YOUNGSTOWN

THE 32ND ANNUAL GREATER Youngstown Italian Festival kicked off Friday with an abundance of pasta and puddles in downtown's Central Square.

♦INSIDE: A Friday afternoon storm knocked down trees and power lines, leaving thousands without power. A3

The celebration of the city's Italian cultural heritage includes food vendors, a variety of musical acts, raffles, auctions, a pageant and a morra tournament.

Thunderstorms rolled into the city in earnest in the late afternoon, dumping heavy rain on the network of tents and food trailers lining Federal Street between Phelps Street and Champion Street.

By 6 p.m., the streets were quiet other than the impact of raindrops on the asphalt. Most attendees sought refuge from the rain inside the wine and beer tent at the edge of the festival.

Criminal probes triple in Trump's early months

WASHINGTON

Attorney General Jeff Sessions pledged Friday to rein in government leaks that he said undermine American security, taking an aggressive public stand after being called weak on the matter by President Donald Trump.

Sessions

The nation's top law-enforcement official cited no current investigations in which disclosures of information had jeopardized the country, but said the number of criminal leak probes had more than tripled in the early months of the Trump administration. Justice Department officials also said they were reviewing guidelines put in place to make it difficult for the government to subpoena journalists

Beating victim's niece expresses anger, frustration

By JOE GORMAN
jgorman@vindy.com

YOUNGSTOWN

The big question LeTisha Underwood has about her uncle's beating is: Why?

Why would someone encourage two men to fight? Why would someone pay money if one of them was knocked out? Why would someone live-stream the video on the internet? Why didn't someone try to stop it or at least help her 64-year-old uncle before he was knocked unconscious?

"Why would you do something like that?" she asked. "What would enter in your mind that you would find it entertaining and not try to intervene?"

Her uncle, James Underwood, has been in St. Elizabeth Youngstown Hospital since late Monday, where he was taken by paramedics after he was injured at a fight at the Shell gas station, 3200 Market St., on the South Side that was streamed live on Facebook.

Police continue investigation into shootings that left 3 dead

By JOE GORMAN
jgorman@vindy.com

WARREN

Call logs from the Trumbull County 911 Center show there was a lot of activity Thursday evening around a Cadillac that had crashed into a house at Southern Boulevard and Solar Drive Southwest after gunfire broke out.

Police on Friday would not say if someone was shooting at the Cadillac from another car, or if shots were fired on foot or from someone inside the Cadillac, but three people were killed. If the deaths are ruled homicides, it would give the city seven homicides for 2017.

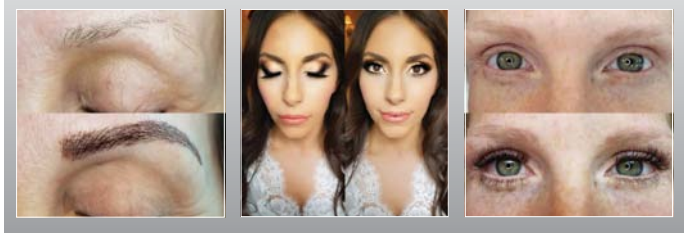

SO FAR IN 2017, TRUMBULL COUNTY HAS 13 HOMICIDES. LAST YEAR, THE COUNTY RECORDED A TOTAL OF 13 HOMICIDES.

Warren had four homicides in 2016, according to Vindicator files.

Killed in the shooting were Devonte West, 24, of Hamilton Street; Brandy Johnson, 37, of Merriweather Street; and Ju'Wante Harbin, 18, of Douglas Street.

Health screenings part of 5th annual African-American Male Walk/Run

Ernie Brown Jr.

Here is a call to the Mahoning Valley's men, particularly black and Hispanic men: Make sure you get to the Covelli Centre for free health screenings next Saturday and bring your walking and running shoes.

The fifth annual African-American Male Wellness Walk Initiative features a 5K walk/run, which will start about 9 a.m. The Youngstown-Warren walk/run is part of the largest health initiative for black Americans and other minorities in Ohio. This is the 13th year for the national initiative, which features other walks across the state and country.

The walk/run's goal is to raise awareness for preventable health diseases in men.

At 7 a.m., men are encouraged to take advantage of free health screenings. Let me emphasize the word free.

Those screenings include dental, audiology, podiatry, mental health, blood pressure, glucose, cholesterol, prostate, stroke and heart-attack risk assessment, body-fat percentages and a mobile dental unit.

The Rev. Lewis Macklin, the local event's energetic chairman, is also excited about a new addition to event.

Macklin

"This year, we will have a specialized veterans' pavilion. The Vet Center will bring a fully staffed mobile unit that will provide a full array of services to veterans and their families," the Rev. Mr. Macklin said.

He is assisted by hundreds of volunteers, who have been planning the event for months.

Mr. Macklin said there will be a youth wellness pavilion that will feature interactive activities, a rock-climbing tower and air-brushed T-shirts.

Here's another perk: The walk/run organizers and sponsors are providing free exercise equipment to everyone who gets a health screening while supplies last, Mr. Macklin said.

There also will be entertainment, exercise workouts, dancing and cooking demonstrations on how to prepare healthful meals.

The statewide sponsor is CareSource, which provides public health care programs, including Medicaid and Medicare, and is headquartered in Dayton. The organizing sponsor is the National Center for Urban Solutions in Columbus. The Ohio Commission on Minority Health also has had a long-standing relationship with the walk/run initiative.

Don't let the name of the event give you the impression it's only for black men. Mr. Macklin stressed the walk/run is open to the entire community.

Emphasis is placed on black and Hispanic men, however, because they have some of the highest health risks and yet, in many cases, they are reluctant to see doctors who can help reduce or prevent those risks.

Here are some of the sobering statistics as provided by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention:

- 37.6 percent of black men 20 years and older are obese; 39.7 percent of Hispanic men 20 years and older are obese.
- 40.9 percent of black men 20 and older have hypertension (high blood pressure) and/or are taking medication to control their blood pressure.
- 20.4 percent of Hispanic men 20 and older have high blood pressure.
- The leading causes of death for black men 20 and older are heart disease, cancer and stroke. A sobering stat is the top cause of death nationwide is homicide. For Hispanic men, the top causes of death are cancer, heart disease and unintentional injuries cause by accidents.

