest" is also on the list of reasons for which the Justice Department can fire a special counsel, along with "misconduct, dereliction of duty (and) incapacity."

Trump faces a practical problem if he wants to restrict Mueller's mandate or fire him outright. He'll need help from Rosenstein, the Justice Department's No. 2, who is the special counsel's immediate supervisor. Last month, Rosenstein told Congress he saw no reason that would justify Mueller's removal.

If he decides to act, Trump will either need to change Rosenstein's mind or replace him with someone more tractable. And that would send his presidency straight into another Saturday Night Massacre, the 1973 episode when President Nixon ordered his rebellious underlings to fire a special prosecutor. Watergate analogies have been too casually invoked over the last six months, but they're looking more relevant by the day.

DIRE CONSEQUENCES

To head off a presidency-destroying disaster, Republican leaders should warn Trump that if he tries to fire Mueller, the consequences will be dire. But only a few have dared do so in public. Some privately say they don't think he'd listen. Others, including former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, have been egging Trump on.

The best place for Republicans to take a stand is on Fox News, of course, where they can be sure Trump will hear them – even though he may not understand why they're not putting his interests before the country's.

We can save our planet

By GEORGE BALL
The Philadelphia Inquirer

Renowned theoretical physicist Stephen Hawking has said we should colonize the moon and Mars as soon as possible. He predicts that, figuratively speaking, Mother Earth runs out of milk by 2117, and we should exit the planet before then.

Hawking's prediction sounds more rhetorical than theoretical. Because of his fame, the public will take his warning as literal. As an international seedsman, I think he is wrong.

Mother Earth has a maximum carrying capacity of 35.5 billion people – up from today's population of 7.5 billion – at 1,500 calories per person per day. At this rate full capacity will be achieved in about 105 years. Our population continues to increase; we ranch, farm, and fish everywhere we can; everyone is fed.

Assume that the world's population doubles every 40 years and that, worldwide, a healthy daily caloric intake averages 1,500. Calculate all animals, fish, plants, grains, wild game, algae, and human breast milk. Moreover, assume that all of Earth's arable as well as grazing land can be developed fully by the year 2123.

While you might conclude from my counter-prediction that Hawking is correct, you would have to deny that humans are creative, resourceful and innovative. You'd be wrong.

Approximately 10,000 years ago, we invented a highly engineered food – bread. Regarding bread's main ingredient, Nobelist plant breeder Norman Borlaug saved 245 million lives through breeding a shorter and more productive wheat plant – just one plant and one person fed almost a quarter billion people. If we can land on the moon, we can engineer new foods in great abundance.

POVERTY

It is universally accepted that malnutrition is caused by poverty, and poverty by social conflict, instability and war. No freedom, no free markets. Also, food distribution depends on road quality. No well-paved roads, no effective distribution. Such mundane realities may not occur to a gifted theoretical physicist.

Unlike Hawking, I can speak only about farmers. Global warming, air pollution, and asteroid collisions elude me.

I base my observations not on disaster, but on the power of what the ancient Greeks called Gaia. She is more fecund than all the world's inhabitants combined.

Add Gaia's air, water, sunlight, and genes to our ability to till the soil, harvest the seas, and tend the herds and flocks. The results are miracles. The trick is to be selective and to worship – that is, to follow – Gaia, as did Borlaug, and both Gregor Mendel, known as the father of modern genetics, and Charles Darwin, author of the theory of evolution.

I accept Hawking's vast knowledge of outer space, and hope he explains soon how to colonize the moon and Mars. Who will go? First the starving, with hospital staffs in tow? Then those in Holland, China, Bangladesh and other low-lying places? In what order? But what about the absence of oxygen and water? Better to breed plants and pave highways.

Hawking is wrong not about Mother Earth, but about ourselves. To paraphrase Alexander Pope, we are Hawking's proper study. Let us examine what keeps us from creating optimal horticultural and agricultural production, as well as excellent transportation to all of the world's markets.

We shorten our lives by killing, maiming, and starving one another. Stop that, build great roads, and we shall live on Earth forever.

Cavs execs deny chaos

Owner Gilbert, new GM Altman reject Irving trade rumors

Associated Press

INDEPENDENCE

Cavaliers owner Dan Gilbert spent more than 30 minutes presenting a positive portrait of his franchise.

The reality is that the Cavs are troubled.

In his first public comments since Kyrie Irving asked to be traded, Gilbert would not confirm whether he'll honor the All-Star point guard's request, but he also didn't rule out the real possibility that Cleveland may deal its second best player — or if he thinks LeBron James will stay around beyond next season.

"These things are fluid," Gilbert said. "We think that Kyrie Irving is one of the best guards in the NBA. He was part of a championship, three years straight to the Finals and we value his talent — significantly."

Despite several direct questions about Irving's status, Gilbert would not provide any specifics about recent conversations with him or his agent. Gilbert said he expected the 25-year-old, whose jumper in Game 7 of the 2016 NBA Finals propelled Cleveland to its first championship since the Browns in 1964, to be at training camp with the team in September.

"Right now Kyrie Irving is under contract with the Cleveland Cavaliers for two or three years, depending on the last year," Gilbert said. "As of now he's one of our best players and sure, we expect him to be in camp."

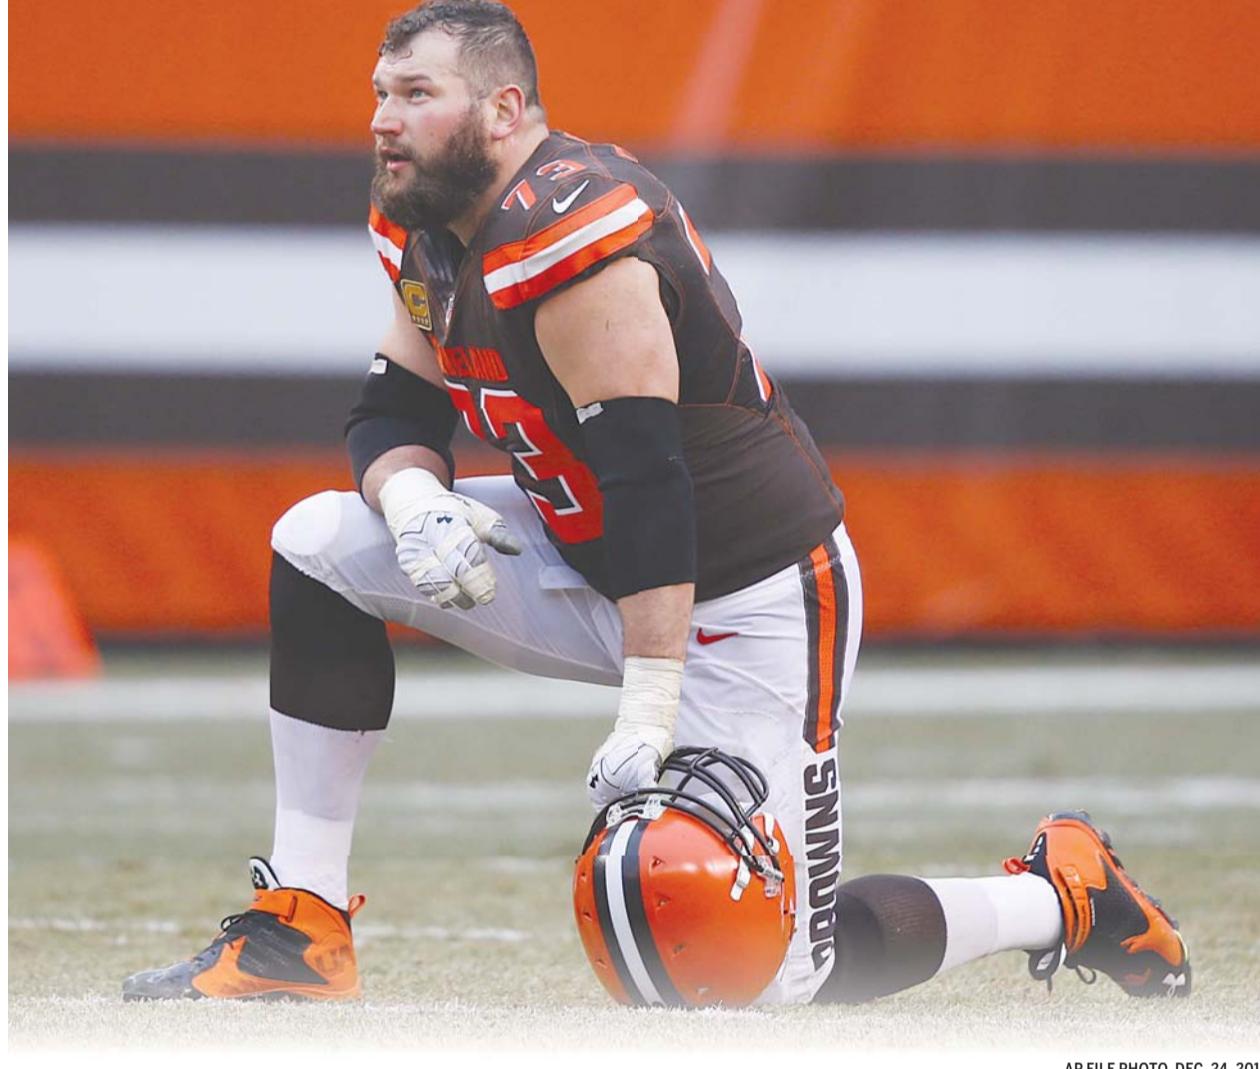

Gilbert was clearly attempting to avoid making things worse for the Cavs or doing any further damage to the club's relationship with Irving, who has blossomed into the one of the league's best backcourt players.

The club is expected to attract more than 500 swimmers for both individual and relay events with Firestone Area Swim Team from Columbiana County the favorite to defend its crown.

"This is an exciting time and a huge fundraiser for our club. We've held bi-weekly meetings since November with every swim family and club member working diligently, volunteering their time to make sure that this will be one of the best events around," meet director Anthony Lattanzio said.

The head swim coach for both Ursuline and Valley Christian high schools, and his club's assistant, Lattanzio is a junior at Youngstown State University majoring in pre-med, biology.

He notes that funds raised will benefit both his team and club.

"We have over 65 sponsorships from area businesses, along with political signs and various other sponsorships so you can see that club members have worked very hard to ensure success in that area," he added. "There's been a lot more attention in that area than even I had hoped for."

West Virginia Derby attracts 51 nominees

The 11/8-mile race for 3-year-olds is one of seven stakes on a nine-race program that will begin at the special first post time of 2 p.m. The Derby traditionally is the eighth race with a planned post time of 5:21 p.m.

Pac-12 to try shortening games

LOS ANGELES

The Pac-12 will shorten half-time and reduce the number of commercial breaks during its non-conference schedule this season as part of a trial program to reduce the length of its football games.

Halftime will be 15 minutes long, cut down from the usual 20-minute break. The number of commercial breaks will be reduced and they will be shorter in length, Pac-12 Commissioner Larry Scott said Wednesday.

Scott announced the initiative as the Pac-12 kicked off its media days in Hollywood. The experiment is intended to reduce ballooning game times in an era of up-tempo offenses running more plays and the increased scoring that comes with it.

Scott did not completely dismiss potential rule changes in the future to address the length of games.

Wizards extend John Wall for $170 million

WASHINGTON

The Washington Wizards have signed John Wall to a $170 million, four-year contract extension that begins in 2019-20.

Team President Ernie Grunfeld announced the completion of the deal Wednesday. Wall said in a video posted on Twitter on Friday that he had agreed to the extension.

Wall's deal includes a player option for the final season in 2023-24.

Owner Ted Leonsis said extending Wall gives the Wizards stability for years to come. The team also matched a $106.5 million, four-year offer sheet that forward Otto Porter Jr. signed with the Brooklyn Nets and has guard Bradley Beal signed through 2020-21.

Wall, a four-time Eastern Conference All-Star, is the third player this summer to get a designated player "supermax" extension, joining Houston's James Harden and Golden State's Stephen Curry.

Cowboys RB Elliott ignores reporters

Former OSU star facing off-field issues

Associated Press

OXNARD, CALIF. Ezekiel Elliott stopped for a few moments to greet military personnel and pose for a few pictures on the opening day of training camp.

Just like that, the star running back of the Dallas Cowboys darted out of a large crowd of reporters and ran toward a fence to sign a few autographs.

Last year's NFL rushing leader as a rookie isn't talking to media members because of lingering issues off the field, but Elliott is still hamming it up with adoring fans. And he's also going through complete workouts a year after a hamstring issue limited his time in camp.

"I'm not even worrying about Zeke because that guy loves football," said receiver Dez Bryant, who had his share of trouble upon entering the league in 2010.

"I understand it's more than football. He's got a great supporting cast and he can't lose with guys like us around him."

The NFL has been investigating Elliott for more than a year over a domestic violence complaint that prosecutors in Ohio declined to pursue.

Owner Jerry Jones seems less convinced than he was a few months ago over whether the former Ohio State star will get suspended.

Elliott potentially damaged his standing a week before training camp by getting involved in a bar fight that ended with a 30-year-old man getting punched in the nose, although Elliott's name didn't appear in the police report.

Dallas police halted the investigation when the man who was punched couldn't be reached. Jones has said he doesn't have any other details on the incident.

While Elliott waits for word from the NFL, he's preparing for an encore to his 1,631-yard season that helped the Cowboys take the top seed in the NFC at 13-3 before losing to Green Bay in a divisional playoff.

Elliott, who turned 22 the day the Cowboys reported for camp in California, wasn't the only rookie sensation for Dallas. Dak Prescott won NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year honors with one of the best debuts for a quarterback in league history.

And Prescott has proven to be a solid citizen off the field after having to answer to a drunken-driving charge in his college town of Starkville, Miss., after the Cowboys drafted the former Mississippi State standout.

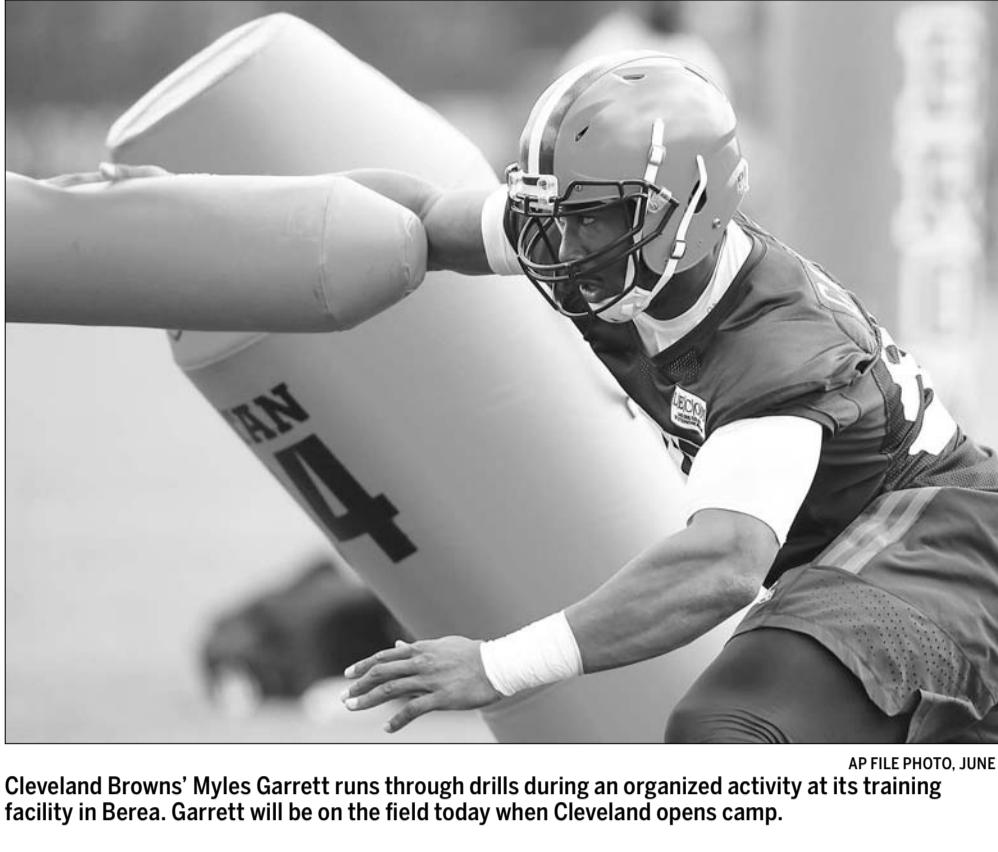

Prescott has since been cleared in the case, but was emphatic a year ago in saying it wouldn't happen again.

"I've made probably as many bad decisions as any of these guys have, only being 23, so I'm definitely not one that I can point fingers and be mad," said Prescott, who turns 24 Saturday. "All I can do is give from my young experience and the things that happened to me."

If the budding franchise quarterback can help his young backfield mate, he doesn't want to share that possibility publicly.

"But definitely he's a good friend," Prescott said. "So yeah, I mean, I take pride in helping him out every way on and off the field, yes."

Bryant clashed with veterans when he was a rookie and faced lawsuits over unpaid jewelry bills. He had a run-in with police over wearing sagging pants in a mall, and then a more serious brush with the law in a domestic incident with his mother.

Browns' top draft pick ready for camp

BEREA

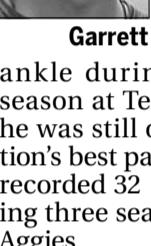

The Cleveland Browns already have their first win: Myles Garrett is ready for training camp.

The rookie defensive end and No. 1 overall pick in the NFL draft has recovered from a foot sprain and will be on the field Thursday when Cleveland opens camp following a miserable 1-15 season.

Garrett suffered a left lateral foot sprain while rushing quarterback Brock Osweiler during minicamp in June. He was placed in a walking boot and there was some concern that he might be sidelined for an extensive period.

However, coach Hue Jackson said Wednesday that Garrett is "totally healthy" and will be on the field for the team's first workout. Garrett will be monitored during practices and it's possible he could be kept out of some drills.

"We will definitely monitor him but I think he's totally healthy, maybe hasn't done all the conditioning that you like to see right before training camp," Jackson said. "But I think he's up to speed and ready to go. And he's looking forward to it."

Garrett was limited by a sprained ankle during his junior season at Texas A&M, but he was still one of the nation's best pass rushers. He recorded 32 1/2 sacks during three seasons with the Aggies.

Despite their need for a franchise quarterback, the Browns locked in on the 6-foot-4, 275-pounder and selected Garrett, who quickly impressed Cleveland's coaches and his new teammates with his speed off the edge.

But when Garrett collapsed to the ground during an 11-on-11 drill, it appeared his injury could be serious and yet another blow for the Browns, who have endured more than their share of costly injuries in recent years.

The fact that he'll be in pads and not on crutches is already a victory.

"I was super excited that he was OK," cornerback Joe Haden said. "When he went down, it was just ... injuries happen, but sometimes it seems like it happens to us even more. But I was just hoping that he would be able to be good to go."

Haden has kept tabs on Garrett and thinks the 21-year-old can have an immediate impact on Cleveland's defense.

"I actually watch Myles a lot just to see what he's got," Haden said. "The way that he can move, the way that he can bend, how big and strong he is, I can tell that that's something I haven't seen too much of and I think that he can be a really, really good force on the team. I just hope our team is able to go into this season healthy and ready to go because I know we have a lot of players that are just ready to get after it and ready to change what happened last year."

"Me, for one, so just hungry to get back out there and start playing."

Also, Jackson said Cody Kessler will begin camp as the first-team quarterback. Kessler, who started eight games a rookie in 2016, will compete with Osweiler and rookie DeShone Kizer for the starting job.

CHARGERS

LA trades pick for Cardale Jones

COSTA MESA, CALIF.

The Los Angeles Chargers have acquired quarterback Cardale Jones from the Buffalo Bills in exchange for an undisclosed conditional draft pick. The clubs announced the trade Wednesday, four days before the Chargers' first full practice of training camp. The 6-foot-5 Jones led Ohio State to a national title during the 2014 season. After one more year with the Buckeyes, he was a fourth-round pick by Buffalo in 2016. Jones was a project for the Bills, where Chargers head coach Anthony Lynn spent last season as running backs coach before his promotion to offensive coordinator. Jones was inactive for 15 games in Buffalo before throwing 11 passes in the fourth quarter of the season finale.

Divers search for $100,000 earring

GAINESVILLE, GA.