The walk begins at the Covelli, goes to the East Side via Andrews Avenue, and returns to the arena via Andrews.

Youngstown police officers and other volunteers will be along the route to ensure the safety of walkers. There also will be volunteers to provide water for walkers and runners.

I was one of the honorary chairmen for the first local event, and I've participated in four of the five walks.

Mr. Macklin said walk organizers this year will honor Ron and Lynette Miller of Youngstown and Carolla Williams of Warren for their longtime efforts celebrating black heritage.

The Millers have long been involved with local Kwanzaa celebrations that take place in the city from Dec. 26 through Jan. 1. Kwanzaa, started in 1966 by Dr. Maulena Karenga in Los Angeles, is a holiday that gives black Americans the opportunity to reunite with family and friends and to pay tribute to their African heritage.

They are founders and co-coordinators of Harambee Youth Organization, which has worked with youngsters to teach them to perform traditional African music and dances.

Ron, a lawyer, was the longtime executive director of the Youngstown Area Urban League and served on the Youngstown Academic Distress Commission. Lynette was a guidance counselor with Youngstown City Schools and is also a member of Delta Sigma Theta sorority. They have a daughter, Zakiya.

Williams and her late husband, Van Williams, co-founded the Trumbull County African-American Achievers Association. Carolla Williams spearheads Warren's annual homecoming events to lessen neighborhood tensions by promoting brotherhood. She is owner/operator of Van & Carolla's Barber Shop in Warren, Mr. Macklin said.

Also honored will be the late Olla Tate, a registered nurse, who served as a nursing volunteer at previous walks.

Go to www.aawalk.org to read about the history of the walk, and call 330-788-1696 for information or to volunteer your services.

Liberal group urges advertisers to boycott Fox's Sean Hannity

NEW YORK

A liberal advocacy group that targeted Glenn Beck and Bill O'Reilly for advertiser boycotts in the past now has its sights set on Fox News Channel's Sean Hannity.

Media Matters for America said Friday it will begin asking Hannity's advertisers to shun him and will ask thousands of its members to also contact companies. The group is setting up a stophannity.com website and plans to hire a plane to carry an anti-Hannity banner in the New York area.

His Fox show "really has moved beyond just being a conservative viewpoint to state-aligned disinformation and propaganda," said Angelo Carusone, Media Matters president.

Fox had no immediate comment on the effort Friday.

YOUNGSTOWN

A man ejected from a July 25 rally at the Covelli Centre who was demonstrating against President Donald Trump has filed an excessive use-of-force complaint with the city police department.

Video shows the man, who was in the crowd at the rally, being taken out by police. One officer has his hands near the person's throat. The video has been circulated across the country.

Staff Inspector Lt. Brian Butler, head of the department's Internal Affairs Division, said he would not name the officer involved or the person who made the complaint because the case is an open investigation. He said that information will be available when the case is closed.

Butler said the man filed the complaint Wednesday.

STORMS ROLL THROUGH

By SARAH LEHR

GIRARD

John Gramelt of Girard noticed the sky darken Friday afternoon just as the lights started to flicker in his home.

His wife, Laura, didn't initially hear the storm over the sound of the air conditioning, but when she walked outside afterward, she saw trees down throughout her Beechwood Avenue neighborhood.