An NFL star's diamond earring valued at more than $100,000 is now presumed lost on the murky bottom of a Georgia lake. WXIA-TV reported Tuesday that Atlanta Falcons star wide receiver Julio Jones lost it when he hit a boat wake and took a spill while jet skiing in Lake Lanier, about 50 miles (80 kilometers) outside Atlanta. He resurfaced but his pricey earring didn't. SCUBA divers have been searching the lake bottom, hoping to capture a flashlight's reflection off the jewelry amid old trees that have been submerged since the man-made lake's creation in the 1950s. So far, no luck. Falcons training camp begins Thursday and goes through Aug. 4. The first preseason game is Aug. 26 against the Arizona Cardinals, the grand opening of Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta.

Ex-Cowboy Whitehead joins Gang Green

FLORHAM PARK, N.J.

The New York Jets claimed wide receiver-kick returner Lucky Whitehead on Wednesday, two days after the Cowboys cut him following a shoplifting charge in what turned out to be a case of mistaken identity. A man used Whitehead's identity to steal $40 worth of food and drink from a Virginia convenience store in June. Dallas released him Monday after reports that Whitehead was arrested and subsequently cited for missing a court hearing. The Jets, desperate for help at receiver, claimed the three-year veteran and waived receiver Devin Street.

can scare you right now.

"But certainly monitoring is what you want to do right now and follow along as they continue the research and continue the studies."

Thomas said doctors have told him that memory lapses — he mentioned forgetting his car keys or why he was at the grocery store — could simply be aging and the result of a busy lifestyle. Thomas has three young children, and in addition to his full-time job as Cleveland's starting left tackle, he has other business ventures and is involved in charity work.

"Just because you forgot your keys on a day, that doesn't mean that's the canary in the coal mine," Thomas said. "At the same time, you have to remember that you did play in the NFL and it is a real possibility. I'm just monitoring it and I'm not worried about it right now."

Thomas, who has never missed an offensive snap in his career, cited his privacy when asked if he had undergone any testing after he had the memory lapses.

It's not that he's in denial or ignoring the problem, but he's not going to panic, either. "As studies come out and as the science gets better, maybe we'll have a better idea how to handle symptoms or the lack of symptoms," said Thomas, who believes he has never suffered a concussion. "There will be better studies and better tests for, 'Hey, you're an NFL player, and yes, you have an effect from the play that you've had in the NFL, and this is what we're going to try to do to cope with it. Or that's just a normal part of getting older and having more things going on in your life. Or hey, it's just genetics.'

"So it's obviously multi-faceted, so there's not one answer at this point."

Browns coach Hue Jackson said he has not spoken with Thomas about his memory issues. He appreciates Thomas' candor on the subject and is confident the 32-year-old tackle will look out for his best interests.

"Joe loves this game and what this game has done for him and what he has done for the game, so I'm sure we'll talk about it as we go a little bit," Jackson said. "Is it concerning? I think we're always concerned about our players' safety and health and that will always be first and foremost. But at the same time, we'll do what we think is best just like I think Joe will do what he thinks is best for him as well."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

New captain set to 'row the boat' for W. Michigan

Associated Press

CANTON

Western Michigan wants to show it's not a one-hit wonder. But Mid-American Conference West rival Toledo, with one of the nation's best quarterbacks, seems to have all the right pieces to grab the spotlight back from the Broncos.

The planets finally aligned for long-suffering Western Michigan in 2016. Embracing indefatigable coach PJ Fleck's "row the boat" mantra, the Broncos finished 13-1 and won the MAC for the first time since 1988 and only the second time in history. Their MAC West title broke Northern Illinois' string of six appearances in the conference championship game.

Fleck was snapped up by Minnesota after the season and took a half-dozen assistants and some top recruits with him. New coach Tim Lester, who played quarterback for the Broncos in the 1990s, will find out if Fleck left enough behind to keep them a contender in the MAC West.

Lester must replace quarterback Zach Terrell and top target Corey Davis. With the transfer of junior Tom Flacco, younger brother of Baltimore Ravens QB Joe Flacco, the door opens for redshirt sophomore Jon Wassink and other untested candidates.

"I really don't worry a ton about following the magical season," Lester said Wednesday at MAC Media Day. "Whether I was here or someone else was here, when Corey Davis and Zach walk out the door, you're going to be a different team. My biggest thing is getting the team to move on from that season. We're really focusing a ton on getting the new leaders to step up."

On the bright side, the Broncos return running backs Jamauri Bogan and Jarvion Franklin, who rushed for 1,300 yards and a dozen TDs, as well as eight starters on defense. Franklin could be one of the best in the country.

Toledo — the preseason media poll favorite — is loaded and ready to challenge.

The Rockets, looking for their first MAC West title since 2004, are led by fifth-year senior quarterback Logan Woodside and one of the best receiving corps in the conference.

The nationally televised meeting between Toledo and Western Michigan in the Glass Bowl the day after Thanksgiving could serve as an entertaining MAC West championship game.

In the MAC East, Ohio topped the preseason media poll, just edging Miami (Ohio). The Redhawks had a terrific second half last year when quarterback Gus Ragland returned after a knee injury. They return 17 starters.

Ohio, which won the East last year and was edged by Western Michigan in the MAC Championship Game, sorely needs consistent play from sophomore quarterback Quinton Maxwell. The Bobcats are still looking for their first conference crown since 1968.

place votes in the Missouri Valley Football Conference's preseason poll. Pelini was dismissive of the poll itself and said wasn't inclined to compare his team to the two sides above his: South Dakota State at No. 2 and top-ranked North Dakota State.

Where the Panthers have seen a more tangible impact from their postseason performance is on the recruiting trail and when scheduling out-of-conference opponents. YSU's national championship run left the coaching staff with just 25 days, to National Signing Day, but the team was able to sign 19 players and add a few transfers.

"I think it certainly helped, there's a lot of competition for players in this region," Pelini said. "Kids want to win, when you have the success we've had, maybe you have a chance to get in on kids that you previously couldn't get in the past."

"I thought we had a good recruiting year and our success had a lot to do with that. Hopefully we build on that and keep the momentum going."

On the scheduling side, Pelini and his MVFC coaching peers have noticed FBS teams have been reluctant to schedule any MVFC teams, lest they end up like Iowa, which saw its No. 11 rank fall after losing to North Dakota State, 23-21, last season.

"Teams don't necessarily want to play teams in our conference. They may want to play an FCS team, but they don't want to play our conference because of the challenges that come with that," Pelini said. "We have some things for the future — open dates that we're working to fill — and we're not getting a lot of takers."

The Panthers open their season Sept. 2 at Pittsburgh. Now more than ever, the head coach thinks the foundation is set.

"Hopefully some of that success we had last can carry over while we continue to build on our culture," Pelini said. "You do that and I think we have a fighting chance."

SWIMMING

FAST, the other six YSL club members hail from Boardman, Applewood, Canfield, Logan, Country Clubs and Warren Olympic Club.

Top swimmers from each club will compete in individual and relay events, looking to score points on their club's behalf.

Individual events include freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly while relay events consist of a medley (four swimmers competing with four different strokes) and free relay where all four swimmers perform free style.

The eight clubs will be divided into two divisions based on team size and teams with the most accumulated points from both divisions will be crowned champion.

Stav Diamandis is Poland swim club president and also co-meet director.

"This is a great way for us to showcase our club as we host other swim clubs, their swimmers and the many others who will be in attendance," he said. "A lot of time and preparation has gone into this so I hope that everyone appreciates our effort and will enjoy the day's event and our club."

All events will be streamed live with a 50-50 drawing, item raffles, big ticket 55" television and tickets to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame up for bid.

"We'll also have championship apparel for sale, a giant photo booth complete with championship logo for those wishing to capture the moment and a top-notch concession stand available that will provide both breakfast and lunch," noted Stephanie Markey, publicity chair. "We will serve everything from donuts, bagels and fruit to pulled pork sandwiches, meatball splashes, walking tacos and much, much more."

The event begins at 7 a.m. and will run until 1 p.m. with more than 5,000 expected to attend.

MLB games*

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants 2, Pirates 1
SAN FRANCISCO

Brandon Belt doubled in the go-ahead run in the bottom of the seventh inning in support of starter Jeff Samardzija, who threw seven strong innings in the Giants' victory. Pinch-hitter Miguel Gomez doubled to lead off the seventh for the Giants, who won their second straight and third of five. Denard Span sacrificed him to third and Belt drove a ball to left field that Starling Marte seemed to have trouble finding. It fell in front of him, allowing Gomez to score. Adam Frazier drove in a run for the Pirates, who lost their fourth in five after a six-game winning streak. Samardzija (5-11) allowed a run and four hits, striking out eight and walking two in winning for the first time since July 2.

Diamondbacks 10, Braves 3
PHOENIX

J.D. Martinez homered twice and Ketel Marte hit an inside-the-park two-run homer in the Diamondbacks' victory. Martinez hit his second and third home runs in the past three days, two of his first three as a Diamondback. It was Martinez's third multi-home run game of the season, the first two with Detroit. Marte ripped a high drive off the right field corner fence with one out in the bottom of the third inning, and the ball bounced and rolled back toward the infield with Braves outfielder Sean Rodriguez unable to gather it in.

Nationals 8 Brewers 5
WASHINGTON

Ryan Zimmerman and Adam Lind each had two-run doubles in a seven-run eighth inning to help the Nationals rally past the Brewers. Bryce Harper was ejected for arguing with home plate umpire Chris Segal after striking out in the eighth inning with runners on the corners.

AMERICAN LEAGUE
Royals 16, Tigers 2

DETROIT

Eric Hosmer matched his career high with five hits, including his first major league grand slam, and the Royals extended their winning streak to a season-high eight games with a rout of the Tigers. Hosmer entered with 117 homers but had not hit one with the bases loaded until he connected off Warwick Saupold in a nine-run seventh inning. Hosmer had six RBIs and scored four runs. Bruce Rondon was ejected with one out in the ninth after hitting Mike Moustakas on the back with a pitch, which caused both benches to empty.

Rays 5, Orioles 1

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

Evan Longoria and Steven Souza Jr. homered and Alex Cobb pitched seven strong innings for the Rays. Longoria's two-run shot off Baltimore starter Ubaldo Jimenez, his 15th of the season, put Tampa Bay up 2-1 in the sixth after a walk to Mallex Smith. Souza's 21st homer of the season came off reliever Darren O'Day in the seventh.