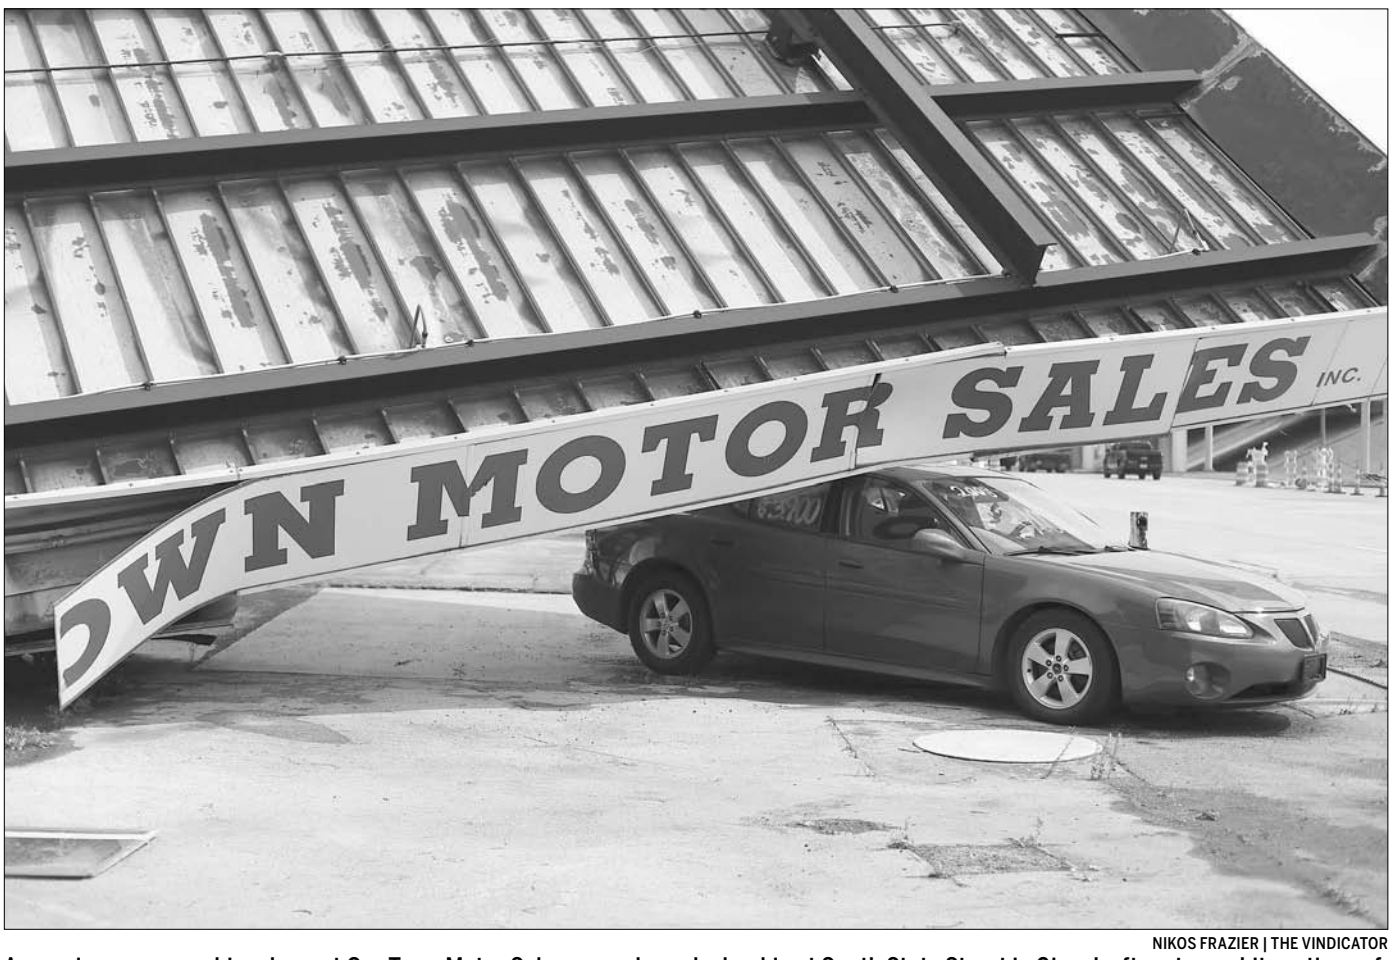

"It just came like out of nowhere," she said.

A storm hit the Mahoning Valley just after 2 p.m. Friday, leaving thousands of people without power. The impact was most acute in Girard, Liberty Township and Brookfield Township.

There was also another storm about noon in the northern part of Trumbull County, near Orangeville.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service in Cleveland said such clusters of storms are common in

4 arrested in probe of illegal gambling

BOARDMAN

Four people were arrested Thursday as part of an investigation into illegal gambling at two township businesses, according to a township police report and information provided by Ohio Attorney General Mike DeWine's office.

Mandi Bero, 37, and Miracle Petrino, 46, both of Canfield, face charges in connection with an illegal gambling investigation at Lucky's Internet Cafe on Boardman-Canfield Road, said Jill Del Greco, spokeswoman for the AG's office. Bero and Petrino are charged with two counts each of gambling and one count each of operating a gambling house, according to court records.

Tomaiko

Karen Maselli, 68, of Pittsburgh, and Dustee Tomaiko, 45, of Randolph, face charges in connection with an illegal gambling investigation at Play Skilz Arcade on Market Street, according to the AG's office. According to court records, Maselli and Tomaiko are charged with four counts each of gambling and two counts each of operating a gambling house.

All of the listed charges are misdemeanors.

All four suspects appeared in Mahoning County Area Court on Thursday for arraignment, where they pleaded not guilty.

The AG's Bureau of Criminal Investigation began investigating the establishments at the request of township police, said Del Greco. Search warrants previously were executed at both locations.

Township police and BCI agents raided the locations, as well as another one in Boardman Plaza, Dec. 7, according to Vindicator files. Sixty to 70 computer stations and more than 100 other items were taken from the three locations. Township Police Chief Jack Nichols said at the time that complaints led undercover police officers to begin investigating the businesses, eventually leading police to get search warrants.

Under state law, prizes "awarded as a result of the single play of a machine" cannot exceed $10.

Del Greco said she could not offer further comment on the case, as the investigation is ongoing.

TRUMBULL COUNTY

Commissioners work on budget changes

By JORDAN COHEN

WARREN

Trumbull County commissioners told their budget review committee they are moving ahead with some of the panel's 19 recommendations to shore up the county's budget.

Both groups admit, however, that implementing changes will be a long and probably drawn-out process.

"We do know some of this will take a long time, but the majority [of the recommendations] should be implemented as soon as possible," said Mike Matas, chairman of the volunteer committee. Matas, a Trumbull County resident, is budget director of Lake County.

Commissioners revealed five of the recommendations have been introduced in collective bargaining with the county's unions. These include wages and benefits, payments for unused sick and vacation time and insurance payments.

"Due to collective-bargaining law, we can't do details while negotiations are going on," said Richard Jackson, human-resources director.

John Talstein, a committee member, described at length what recent payments for unused sick leave and vacation have cost the county – approximately $1.3 million. Talstein said the majority of the payments were made to only "17 percent" of 2,000 employees.

While none of the county commissioners spoke out against any of the recommendations, they appeared to be more than interested in one of them: the appointment of a county administrator. The position has been vacant since 2006.

"If you don't have a leader, that's a problem," Matas told them.

The committee also had recommended hiring a centralized purchasing director, but commissioners indicated they feel the two positions could merge.

"We could combine the two into one if it would pay for itself," said Commissioner Dan Polivka.

"It's becoming more and more clear we need a central point person," said Commissioner Mauro Cantalamessa. "It's something our board needs to consider, [and] it will require a cost analysis."

The committee's most controversial recommendations are to reduce property taxes from 1.8 mills to 1 mill, but compensate for the revenue loss by increasing the county sales tax by a half-percent. The current sales tax rate is 6.75 percent.

The committee projects a revenue increase of $10 million, but emphasized implementation should occur only after all the other recommendations for cutting costs have been made.

Trial date for Larosa set for February

Staff report

WARREN

Jacob Larosa, the 18-year old Niles resident accused of beating a 94-year-old woman to death during a robbery in her Niles home in March 2015, will face trial early next year.

Judge W. Wyatt McKay of Trumbull County Common Pleas Court set the trial date for Feb. 12, 2018, after Larosa's public defenders withdrew a previous motion for a competency-evaluation hearing during a court appearance Friday.

Larosa

"There were a number of considerations involved, and I don't want to comment on them," said Atty. Matt Pentz, one of the defense attorneys, in response to a question why he withdrew his motion.

Earlier this week, Judge McKay ruled against another defense motion asking to split the trial in two phases both to be heard by a jury – the trial and sentencing if convicted.

Larosa, who was 15 when police said he killed Marie Belcastro, his neighbor, at her Cherry Street home, will be tried as an adult.

Because he was a juvenile at the time, he is not eligible for the death penalty under Ohio law.

He is charged with aggravated murder, aggravated robbery and attempted rape.

If convicted, he faces life imprisonment with no possibility of parole.

FESTIVAL

festival when the rain began. She and a friend, Abby Carlson, who had just moved to Youngstown from Akron three days prior, were huddled in a tent waiting for the weather to break.

It was Carlson's first time at the Greater Youngstown Italian Festival. Fentress assured her that Saturday – with expected pleasant temperatures and all-day sun – would be more indicative of a typical festival experience.

Inside the beer and wine tent, the Miss Italian Fest Pageant was carrying on despite the gray and the wet. The pageant audience filled out the front of the tent, close to the stage, while those seeking shelter or beverages – or both – filled out the rear. By the end of the evening, Ava Briceland, 9, and Erin Jones, 18, would be named Junior Miss Italian Fest and Miss Italian Fest, respectively.

The tent became a microcosm of the broader festival as the downpour continued: People ducked in to eat their food while others lined up for beer. Men played Morra – a game similar to Liar's Dice mixed with Rock, Paper, Scissors dating back to antiquity – in the back to prepare for the tournament later that evening. Local politicians – including Democratic mayoral candidate Jamael "Tito" Brown, city councilmen Mike Ray and Julius Oliver and state Rep. John Boccieri of Poland, D-59th – used the opportunity to mingle with their constituents.

Just after 7 p.m., the rain let up and the skies lightened. As the clouds receded, the attendees emerged from the tents and repopulated the streets, lining up to grab more food and drinks. Music began playing from the festival's main stage as the technicians prepared sound equipment for the evening's musical act, The Ovations with Mark Pupino.

Luigi Lombardi and Paul Niemi, a pair of morra players registering for the tournament, were among those who waited out the rain.

Lombardi said that enduring the conditions was worth it as attending the festival had become a tradition for him. Niemi's response was equally dutiful.

"We're dedicated," Niemi said, laughing. "We're dedicated to having a good time."

The Greater Youngstown Italian Festival continues through the weekend, concluding at 11 p.m. Sunday with fireworks.

WATSON

stuck ever since," she said.

Ellen Tressel, wife of YSU President Jim Tressel, said Watson didn't just wear his nickname with pride, but also his alma mater.

"He was always involved with YSU after he graduated," said Jim Tressel. "To this day, he has a YSU flag flying in the driveway."

Watson, originally from New York, graduated from Youngstown College in 1949 with a bachelor's in engineering after serving in the Navy from 1943 through 1946 during World War II. He was president of Youngstown Welding and Engineering Co. from 1959 to 1988.

Watson was active in the community as a member and leader of several organizations.

In 1964, he became president of the Greater Youngstown Area Chamber of Commerce.

Tom Humphries, president of the Youngstown/Warren Regional Chamber, referred to Watson as a true leader.

"His impact to the community and contributions to the community were numerous, to say the least," Humphries said.

From 1978 to 1987, Watson was a member of the YSU Board of Trustees and is one of the original members of the YSU Foundation Board of Trustees. He led the 1970s fundraising campaign for the construction of Stambaugh Stadium.

BILLY LUDT | THE VINDICATOR

Frank Watson, a longtime benefactor of Youngstown State University, died Thursday. His daughter, Ellen Tressel, and son-in-law, YSU President Jim Tressel, remember him as a great mentor, a great leader and a great dad. They held a picture of him Friday at an interview with The Vindicator.

More than $16 million was raised for its construction.

After it was built, Watson bought a loge, and he is its only remaining original owner since 1982.

"He's been to every home game in the stadium since," Ellen Tressel said. "It's just that he knew the importance of YSU to the city and he loved it."

In 1976, Watson spoke at YSU's commencement and was presented with the Distinguished Alumnus Award by Howard Jones.

In 1987, the chamber honored Watson with the Youngstowner Award.

In 2003, Watson received the citizen of the year award, the highest honor bestowed by YSU.

Also that year, Watson was named the featured speaker at YSU's summer commencement, where he told the graduates to "never stop learning."

Watson and his wife, Norma, gifted more than $3 million to YSU and the YSU Foundation including $125,000 in 2003 for a student recreation center in Kilcawley Center.

"Our community is only going to be as strong as our university," Frank Watson said at the time. "This project certainly makes our university a much stronger institution."

The Watsons donated $1 million in 2016 to support the development of a new Student Success Center on campus.

"He was just extremely generous to the university as well as others," said Ron Cole, YSU spokesman.

Ellen Tressel agreed.

"He was just great," she said. "He was a great mentor, a great leader and great dad."

Ellen Tressel, a former YSU synchronized swimmer, said she'll most miss swimming with him every day.

"We were a faithful swimming team," she said.

The Watsons were married for almost 68 years. They have another daughter, Janet Stephens, four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Their son, David, is deceased.

A public memorial service for Watson will take place at 11 a.m. Monday at The Watson and Tressel Training Site at YSU.

JONES

"He was creative, he was very attentive, and he always put the employees of the company above everything else," said Barbara Burley, the company's president who started working for Jones at Fireline in 1983. "He wanted to make Fireline a special place to work, and he did."

Fireline, which Jones started in his basement and then a rented garage, employs 107 people at its Andrew Avenue location.

Jones stepped down as president in 2005 and then returned to his roots doing research and development at Fireline until 2009. When he retired, the company became an employee stock-ownership-plan business with workers owning 30 percent of Fireline.

"He wanted to provide people with opportunities believing if you give someone an opportunity, they will succeed," Burley said. "He had a spirit of generosity. After he retired in 2009, he'd come into the plant regularly. The employees loved him. They will miss him. He was truly a one-of-a-kind individual."