Blue Jays 3, Athletics 2

TORONTO

Justin Smoak hit a game-tying two-run homer in the ninth inning and Kendrys Morales followed with a game-winning blast as the Blue Jays rallied to beat the struggling Athletics. It was the sixth time this season the Blue Jays have hit consecutive home runs. Smoak and Morales have been involved in each of the past three occasions. Both homers came off A's closer Santiago Casilla (2-5). Joe Biagini (3-8) worked 2/3 of an inning for the win.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 0

SEATTLE

Chris Sale pitched seven innings of three-hit ball, top prospect Rafael Devers became the youngest Boston player to hit a home run in more than 50 years, and the Red Sox beat the Mariners. Barely 12 hours after the clubs wrapped up a five-hour, 13-inning marathon, the Red Sox got exactly what they needed from their ace to avoid being swept.

INTERLEAGUE

Phillies 9, Astros 0

PHILADELPHIA

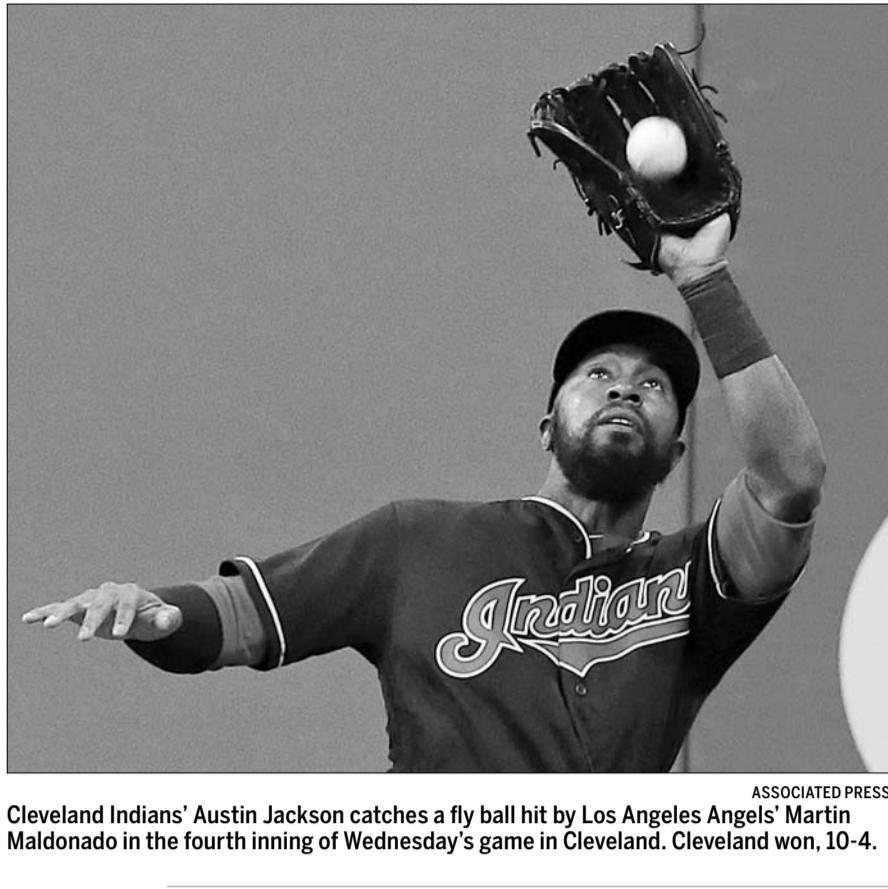

Cameron Rupp hit two home runs and had four RBIs and Aaron Nola set a career high with 10 strikeouts over six innings to lead the Phillies. Maikel Franco homered and doubled and Tommy Joseph had two doubles for the Phillies, who had 14 hits while setting season highs with five doubles and nine extra-base hits.

Yankees 9, Reds 5

NEW YORK

Luis Severino dominated over seven innings, Didi Gregorius and Todd Frazier homered, and the Yankees swept a two-game series. The Yankees have won six of eight, inching closer to first-place Boston in the AL East. Severino (7-4) did not allow a runner past second base until the seventh. He struck out nine, eight swinging, many on a devastating slider.

Mall income up

BOARDMAN

Washington Prime Group, operator of Southern Park Mall, reported net income of $135.5 million for the second quarter of 2017, up from $17.8 million reported during the second quarter of 2016.

The year-over-year improvement was largely attributable to a net gain of $125.4 million primarily related to the formation of an additional joint venture with O'Connor Mall Partners.

Funds from operations for the second quarter of 2017 were $110.6 million, up from $98.1 million made last year.

Enterprise zone

WARREN

Trumbull County commissioners Wednesday approved an enterprise zone agreement for Dawn Inc., a construction company at 106 E. Market St.

The company, which is owned by Dawn Ochman, is receiving a 10-year, 75-percent reduction in property taxes for a 7,600-square-foot office building and workshop it will build in an industrial park on Sferra Avenue Northwest.

The project, which will cost between $575,000 and $750,000, will allow the company to retain 23 employees and hire an additional three. The additional payroll will be $150,000, said Nicholas Coggins, who is in charge of economic development for the county planning commission.

Sales Tax Holiday

NILES

Ohio's Annual Sales Tax Holiday is scheduled for Aug. 4 through Aug. 6.

Throughout that weekend there will be no sales tax on any item of school clothing costing less than $75 or school supply up to $20.

On Aug. 5, shoppers at Eastwood Mall will have the chance to meet some of their favorite superheroes from The Justice League. Superman, Batman and Wonder Woman will be visiting the mall that day from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Parents and children are encouraged to stop by Center Court for an autograph or a photo. Children wearing their favorite superhero costumes will have the chance to win a mall gift card.

Trump announces $10 billion Foxconn plant in Wisconsin

WASHINGTON

President Donald Trump said Wednesday that electronics giant Foxconn will build a $10 billion factory in Wisconsin that's expected to create 3,000 jobs. The announcement comes at a critical juncture for a Trump administration that pledged to generate manufacturing jobs but has struggled to deliver results as quickly as the president promised.

FDA Panel: Not enough data to OK newest opioid

TRENTON, N.J.

Food and Drug Administration advisers have recommended against approving a new opioid painkiller intended to deter abuse with a unique feature. It releases a sticky, deep-blue dye if someone tries to get high by crushing, chewing or snorting pills. Panelists voted overwhelmingly Wednesday against approving Inteli-pharmaceutics International's generic version of extended-release Oxycontin, a key drug in the U.S. opioid addiction epidemic.

Ford's 2Q profit better than expected

Associated Press

DEARBORN, MICH.

Ford Motor Co. had a better-than-expected second quarter despite lower sales and upheaval in its executive ranks.

Net income rose 4 percent to $2 billion, thanks to a change in the company's tax rate and a strong performance from its credit arm.

Ford's new CEO Jim Hackett called it "a solid performance" but said the company still needs to get much more fit and nimble.

"We know we're going to be quicker and more purposeful in our decisions about where to play and how to win," Hackett told analysts and media in his first earnings call since he became Ford's CEO. "We're in an incredibly competitive industry and the competition just doesn't relax because we're thinking through a decision."

Adjusted profits of 56 cents per share easily surpassed Wall Street expectations of 43 cents, according to analysts polled by FactSet. One-time items included a $248

FORD RECALLING 117,000 VEHICLES

Ford Motor Co. is recalling nearly 117,000 vehicles because the bolts in the seat, seat belt or seat-belt buckle may fracture.

The recall involves the 2014 F-Series pickup, 2014 E-Series van, 2014-2015 Ford Escape and the 2015 Lincoln MKC SUV. Most of the affected vehicles are in the U.S., but there are 20,681 in Canada and 1,510 in Mexico.

Ford says if the bolt fractures, the seat or the seat belt's performance could be compromised in a sudden stop or crash.

million charge as the company shifted production of the Ford Focus small car from Mexico to China.

Ford's automotive revenue of $37 billion was in line with Wall Street's expectations. Total revenue rose 1 percent to $39.85 billion.

The elevated performance in the second quarter was due mostly to a lowering of the company's corporate tax rate, from 30 percent down to 10 percent, Chief Financial Officer Bob Shanks acknowledged. Ford has put some overseas losses back on its books in anticipation of changes in the U.S. corporate tax code, Shanks said. The company expects to have a 15 percent rate this year, but that will return to 30 percent next year.

Ford's full-year guidance shifted upward due to the tax change.

Stocks edge higher

Bond yields fall following Fed announcement

Associated Press

NEW YORK

U.S. stock indexes inched further into record territory Wednesday after AT&T, Boeing and others joined the parade of big companies reporting stronger profits than analysts expected. Stocks that pay big dividends were particularly strong after the Federal Reserve took a pause in its slow-moving campaign to lift interest rates, as Treasury yields sank lower.

While announcing its decision to hold short-term rates steady, the Federal Reserve said that it may begin paring the massive $4.5 trillion balance sheet it built up following the financial crisis "relatively soon," which some analysts took to mean as September. The Fed also said that inflation looks to remain below its target of 2 percent in the near term.

After the Fed's announcement, drops for Treasury yields accelerated, and the 10-year yield fell to 2.29 percent from 2.33 percent late Tuesday. The two-year yield sank to 1.35 percent from 1.39 percent.

Lower bond yields make the dividends paid by stocks more attractive, and the biggest dividend payers picked up momentum after the Fed's announcement. Utility stocks in the S&P 500 climbed 0.9 percent, for example, more than doubling their gain after the Fed's decision.

The best-performing area of the market was the telecom sector, which jumped after AT&T reported stronger second-quarter earnings than Wall Street had forecast.

Amazon plans to hire thousands in one day

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Amazon plans to make thousands of job offers in just one day as it holds a giant job fair next week at nearly a dozen warehouses across the U.S.

Those offered jobs on the spot will pack or sort boxes and help ship them to customers. Nearly 40,000 of the 50,000 jobs will be full time. Most of these jobs will count toward Amazon's previously announced goal of adding 100,000 full-time workers by the middle of next year.

The hiring spree is yet another sign of Amazon's massive growth at a time when traditional retailers are closing stores and cutting jobs.

It's also a way for Amazon to lock in employees before the start of the busy holiday shopping season, when other retailers look to hire seasonal workers. Retailers are facing a tighter job market; the nation's unemployment rate is 4.4 percent, near a 16-year low.

Same-day job offers, like Amazon is promising, are "extremely unusual," said Andrew Chamberlain, the chief economist at job site Glassdoor.

Amazon has long been known for investing the money it makes back into its businesses. Part of that involves opening new warehouses, or fulfillment centers, and filling them with employees. Consequently, Amazon has often reported quarterly losses, even as revenue grows.