Jones was known for his philanthropy, including providing scholarships to students at Youngstown State University and making major contributions to the former Children's Museum of the Valley, which relocated in 2010 to 11 W. Federal St. with a focus on STEM [science, technology, engineering and mathematics]. The facility is called OH WOW! The Roger & Gloria Jones Children's Center for Science & Technology.

"He and his wife were champions of the museum," said Suzanne Barbati, the center's president and executive director. "They've been supporters of the museum not only financially, but as mentors. They were not from this community originally, but they adopted Youngstown and continued to support the people of this area. He'll be greatly missed."

Memorial contributions can be made in honor of Jones to OH WOW!, 11 W. Federal St., Youngstown, OH 44503.

SHOOTINGS

head of the department's Criminal Investigations Unit, said police had no suspects Friday, but based on how the attack was carried out, they do not believe the killings were a random act.

The call logs show the first call that came into 911 about 7:12 p.m. Thursday said occupants of two cars were shooting at one another. Other calls quickly came after that first one, saying gunfire could be heard, the Cadillac crashed into the house, three or four people were shooting and "shots were fired in the car and hit the house."

Massucci said he did not want to comment on where the gunfire came from. A police statement said that as officers were on their way to the call, they were told that someone inside the car was firing a gun.

The logs also said some people went outside to help the people in the Cadillac but went back inside when they heard gunfire.

Massucci also said police believe the deaths are not related to a spate of gunfire Thursday morning on Homewood Avenue Southeast, where officers found several 9 mm shell casings and shotgun wadding. A car and several homes were damaged about 12:20 a.m. by gunfire. No one was injured.

A check of Warren Municipal Court and Trumbull County Common Pleas Court shows no criminal records for Johnson or Harbin. West has three misdemeanor convictions in municipal court and no record in common pleas court.

So far in 2017, Trumbull County has 13 homicides. Last year, the county had a total of 13 homicides.

A search of Vindicator files dating back to 1991 could not find a triple homicide in Warren. The last double homicide in the city was Oct. 24, 2014, when Charles McNear, 53, and Sophie Stefek, 41, were killed in an arson at McNear's Ivanhoe Street home.

The last triple homicide in Trumbull County, according to Vindicator files, was the Sept. 13, 2005, deaths of Lena Cross, 22, and her two young sons in an arson in Girard.

about their sources, and would not rule out the possibility that a reporter could be prosecuted.

"No one is entitled to surreptitiously fight to advance their battles in the media by revealing sensitive government information," Sessions said in an announcement that followed a series of news reports this year on the Trump campaign and White House that have relied on classified information. "No government can be effective when its leaders cannot discuss sensitive matters in confidence or talk freely in confidence with foreign leaders."

Media advocacy organizations condemned the announcement, with Bruce Brown, the executive director of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, saying the decision to review existing guidelines was "deeply troubling."

Meanwhile, a White House adviser raised the possibility of lie detector tests for the small number of people in the West Wing and elsewhere with access to transcripts of Trump's phone calls. The Washington Post on Thursday published transcripts of his conversations with the leaders of Mexico and Australia.

Trump counselor Kellyanne Conway told "Fox & Friends" that "it's easier to figure out who's leaking than the leakers may realize."

Trump's outbursts against media organizations he derides as "fake news" have led to predictions that his administration will more aggressively try to root out leakers.

BEATING

Several people on the video can be heard encouraging Tracey Shuler, 47, of West Warren Avenue, to fight with Underwood – and Shuler was promised money if he could knock out Underwood, which he did.

Shuler was arrested a short time after police were called to the gas station and charged with felonious assault. He remains in the Mahoning County jail on $90,000 bond after his arraignment in municipal court Wednesday.

Police have been scrutinizing the video and searching for people they can question and possibly charge for any crimes connected with the incident.

LeTisha Underwood said her uncle is a kind man and she and the rest of the family are angry about what happened.

"He's normally quiet," she said. "He doesn't bother anyone."

She said she did not hear about the fight Tuesday before she saw it posted on Facebook, and when she discovered the man who was beaten was her uncle, she was saddened and taken aback.

"It was like someone punched me in the gut," she said.

The beating also brings back painful memories for her. Her mother's father was beaten to death in 1995, and a brother of her mother was killed by a punch in 1999 during a domestic dispute.

LeTisha Underwood said her uncle has had surgery and has been breathing on a ventilator the past couple of days, but doctors say they expect him to recover once he can begin breathing on his own.

"His prognosis is good," she said.

LeTisha Underwood said her uncle was at the gas station late Monday because he likes to walk around the Market Street/Avondale Avenue neighborhood at night.

2 Austintown trustees file for re-election

Incumbent Austintown Trustees Kenneth Carano, left, and Jim Davis, holding his 7-year-old daughter Gabby, filed nominating petitions Friday for re-election. They are among five candidates so far seeking the two seats in the Nov. 7 general election. Wednesday is the filing deadline. Danielle O'Neill, a Mahoning County Board of Elections clerk, accepted the petitions.

NIKOS FRAZIER | THE VINDICATOR

Darkened skies are a harbinger of oncoming severe weather as cars drive down South State Street in Girard. A storm hit the area about 2 p.m. Friday.

STORM

the summer, due to heat and high levels of humidity.

As of 5 p.m., more than 3,000 FirstEnergy customers were without power in Trumbull County. There were also more than 4,000 people without power in Mahoning County, mostly in the Youngstown area.

By 9 p.m., only 140 FirstEnergy customers were still without power in Mahoning County. FirstEnergy estimated power would be restored to those customers by 11:30 p.m. today.

Trumbull County still had 5,185 customers without power by 9 p.m., with FirstEnergy estimating restoration between 6 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. for most customers.

The bulk of the outages in Trumbull County were in Girard, Liberty and Brookfield.

The eastbound lane of Mahoning Avenue at Raccoon Road in Austintown was closed for a time to allow FirstEnergy workers to repair a utility pole that was damaged during the storm.

The Gramelts, who live on the 900 block of Beechwood, near state Route 304, were fortunate enough not to lose power.