The number of full-time and part-time workers at Amazon has swelled from 56,000 at the end of 2011 to more than 340,000 last year.

Amazon plans to expand further. It recently announced a $13.7 billion deal to buy organic grocer Whole Foods, it added Sears' Kenmore appliances to its website, and it's rolling out its own ready-to-cook meal kits, competing with companies such as Blue Apron.

The event will take place Wednesday from 8 a.m. to noon local time and will include tours and sessions with company representatives. Job prospects will also be introduced to robots and other automation technology Amazon uses at its warehouse operations.

The event will take place at 10 Amazon shipping sites. Besides Baltimore and Kenosha, they are Chattanooga, Tenn.; Etna, Ohio; Fall River, Mass.; Hebron, Ky.; Kent, Wash.; Robbinsville, N.J.; Romeoville, Ill. and Whitestown, Ind.

Amazon's stock increased $12.93, or 1 percent, to close at $1,052.80 Wednesday, after Amazon announced its plans.

Amazon.com Inc. said its jobs offer health insurance, disability insurance, retirement-savings plans and company stock. Pay differs based on location, according to job postings on Amazon's site.

Farmers reports second-quarter earnings

Staff report

CANFIELD

Canfield-based Farmers National Banc Corp. saw a year-over-year increase in its second-quarter earnings.

Net income was $5.7 million, up from $5 million reported in the second quarter of 2016 in a report released Wednesday.

Excluding acquisition expenses, net income for the three-month period would have been $5.8 million.

On March 13, Farmers entered into an agreement and merger plan with Monitor Bancorp Inc. in Holmes County, Ohio. This transaction is expected to close during the third quarter of this year. It will serve as an entrance into the Holmes County market for Farmers.

As of Dec. 31, 2016, Monitor had total assets of $43.3 million, which included net loans of $22.3 million and deposits of $37.2 million.

"We are looking forward to close our fourth acquisition in the past two years, which further enhances Farmers' brand and delivers long-term value for our shareholders," said Kevin J. Helmick, president and chief executive officer of Farmers, in a statement. "We remain focused on our strategic-growth plan, which has paved the way for the company to reach over $2 billion in assets in 2017."

Total loans were $1.51 billion compared with $1.36 billion during the second quarter of 2016.

Vallourec reports earnings

Staff report

YOUNGSTOWN

Vallourec Star and VAM USA's parent company, Vallourec in France, reported positive second-quarter results Wednesday.

The tubular-solutions company reported a 22.3 percent increase in revenue to $1 billion and adjusted net income of $3.5 million, compared with a loss of $37.5 million in the second quarter of 2016.

Vallourec's Vallourec Star produces steel pipe on Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard and its VAM USA plant provides premium threading for the pipes on Ohio Works Drive.

"In the U.S., demand for O&G [oil and gas] products remained strong thanks to an increased number of active rigs, enabling us to start passing through price increases," said Philippe Crouzet, chairman of the management board for Vallourec, in a statement. "We are now starting to see a flattening trend in rig count."

Over the first half of 2017, Vallourec recorded a 19.7 percent increase in revenue compared with the first half of 2016.

Revenue in the oil and gas market was up 39.3 percent in the second quarter of 2017 from the second quarter of 2016; down 26.1 percent in power generation; and up 15.8 percent for industry and other markets.

Over the second half of the year, Vallourec expects revenue and results in North America to improve compared with the first half of the year because of higher deliveries.

Allegiant posts 58th-consecutive profitable quarter million, up 16.2 percent from the $344.9 million made during the second quarter of 2016.

During the quarter, Allegiant announced the lease arrangement of 13 used A320 aircraft to be delivered later this year and

A new downtown bar will tap in to the pour-your-own concept

When the whistle blows, it will be time to wet your whistle at a new drinking establishment coming to downtown Youngstown.

Work has just begun on the Whistle and Keg, which will be located on the corner of West Federal and Phelps streets, in the space formerly occupied by Friends Specialty coffee shop.

The owners — brothers Joseph and Michael Thomas of Canfield — have acquired an original whistle from the long-gone Youngstown Sheet and Tube mill. They plan to mount it outside and blow it at 5 p.m. every day. It will be a way to pay homage to the city's industrial past, when the end of the shift at the mill was often followed by a cold one at the nearest watering hole.

The whistle will be a unique addition to the nightlife district. The bar will open in late August or September.

The Thomas brothers are lo-

ENTERTAINING THOUGHTS

Guy D'Astolfo

cal businessmen who recently returned to Canfield — Joseph from Columbus and Michael from Cleveland.

"We're optimistic about downtown, with the new amphitheater and hotel coming in, and Covelli Centre and Youngstown State University," said Joseph Thomas. "Our business model will fit well downtown. You can stop in before or after an event, and you can also leave when you are ready."

To understand what Joseph means by that last comment, you have to understand how the Whistle and Keg will work.

Its self-service concept is new to the area.

The new spot will offer 44 craft beers (it will not brew its own beer). Each person who enters will check in with an identification card and credit card, to start a tab. In exchange, they will get a wristband with an embedded chip.

A wall of taps will be located on the upper level at the rear of the long and narrow room. Patrons will scan their wristband on a pad in front of each tap and pour their own beer (a computer will keep track of how much they pour to determine the price). They can then find a spot in the main room, which will have high-top tables and couches and televisions.

This system means you won't have to wait for service, or your check, when the place is crowded and you are trying to get to a show at Covelli or Powers.

A limited food menu also will be offered.

While the concept exists in other parts of the United States, the Whistle and Keg will be the first place in Northeast Ohio and western Pennsylvania to use it, said Joseph.

The establishment will be open seven days a week — until 2 a.m. on weekends.

One thing it won't have is loud music. "It will be a place for conversation," said Joseph. "It will be comfortable."

The room already has an industrial look, with an arch of faux steel beams across the ceiling, which will remain. It will be completed with new decor that will include reclaimed wood and locally made works of art.

Before the Whistle and Keg opens, another downtown craft-beer drinking establishment will reopen.

The Rust Belt Tap House on West Commerce Street has been closed for a few weeks as it undergoes changes. Founder and co-owner Ken Blair said the bar — which is also known as a good spot for conversation — will reopen as early as next week with a new ownership team.

MUSIC WITH A MISSION

Rock, jazz bands raise money for shelter

Staff report

BOARDMAN

Music with a Mission, a music festival that will raise money to help the Rescue Mission relocate, will take place Sunday from 1 to 8 p.m. at Magic Tree, 7463 South Ave.

Six bands — Redline, 80's Proof, the Dickey White Band, Howard and the Point Five Band, Guys Without Ties and Simple Truth — will perform.

Admission is $10 (free for children under 12). The event will include a basket auction.

All of the proceeds will go toward the Rescue Mission of the Mahoning Valley's effort to move out of its current building and into a new building that it intends to build on a 17-acre plot of land on the South Side, behind Eagle Heights Academy (formerly South High School).

The Rescue Mission is currently located in an 87-year-old building on Martin Luther King Boulevard that is beyond repair and is often overwhelmed with families in crisis who need food and shelter.

It can house up to 165 persons at a time but has only three small bathrooms. Many patchwork repairs have been done over the years to fix leaks and deteriorating walls, but the building's overall condition is poor.

To learn more about the fundraising effort, go to moveourmission.org.

Here is the schedule for Sunday's Music with a Mission event:

- ◆ 1 to 1:50 p.m.: Simple Truth
- ◆ 2:10 to 3:05 p.m.: Guys Without Ties
- ◆ 3:20 to 4:25 p.m.: Howard and the Point Five Band
- ◆ 4:40 to 5:30 p.m.: The Dickey White Band
- ◆ 5:45 to 6:45 p.m.: 80's Proof
- ◆ 7 to 8 p.m.: Redline
- ◆ Between sets: Solo act Peter Crescimanno.

Mike Yurchison, one of the organizers of Music with a Mission and the drummer for 80's Proof, said the mission provides hundreds of meals a day and help for everyday people who have fallen upon hard times. He is a volunteer at the facility.

WWE summer tour at Covelli Centre

Cesaro: a Swiss you can't miss

By GUY D'ASTOLFO
dastolfo@vindy.com

YOUNGSTOWN

One WWE hall of famer visited Covelli Centre this week, and some future hall of famers plan to drop by this weekend.

President Donald Trump, who was inducted into the WWE hall of fame in 2013, had a rally at the arena Tuesday. And while the battling billionaire-turned-commander-in-chief didn't get in the ring, he did take his usual no-holds-barred approach in firing up the crowd.

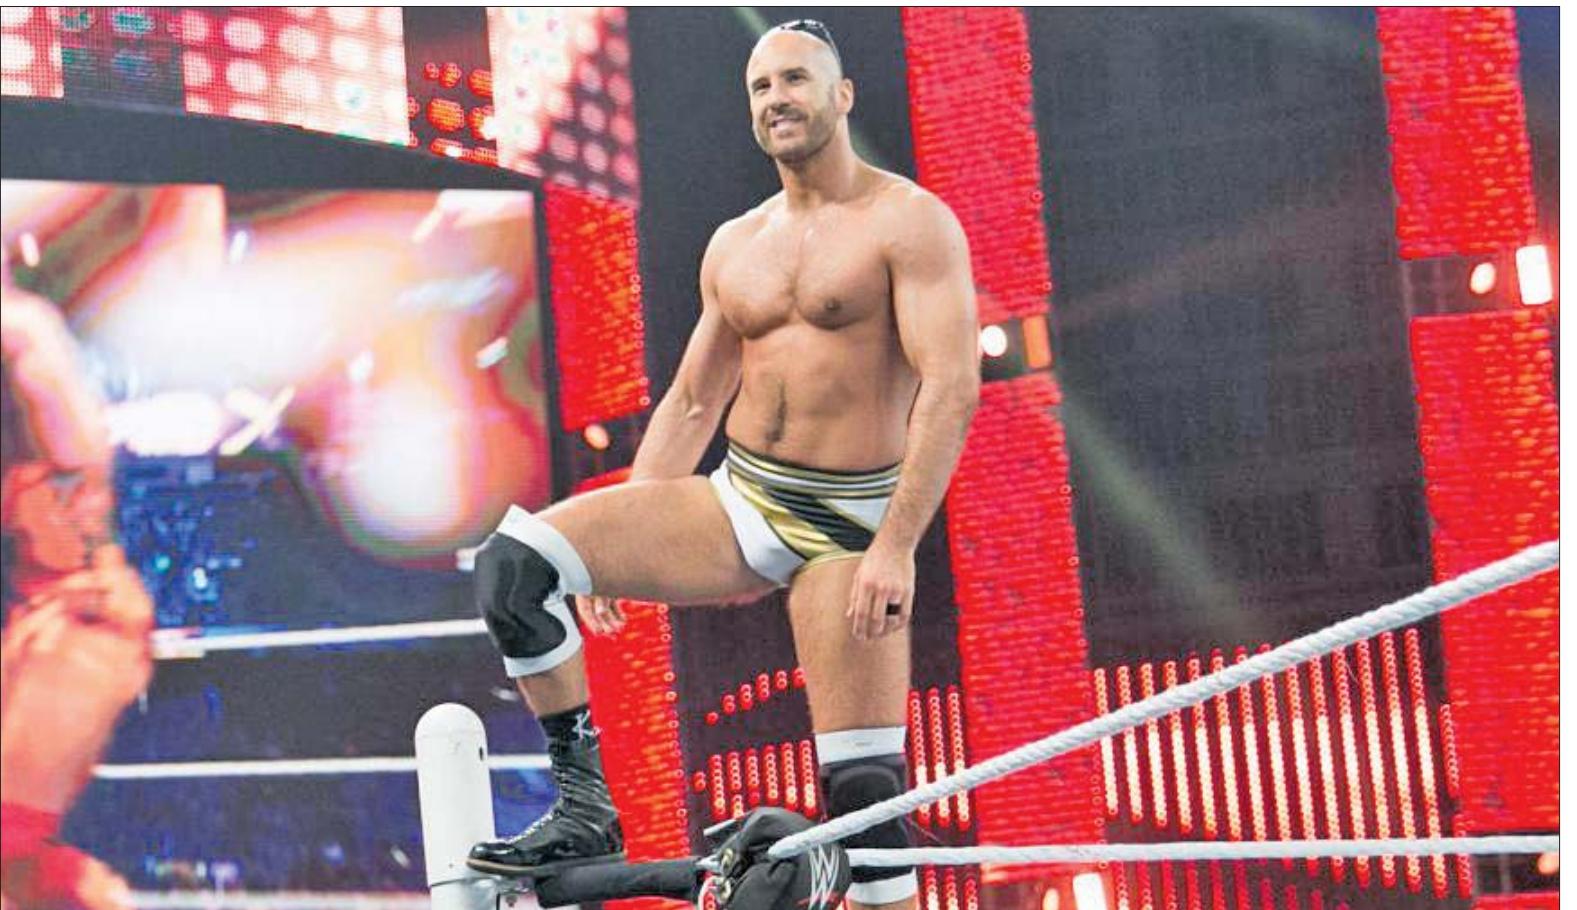

On Sunday, things will get even more raucous when the WWE Raw summer tour, featuring some of the top names in the circuit, arrives. The star-laden card includes Roman Reigns vs. Bray Wyatt, Dean Ambrose vs. The Miz, the tag team of Sheamus and Cesaro and many more.

Cesaro is known for his strength and is frequently mentioned as one of WWE's best and most underrated performers. He was recognized by the Wrestling Observer newsletter as the Most Underrated Wrestler in the world a record four times, from 2013 to 2016.

He's also a rarity in the world of pro wrestling and not just because he combines wiry athleticism with a 6-foot-5, 235-pound frame. That's because he is a native of Switzerland – which isn't exactly a hotbed of the wrasslin' game.

Born Cesaro Castagnoli, the Swiss cyborg is a current Raw title holder, with his tag team partner Sheamus.

He gave an emphatic "no" when asked if wrestling is big in Switzerland. Then how did the former rugby player manage to take his career in that direction?

Cesaro, above, is known for his strength and is frequently mentioned as one of WWE's best and most underrated performers. At right, Cesaro stomps Samoa Joe.

"I was introduced to wrestling about 20 years ago and fell in love with it," he said in a phone interview. He started off in the trenches and worked his way to the top.

"My first show was in 2000, in a small night club before 12 people," said Cesaro, who is fluent in at least five languages and speaks in a European accent that has hints of all of them. "I did it the hard way."

He arrived in WWE in 2012.

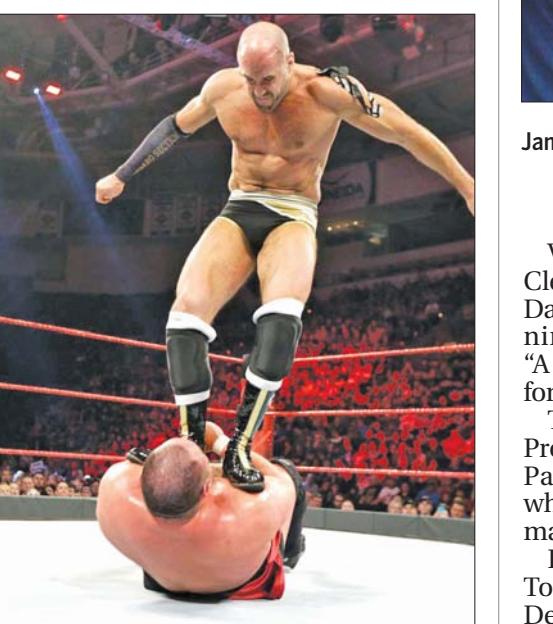

Cesaro and his European counterpart Sheamus dethroned New Day late last year and took control of the tag team titles.

"He's a WWE hall of famer," said Cesaro. "And I'll leave it at that."

YOUNGSTOWN

A The cabaret nights I've done over the past two years have been with friends (Todd Hancock, Maureen Collins, Natalie Sprouse), family (my siblings Eric and Janeen), and musicians traditionally associated with Easy Street. And the music has very much been in a traditional vein – material I'm used to doing here in Youngstown. The musicians I'll be with for this one are from Pittsburgh, and their forte is jazz; that will be a new sound coming from me.

The show, presented by Easy Street Productions, will take place in the Flad Pavilion-Overture Restaurant area, which will be transformed into an intimate cabaret space.

Backed by the rhythm section of Tom Wendt on percussion and Tony DePaolis on bass, the performance will showcase a variety of standards and popular songs. Selections by Irving Berlin, Jule Styne, Rodgers and Hammerstein, Michel Legrand, Henry Mancini, Johnny Mercer and other Great American Songbook contributors will be on the set list.

McClellan is a veteran of many Easy Street shows and is also the operations director of the Youngstown Playhouse. He and May first worked together in 2013 at the Fairmount Hotel in Pittsburgh.

Easy Street's cabaret nights make for a unique evening. Seating is at small tables, with a wait staff serving a variety of beer, wine and cocktails. A small plate menu is also available. Doors open at 6 p.m., and the show starts at 7:30 p.m. Reservations are recommended; call 330-744-0264.

McClellan discussed the upcoming show in this exchange:

Q You have been a featured artist in Easy Street's cabaret nights before. What will make this concert different from your previous appearances?

'A Different Corner'

McClellan in cabaret show of jazz standards

IF YOU GO

- ◆ What: "A Different Corner" with James McClellan and Daniel May
- ◆ When: 7:30 p.m. Saturday (doors open at 6 p.m.)
- ◆ Where: Overture restaurant, 260 W. Federal St., Youngstown
- ◆ Tickets: $25 (table seating); call 330-744-0264 or go to youngtownsymphony.com.

Q What particular songs are you looking forward to performing most?

A I'm not usually the right type for the lead roles in Rodgers and Hammerstein musicals, but in this setting, anything is possible, so I have a few of their songs on the program. Ditto with Lerner and Loewe. And even though most of the songs we chose come from the Great American Songbook [music from the '20s through the '60s], I've included Elton John and George Michael on the list.

Q Which do you prefer: performing in a big musical production on the Powers Auditorium stage or singing in an intimate cabaret setting?

A I have no preference. It's electrifying to perform in front of a big crowd from a big stage, but it's a very intimate experience being in a smaller space with the audience right there, close up. In the setting at the DeYor, you can see every individual sitting out there, and you begin to personalize what you're singing.

Bomer plays a haunted whiz kid in 'Last Tycoon'

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

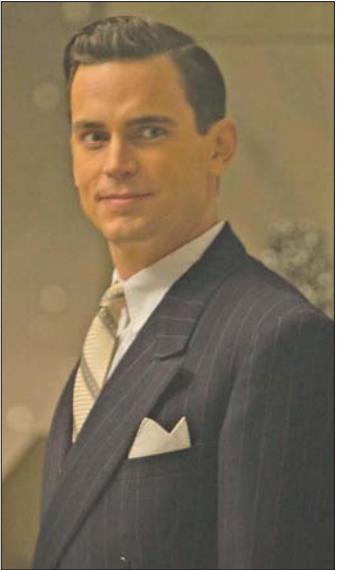

NEW YORK

When he landed the lead in Amazon Prime's "The Last Tycoon," Matt Bomer had never read the timeless F. Scott Fitzgerald novella on which the series is based. But by chance, he had just finished another celebrated novel set in 1930s Hollywood, Nathanael West's "The Day of the Locust."

"I was contemplating the themes both books deal with: How do you maintain your artistry in such a commercial industry as the movies – and can you? And I was thinking about how much Hollywood has changed since that time period. And how little has really changed."

Before long, Bomer would be poring over Fitzgerald's prose to prepare for his "Last Tycoon" portrayal.

To be released Friday, "The Last Tycoon" tells of Monroe Stahr (Bomer), a whiz-kid film producer with a sure eye but a broken heart – a congenital heart defect that

It's only the latest ambitious turn by the 39-year-old actor, who's best known from his six seasons as transformed con artist Neal Caffrey on "White Collar," but who has also starred in "Magic Mike" and its sequel, the TV film "The Normal Heart" alongside Julia Roberts and Jim Parsons, and on "American Horror Story: Hotel."

This "Last Tycoon" follows in the footsteps of the 1976 feature film directed by Elia Kazan and starring Robert De Niro and Robert Mitchum.

"Kazan and De Niro? We're not trying to replicate the movie!" exclaims Bomer. "But with our series we can take the essence of the original story and fan it out. A lot was going on then."

means he is living on borrowed time while he mourns the recent death of his wife (and the studio's biggest star). Consumed with making a perfect motion picture that can stand as his legacy, he clashes with his studio boss and father figure, Pat Brady, played by Kelsey Grammer.