Don Cusick saws off a fallen tree limb Friday afternoon at his brother's house on Shannon Road in Girard. A storm knocked down trees and electrical lines, leaving thousands of people without power for a time.

When John saw the storm approaching, he went outside to tie down the family's tentlike carport.

"You really had to hang on," John said. "It was really something."

He then gestured at his next-door neighbor's house, where a tree took down a new fence and added: "It's like a war zone here."

Across the street, John's neighbors Chuck and Gloria Herring had several large trees fall down in the storm.

Gloria heard a loud "whoosh" when the storm hit.

Also in Girard, the winds ripped off a portion of an awning at Our Town Motor Sales, a used-car dealership at South State Street.

A Girard police dispatcher also reported zero fatalities, though she said that, for several hours, the office was "hammered" with calls about downed power lines, blocked roads and trees that had fallen on homes or vehicles.

Man sent to prison for slaying over parking space

Associated Press

TOLEDO

An Ohio man has been sentenced to prison for a slaying that authorities say occurred two months after an argument over a parking space.

The Blade newspaper reports 24-four-year-old Philando Hudson, of Toledo, received 14 years Wednesday as part of a plea bargain with Lucas County prosecutors. Hudson entered an Alford plea last month to an involuntary manslaughter charge, which means he doesn't admit to guilt but acknowledges there's enough evidence to convict him.

Hudson was indicted on an aggravated-murder charge in the weeks after the Jan. 2 slaying.

Prosecutors say Hudson pulled up alongside a car and shot 26-year-old Effram Smith six times in front of Smith's girlfriend and 10-year-old stepdaughter.

The sentencing judge told Hudson the shooting was "about nothing."

Hudson's attorney declined to comment Friday.

Felony extortion charge

BOARDMAN

Township police Thursday arrested Robert Donegan, 44, of New Middletown on a felony extortion charge.

According to a police report, the charge stems from a report filed April 17 by the owner of Intellitech Corp. on Hickory Hill Drive. The company develops computer software for jail systems.

The business owner told police that, after being fired, Donegan had attempted to extort money from him. According to the report, the business owner said Donegan had downloaded software for two jail systems and withheld it from the company, preventing Intellitech from collecting at least $300,000.

Donegan was released on bond and is scheduled to appear Tuesday for a hearing in Mahoning County Area Court.

For homeless on heroin, treatment can be elusive with no ID

PHILADELPHIA

Nearly two decades of using heroin and a year of living on the streets of Philadelphia had led Steven Kemp to a simple conclusion: It was time to get sober. But when he staggered into a detox facility on a recent Friday night, his head brimming with the thought that suicide would end the pain, he was told he couldn't be admitted because he didn't have a photo ID.

As the nation's heroin and painkiller epidemic rages, small but vulnerable populations of homeless people are sometimes turned away from the nation's already-threadbare system of drug-treatment centers because they do not have valid photo identification.

Transient lifestyles are not conducive to keeping the identifying documents that are often necessary during the screening processes for drug treatment facilities. To reapply for the documents can sometimes take months, especially if a person doesn't have a stable address, birth certificate or Social Security card.

Flynn files financial form reporting ties to data firm

WASHINGTON

President Donald Trump's former national-security adviser, Michael Flynn, disclosed a brief advisory role with a firm related to a controversial data-analysis company that aided the Trump campaign, according to a filing Flynn submitted to the White House.

The disclosure of Flynn's link to Cambridge Analytica came in an amended public financial filing in which the retired U.S. Army lieutenant general also discloses income that includes payments from the Trump transition team. The filing was made public by the White House on Friday in response to an Associated Press reporter's request.

The amended disclosure lists Flynn as an adviser to SCL Group, a Virginia-based company related to Cambridge Analytica, the data-mining and analysis firm that worked with Trump's campaign.

Tourists return to NC islands after power outage

RALEIGH, N.C.

Carloads of tourists rolled in, stores stocked seafood counters and kitchen workers chopped vegetables Friday as two North Carolina islands reopened to visitors after a weeklong power outage at the height of vacation season.

A line of cars was waiting to drive onto Hatteras Island at noon when vacationers were allowed to return, said Dare County spokeswoman Dorothy Hester. It was a welcome sign that things were returning to normal on Hatteras and Ocracoke islands a week after a construction accident cut power, threatening seasonal businesses' bottom lines.

Word that power was fully restored Thursday set businesses racing to get ready for a wave of tourists arriving this weekend.

Doctor told to stop marketing 3-person baby technique

U.S. regulators warned a New York fertility doctor to stop marketing an experimental procedure that uses DNA from three people – a mother, a father and an egg donor – to avoid certain genetic diseases.

The doctor, John Zhang, used the technique to help a Jordanian couple deliver a baby last year.

According to the Food and Drug Administration, Zhang said his companies wouldn't use its technology in the U.S. again without permission, yet they continue to promote it.

The procedure is not approved in the U.S.

CANNABIS COMPANY HAS BIG PLANS FOR DESERT TOWN

Associated Press

NIPTON, CALIF.

Now that one of the nation's largest cannabis companies has bought the entire California desert town of Nipton, a question remains: Will the new owners rename the place Potsylvania?

The name Weed already belongs to an old mill town in Northern California.

American Green Inc. announced Thursday it is buying all 80 acres of Nipton, which includes its Old West-style hotel, a handful of houses, an RV park and a coffee shop. Its plans are to transform the old Gold Rush town into what it calls "an energy-independent, cannabis-friendly hospitality destination."

The town's current owner, Roxanne Lang, said the sale is still in escrow, but confirmed American Green is the buyer. She declined to reveal price before the sale closes, but noted she and her late husband, Gerald Freeman, listed the property at $5 million when they put it up for sale last year.

Asked what her husband would think of the buyers' plans to turn Nipton into the pot paradise of the California desert, she laughed heartily.

"I think he would find a lot of humor in that," she finally said, adding that as a Libertarian, Freeman had no problem with people using marijuana, and as a proponent of green power, he'd be all in favor of energy independence. Over the years he'd installed a solar farm himself that provides much of the tiny town's electricity.