Red Phoenix film festival adds to Sharon's art scene

Staff report

SHARON, PA.

The second annual Red Phoenix Underground Film Festival will take place Saturday and Sunday at the former armory building, 49 S. Sharpsville Ave., with more than 60 short and feature films from across the globe.

Admission is $5 each day and grants the attendee access to all films showing that day. Offerings range from quirky shorts and music videos to action films and thrillers. Hours are 11 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday.

The festival is co-directed by filmmakers Andrew Bard and Janet Llavina, owners of Neo Phoenix Studios.

"Being new to the area, I noticed Sharon's art scene was really starting to grow, and I wanted to grow with it," said Bard. "I enjoy being able to walk down the street and see that art has a very strong presence. Making the choice to have a film festival in Sharon was simple. I want to live in a city that embraces all the arts, including films. Film is one thing we see that is absent in Sharon, and we want to change that."

Each day's offerings are arranged into blocks of films, grouped as drama/romance, family friendly, comedy (for adults), action and sci-fi (adults only) and horror (adults only).

Growing great vegetables, try planting garlic

By BOB EISTER
OSU Ext. master gardener volunteer

If you want to chase away pesky monsters or improve your health, try planting garlic.

It is a perennial bulb, is in the lily family (Alliaceae), along with onions, chives and leeks.

Garlic likes to grow in a sunny, well-drained, weed-free area of loamy soil. In late September or early October, fertilize the area before planting, based on soil test results.

Plant by separating cloves from the main bulb and plant each clove 1 to 2 inches below the soil and 4 to 6 inches apart. Rows should be 12 to 18 inches apart.

Be careful of the shallow roots around the bulbs when cultivating and pulling weeds.

Water and cover with mulch to protect from freezing; remove mulch in the spring.

Cloves planted by early October will develop roots before the ground freezes. They obtain the required chilling process and are ready to take off in spring.

Choose a hardneck variety. Soft-neck varieties have a longer storage life, but are grown in warmer climates. Our OSU experts say these may develop a bitter taste when grown here in Ohio.

The hardneck varieties (Allium sativum var. ophioscorodon) produce a flower stalk, or, technically, a scape, and are often termed "topsetting" or "bolting" varieties.

Hardnecks are better suited to cold winters and have a milder flavor, but a shorter storage life.

In a study at Michigan State University, hardneck varieties German

White and Music provided good yields.

If you like a hotter flavor, Polish Softneck garlic has good production and excellent storage life.

Garlic is harvested in July. The bottom half of the foliage will turn brown. At this time, you can use a garden fork to slowly raise them out of the ground.

Plants can be dried whole or bulbs can be cut off, but they must be dried by placing on screens or newspaper and kept in a place that is dry, warm and windy. Direct sun is not recommended. It takes seven to 14 days to dry them.

Garlic can be placed into a cool (32-38°F) dry storage for six months. Most gardeners place bulbs in a cool, dry basement.

In addition to making your meals tastier, garlic has many health benefits. Garlic is used for many conditions related to the heart and blood system. These conditions include high blood pressure, low blood pressure, high cholesterol, inherited high cholesterol, coronary heart disease, heart attack, atherosclerosis, and more.

It has also been shown to have antimicrobial properties.

Although not all of these are scientifically proven, garlic is a great source of antioxidants.

When planting next year's garlic, remember: Rotating crops in the garden, providing good air movement and well-drained soil will help avoid common pest and disease issues.

For information on garlic and varieties to plant in your garden, visit <http://go.osu.edu/moregarlic>.

SPECIAL TO THE VINDICATOR

Pollinators, including bees, butterflies, hummingbirds, moths, wasps, flies, beetles, and even some bats are responsible for assisting over 80 percent of the world's flowering plants.

Our future flies

By SUSAN MCLELLAN
OSU Ext. master gardener volunteer

Without the pollinators, we wouldn't have much to look at—or eat.

Pollinators, including bees, butterflies, hummingbirds, moths, wasps, flies, beetles, and even some bats are responsible for assisting over 80 percent of the world's flowering plants, and over three-quarters of the staple crop plants that feed humankind.

Pollinators are at risk. In many areas of the country and in Ohio, pollinators are in decline.

The loss of Ohio's nonnative honey bees has been widely publicized in recent years. Many of Ohio's native bees, including bumble bees, are disappearing.

More than 150 food crops in the U.S. depend on pollinators, including almost all fruit and grain crops.

The USDA estimated that crops dependent on pollination are worth more than $10 billion per year.

Many wildflowers rely on only a few species of pollinators in order to bloom and produce seed for the future.

Habitat loss harms pollinators. We can help pollinators by creating a pollinator-friendly landscape around our homes and workplaces.

For example, a bundle of hollow sticks hanging from a tree limb can provide a bee home. Bee condos can be built by drilling holes of varying diameter about 3 to 5" deep in a piece of scrap lumber mounted to a post or under eaves.

We can help sustain the pollinators by planting flowers, vegetables and trees that supply vital nectar and pollen. Here are a few tips:

◆ Pollinators need a wide variety of plants that bloom from early spring into late fall. Help pollinators find them by planting in clumps rather than single plants. Include native plants that are adapted to our local climate, soil and pollinators.

◆ Night-blooming flowers will support moths and bats.

◆ Before planting a flower, be sure it is on the list that provides adequate pollen and nectar.

◆ If you want colorful butterflies, grow plants for the caterpillars. They will eat the leaves, so place them where unsightly leaf damage can be tolerated.

◆ Create a damp salt lick for butterflies and bees. Use a dripping hose, drip irrigation line, or place your bird bath on bare soil to create a damp area. Mix a small bit of sea salt or wood ashes into the mud.

◆ Try putting out slices of overripe bananas, oranges and other fruits, or a sponge in a dish of lightly sea salt water and watch which butterflies come to investigate.

◆ Hang a hummingbird feeder. Clean feeder with hot soapy water at least twice a week.

Use pesticides sparingly (even the ones that are labeled organic). Use Integrated Pest Management (IPM), by following protocol in identifying the pest, determining the level of damage and using other options before choosing to use a pesticide. Be sure to read and follow the label for any pesticide.

Poisoned by touching mushroom?

Q My wife and I were in our backyard recently when I saw a good-sized mushroom. I bent down to pull it when my wife said, "Stop! It could be poisonous!" So, I'm asking if I could be poisoned by touching a mushroom?

Brandon from Niles

A Brandon, thank you for your question. We're glad to help, but want to be sure you won't use this to win an argument with your wife. For the record—never a good idea.

The answer is, no, you cannot be poisoned by touching a mushroom. The toxins in poisonous mushrooms must be ingested before they can cause you any harm.

Your question made us think about providing more information about wild mushrooms to help the public understand them better.

What is a mushroom? Mushrooms are the fruiting (reproductive) bodies of some fungi whose purpose is to disperse spores to start a new generation of fungi.

Mushrooms can be found just about anywhere: in lawns, pastures, forests, in mulch, on stumps, living trees and in unusual locations like basements and on plasterboard walls.

The most common time to see mushrooms is in the spring or fall after a rain: but they can be found all year long if conditions are favorable.

The fungi that produce the mushrooms play important roles in the environment.

There are at least 2,000 kinds of wild mushrooms in Ohio. Some are poisonous, some are delicious, but for most of them, it is unknown if they are safe to eat. Some people rely on rules of thumb for distinguishing edible mushrooms from poisonous ones. Such as, "If you see a squirrel eating a mushroom, it is safe to eat," – but this is false. Or, "Cooking mushrooms will make them safe to eat," – this, too, is false. In fact, none of the rules of thumb for selecting or preparing wild mushrooms have been found to be accurate.

The only way to safely eat wild mushrooms is to know what type of mushroom it is. But it is difficult even for mushroom experts (mycologists) to tell the difference between edible mushrooms and poisonous ones. When it comes to eating wild mushrooms the only rule of thumb to follow is: if you are not absolutely certain what type of mushroom you are about to eat... don't eat it.

For more on wild mushrooms through our updated factsheet, visit: <http://go.osu.edu/mushrooms>.

Their brother cheated parents out of savings

Dear Annie: My sister and I have a lying, cheating brother who has bankrupted our elderly parents through his recklessness and greed. He coerced them to sign over everything to him for loans and personal guarantees for his business, which went bankrupt. He does not help with their care or managing their financial problems, which he created. Our dad now has sky-high legal bills to manage losing their home and farm. My brother also took all their savings.

Though our parents are still alive, I know that soon we will be facing both of their funerals, and I can't stand the idea of planning funerals with this brother or even seeing him there. I can't imagine my siblings and me sitting in church with him and all of us taking turns telling about our parents' lives when our brother ruined them. Could my siblings and I walk out if he demanded to speak at the funerals? I hate to make a scene when the funerals should be about our mom and dad.

HEARTBROKEN

Dear Heartbroken: If you haven't already spoken to a lawyer, contact one today to see whether you have any means of recourse to protect your parents and salvage some of their finances and assets from your brother.

As for allowing your brother to speak at their funerals: Unless your parents explicitly say that they don't want him to, let him say his piece. What matters most is what your mom and dad want, and I don't think they'd want to see their children fighting at their funerals. Remember that whatever your brother has done, they've still always loved him as their little boy. Honor that by setting aside your (legitimate) issues with your brother, if just for two days.

Dear Annie: I am an 87-year-old widow with a common problem: estate issues. I have four children, two of whom are in moderate circumstances and two of whom are very wealthy. Many years ago, your predecessor said to divide the estate evenly regardless of the adult children's circumstances. I do not agree. I plan to leave everything to the two who are in moderate circumstances. I don't plan on having it be a surprise; I will tell all four of them very soon. What is your take on this? I know it can divide siblings. But I do not foresee problems. If I live 10 more years, they will all be about 70 when they inherit the money.

FUTURE BENEFACTOR IN NORTH CAROLINA

Dear Future Benefactor: Of course, it is ultimately your estate, and you're welcome to do with it whatever you'd like. But I have to side with Ann Landers on this issue as a general rule: Divide the estate evenly to avoid dividing your children from one another.

Ease your child's way into school

Heloise

Dear Heloise: As a follow-up to your column about helping ease kids into kindergarten, here are some more hints:

Call the school to see if you can stop by the classroom with your child a few days before school begins. Teachers are there to set up during this time, and you may meet the teacher and look around the classroom.

I also kissed my children's palms, so they could hold the kiss in case they needed it during the day. All three of my kids said they used the kiss! (They are in their 30s now!)

NANA RUTH, via fax

Nana Ruth, wonderful! Here are even more hints to get kids ready for kindergarten. Practice with your child so she or he can:

- ◆ Read some words.
- ◆ Identify shapes.
- ◆ Sort items by color.
- ◆ Use scissors properly.
- ◆ Listen to and talk about a story.
- ◆ Name what letter a particular item starts with ("L" for "lamp").

Heloise

Dear Heloise: When my favorite lipstick has run its course, I use a strong toothpick to reach down and circle the tube, then gently lift out the remaining lipstick.

I like to use a contact-lens case to give the leftover lipstick new life; it enables two different colors to choose from, or to get a new color by mixing them together.

M.L., Omaha, Neb.

Dear Heloise: Years ago, my kids used to hover around the kitchen wanting snacks while I cooked supper. I started putting out a plate of raw veggies and dip for them to eat. It was a win-win!

The kids were happy, I was able to cook, and they ate massive amounts of vegetables. They are now veggie-loving adults, and they have thanked me again and again for raising them with healthy eating habits!

MARIANNA C., LaGrange, Ga.

Dear Heloise: A fun summertime project for me involves cheap clay terra-cotta pots, available anywhere. I seal and paint them, and then I plant in them.

There are many plants and ivies that are hardy and easy to grow. I read the included instructions, make sure the soil is rich, gently break apart the roots when transplanting and water the plants correctly.

I like to add pretty rocks, shells, marbles or moss on top of the soil. They make the plants prettier.

I talk to my plants, too. I think it helps them grow — positive affirmation!

JULIE W., Devine, Texas

Julie, you've got a green thumb! There is some research to suggest that vibration may benefit plant growth, and sound is essentially vibration, so talking to your plants may help them.

Ultimately, water, light and good soil are the best tools for growth for your plants.

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I'm unable to use my perfume bottle without first spraying the room. There should be a bright color to distinguish the opening.

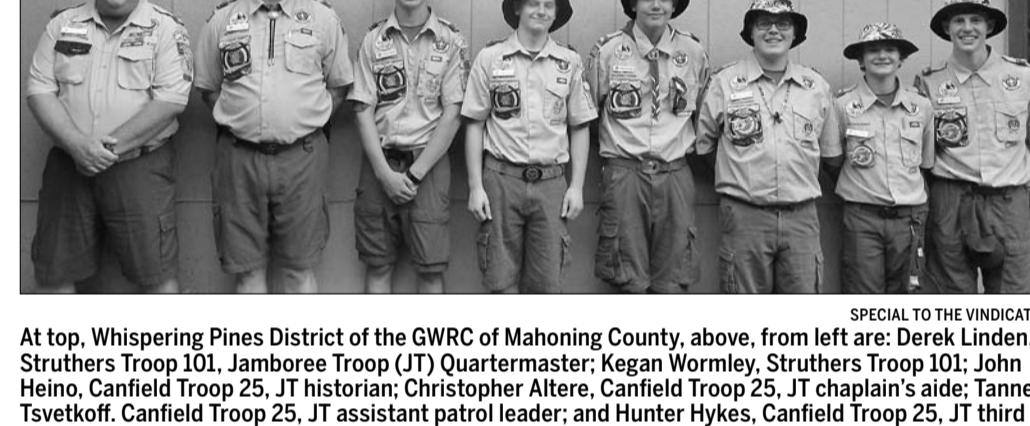

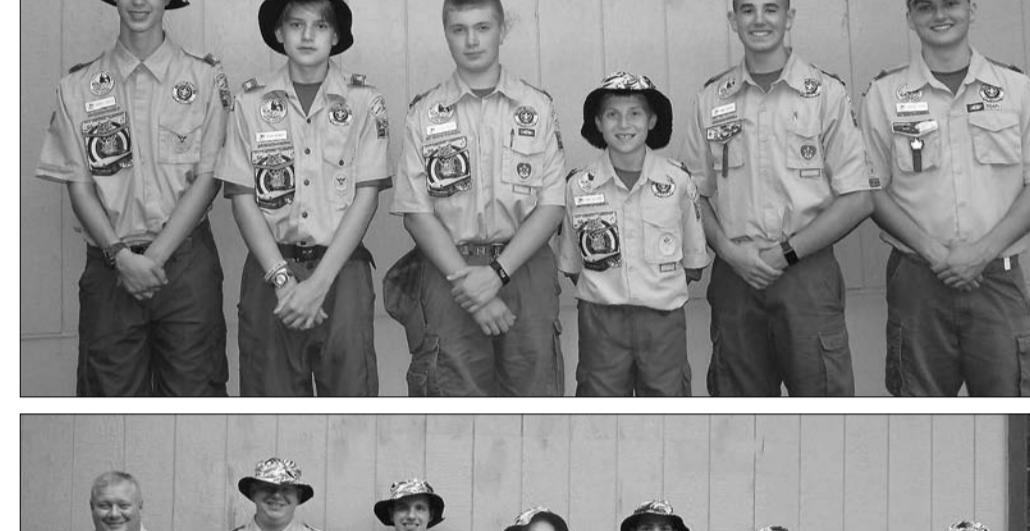

A READER, via email

Dab a bit of bright nail polish just below the opening so you can see it.

Scouts attend National Jamboree

MOUNT HOPE, W.VA.

Camp Stambaugh in Canfield was the setting for a group of 39 Boy Scout members who left July 19 for the 2017 National Boy Scout Jamboree taking place at the Summit Bechtel Family National Scout Reservation near Mt. Hope, W.Va. The Scouts will return Friday.

The jamboree is a 10-day event that helps prepare the youths who attend to face and overcome challenges while providing them with the opportunity to camp out, make new friends, try high-adventure activities, learn new skills, work on merit badges and enjoy the outdoors.

The first Boy Scouts of America National Jamboree was scheduled to take place in Washington, D.C., in 1935 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Scouting but was cancelled due to a po-

TODAY'S HOROSCOPE

Happy Birthday! In The Next Year: This solar return sees you opening your heart to new people and places, adding excitement and spice to your world. Your commitment to a cause will bring multiple rewards in 2018. You already know enough; you'll learn more on the job than you will in school, so sign up and get earning. Bonus bucks come in November. Libra and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 45, 38, 31 and 49.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Academy Award winner Helen Mirren recently confessed, "I don't really like romantic movies very much, and I hate talking about feelings, so I'm definitely a man in disguise." Mirren's Leo sun is accompanied by intellectual air sign influences, such as an Aquarius moon and Venus and Mars in Gemini. This British beauty is all the more attractive for her feminine strength and intelligence.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). To feel that everything is a necessity is a warning sign that you may be avoiding an uncomfortable reality. The truth is that your necessities are covered, for the most part. So what is this trumped-up sense of urgency really about?

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Eye contact is your most effective accessory. Of course, it's impossible to wear well while using your phone. It's like hiding a Cartier watch in your pants pocket.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). An obsession with the perfect moments of the past can be a lovely distraction every bit as fanciful as fictional storytelling. Tap into your own artistry. Play around with this. History is more art than science.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). No place is inherently superior. Each place is just a better or worse fit for the organism trying to inhabit it. Though there may be no point to building a metaphorical boat to get to the next place, build it anyway. You were meant to sail.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When you act intentionally, your action automatically has a purpose. When you act unintentionally, the purpose is lost. Get aware. If you don't know your own motivations, figure them out or make them up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The scene will change, and you will need to change, too. That which dissolves you allows you the opportunity to build yourself up anew (and to custom specs, too).

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The story of meeting a person is likely to reflect the story of the entire relationship. No pressure! But it does make you think twice about your social game -- and introductions specifically.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You have already learned what you need to do. Now the question is whether you are at liberty to do so. This is one of those times when it will be better to seek forgiveness than permission.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your contributions are quality and should be honored as such. Particularly precious is your attention. Loved ones need to value this, or you will not be very inclined to give it so well again.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Lao Tzu said, "Being deeply loved by someone gives you strength, while loving someone deeply gives you courage." In the next 24 hours, you'll get the opportunity to benefit from both sides of this statement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). People may behave in pitiful ways, but do not give them your pity. No one knows what to do with pity. You can't eat it or wear it. Give help, support or something more concrete instead.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You need many more muscles to frown than you do to smile. Both are more interesting than a blank, slack stare (creepy!), which takes no effort at all. Emotional engagement is your preferred work of the day.

LEO BIRTHDAY GIFTS: With the string of Leo birthdays just beginning, you may be thinking of that special lion in your life and wondering just how to make this royal of the zodiac feel special on his or her birthday and beyond. Lucky for you, Leo isn't difficult to please at all. Unlike actual royalty, who can be complicated and so privileged that the perfect gift is nearly impossible to conceive, the zodiac royalty is truly satisfied with a high quality of attention. It can be argued that love itself is not a feeling but a quality of attention. Seeing as one person cannot feel another person's emotions, attention is certainly the closest thing to proof of love. And even though Leo needs plenty of attention and adores to be lavished in eyeball time from just about anyone and everyone, the special people in Leo's life are held to a different standard. Leo requires them to be specifically attuned to Leo's needs and delights. Generic gestures will be publicly accepted with grace, but privately Leo will discount them. To please a Leo, pick up on the hints that the lion drops about what is truly desired. If you can prove that you were listening to Leo, you will steal this sign's big heart.

ODDLY ENOUGH

Forever's gonna start tonight: Wedding set for total eclipse

KANSAS CITY, MO.

An astronomy buff and her fiance want to make sure nothing eclipses their Missouri wedding ceremony.

Samantha Adams tells The Kansas City Star that her longtime fascination with the stars prompted her to schedule the ceremony for 12:30 p.m. Aug. 21 — during an extremely rare total solar eclipse.

"I couldn't think of a more dream-like wedding for myself," said Adams, 28, who has a tattoo of the space probe Voyager on her left arm.

The couple's entire ceremony in St. Joseph, Mo., will have an eclipse theme and every guest will be provided with a pair of solar glasses.

During the wedding, the couple plans to watch the eclipse with their guests before taking their vows.

Adams' fiance, Cameron Kuhn, 27, said he's happy to go along with the eclipse wedding because it makes his bride happy.

Adams once dreamed of becoming an astronaut, but multiple knee surgeries forced her to take a different path. She lives in Overland Park, Kan., and has a master's degree in industrial education.