American Green says it plans to expand that farm and also bottle and sell cannabis-infused water from Nipton's plentiful aquifer, joint moves that would make the town green in more ways than one.

The buyers are also reaching out to edibles manufacturers and other pot-industry businesses, hoping they'll be interested in relocating to Nipton and bringing jobs with them.

The town's current residents number fewer than two dozen and one of its major sources of revenue is the California Lottery tickets the general store sells to people who cross the state line from Nevada because they can't buy them there.

"We are excited to lead the charge for a true Green Rush," David Gwyther, American Green's president and CEO, said in a statement.

Police: Professor suspected in murder apologizes

Associated Press

CHICAGO

A Northwestern University professor suspected in the stabbing death of a Chicago man sent a video to friends and relatives apologizing for his involvement in a crime that he called the "biggest mistake of my life," raising concern among investigators that he might kill himself.

"We are trying to keep this from becoming more tragic than it already is," Chicago Police Department spokesman Anthony Guglielmi said Friday. He asked that anyone who either is with Wyndham Lathem or knows his location contact law enforcement immediately.

Guglielmi said that the U.S. Marshals Service, which has joined the investigation, has interviewed several of the people who received the video from Lathem, an associate microbiology professor at Northwestern. Guglielmi declined to discuss details of the video or release it because he said it could be used in future interrogation efforts.

The video is the latest twist in the bizarre slaying of Trenton James Cornell-Duranleau, 26, whose body was found stabbed several times inside Lathem's Chicago apartment July 27. First-degree murder warrants have been issued for Lathem, 42, and Andrew Warren, a 56-year-old University of Oxford (England) employee, who was seen on surveillance video leaving the high-rise building with Lathem on the day of the slaying.

Police have released very few details about the investigation.

Former Blackwater Worldwide guard Nicholas Slatten leaves federal court in Washington in 2014.

Court upends Blackwater contractor's murder conviction

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

A federal appeals court Friday overturned the first-degree murder conviction of a former Blackwater security contractor, ordering a new trial for the man prosecutors say fired the first shots in the 2007 slayings of 14 Iraqi civilians at a crowded traffic circle in Baghdad.

In a split opinion, the three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia Circuit ruled a lower court erred by not allowing Nicholas Slatten to be tried separately from his three co-defendants in 2014. The 33-year-old contractor from Tennessee is serving a life sentence for his role in the killings, which strained international relations and drew intense scrutiny of the role of American contractors in the Iraq War.

The court also ordered new sentences for the three other contractors, Paul Slough, Evan Liberty and Dustin Heard. They were each found guilty of manslaughter and firearms charges carrying mandatory 30-year terms.

The judges determined those sentences violated the constitutional prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment because prosecutors charged them with using military firearms while committing another felony. That statute, typically employed against gang members or bank robbers, had never before been used against overseas security contractors working for the U.S. government.

A spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office in Washington said prosecutors were still reviewing the decision and had no immediate comment.

Bill Coffield, a lawyer for Liberty, said he planned to meet with Liberty to review their options.

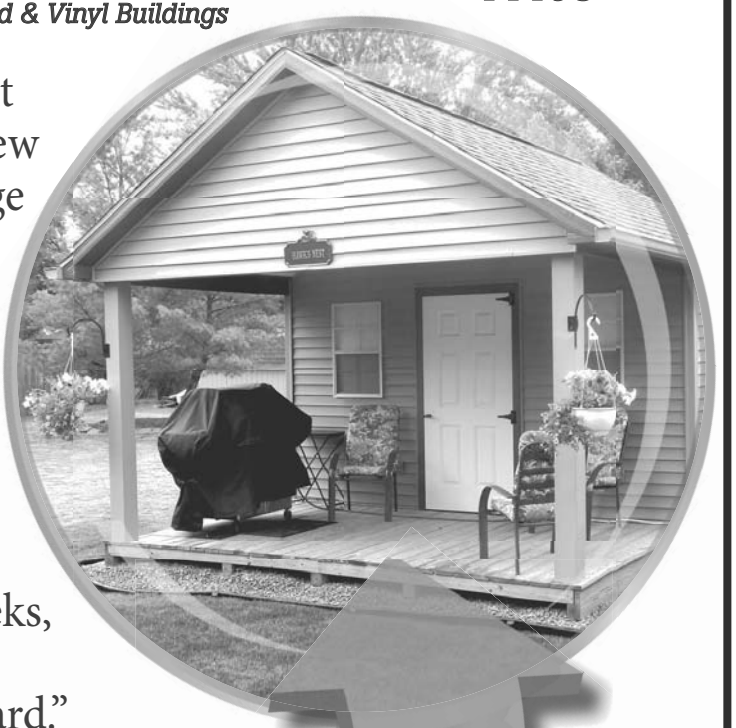

At the weekslong trial held in 2014, federal prosecutors and defense lawyers presented very different versions of what triggered the September 2007 massacre in Nisour Square.

The government described the killings as a one-sided ambush of unarmed civilians, while the defense said the guards opened fire only after a white Kia sedan seen as a potential suicide car bomb began moving quickly toward their convoy. After the shooting stopped, no evidence of a bomb found.

Our VOICE

Taking Y'town's tech savvy on the road for world to see

YOUNGSTOWN AND THE Mahoning Valley have long pumped rugged muscle into our nation's military might. Most notably, tons and tons of Valley-produced steel nourished America's arsenals throughout World Wars I and II.

Though most steelmaking plants in our region have long ago gone dark, Youngstown's contributions to our national defense continue. They've just taken new shapes tailor-made for 21st century needs and applications.

One prime example of that transformation can be found tucked inside the Youngstown Business Incubator in downtown Youngstown. Applied Systems and Technology Transfer, better known AST2, is hitting the ground running – literally – with its Transportable Digital Fabrication Lab, nicknamed "The FabLab."

The newest of four FabLabs – 34-foot trailers packed to the gills with Youngstown-built technology – took off from AST2's warehouse on Logan Avenue this week en route to the Naval Air Station Joint Reserve Base in New Orleans.

The behemoths are veritable additive-manufacturing and 3-D printing factories on wheels designed to assist military maintenance battalions wherever duty calls.

The mobile labs will enable the military to save considerable time and money by manufacturing vital component parts on-site in jackrabbit-fast turnaround time. That's a far cry from the horror stories over the years of long waits for a $700 toilet seat or a $2,000 screw.

RECORD OF SUCCESS

AST2's track record of success in procuring government contracts belies its youth. Since its inception about 10 years ago, it has successfully worked with other federal government agencies including the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Energy, the Federal Aviation Administration and NASA.

We applaud the brains and brawn behind AST2 and hope other startup tech companies inside and outside of the incubator take lessons from its achievements, most importantly the value of partnerships. Other institutions and programs provided fertile ground to help AST2 reap robust results. They include:

- America Makes or the National Additive Manufacturing Innovation Institute. AST2 is a partner of NAMII, the state-of-the art additive-manufacturing consortium headquartered in Youngstown. NAMII, created by the administration of President Barack Obama in 2012, has energized the growth and diversification of additive manufacturing in our region and the nation.
- Youngstown Business Incubator. AST2 is one of myriad success stories for the expanding downtown Youngstown campus that serves as a launching pad for software and 3-D companies in the Valley. It's been rated the top university-affiliated business incubator of its kind in North America by UBI GLobal of Stockholm, Sweden.
- The Historically Underutilized Business Zones program. This federal program encourages development in economically distressed business zones called HUBZones by providing access to more federal contracting opportunities.

To its credit, AST2 melded all of those attributes to help forge its success. It's now putting Youngstown's new status as a vibrant technology hub on the road for the entire nation to see. There's little reason why other creative entrepreneurs cannot marshal the same resources to advance that success even farther.

Take smoke out of smoking

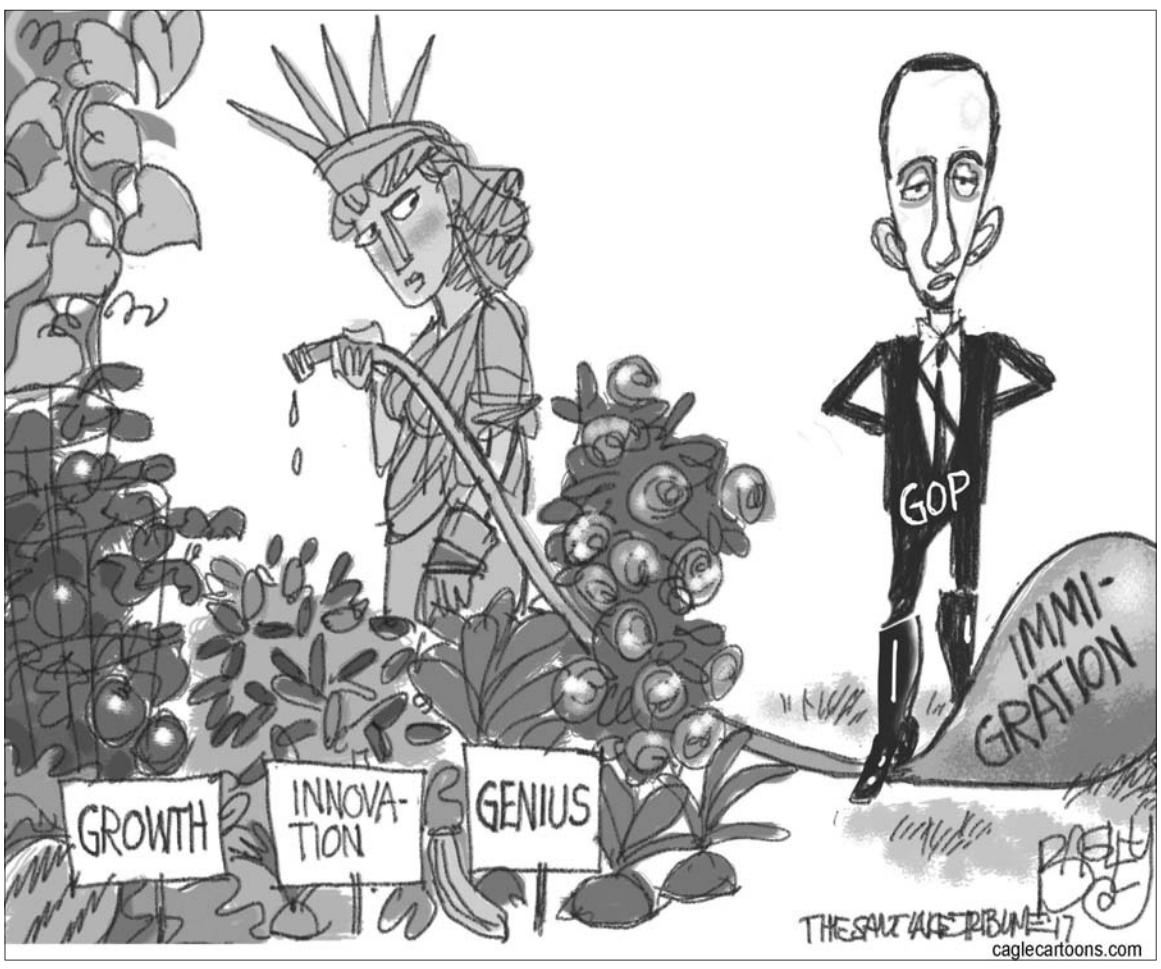

Richmond [Va.] Times Dispatch: Where there's smoke, there's not always fire, and the FDA seems to understand that could make all the difference, at least when it comes to people's health. It's dangerous to assume too much when a federal agency announces its long-term plans, but there appears to be a good deal of common sense in the Food and Drug Administration's recent announcements regarding electronic nicotine delivery systems.

We find it encouraging to see the FDA clearly state that nicotine, the addictive drug in tobacco, "is delivered through products that represent a continuum of risk and is most harmful when delivered through smoke particles in combustible cigarettes." In other words, there are a number of ways to get your nicotine hit these days, but lighting up clearly causes the most damage to your health. As a result, the FDA is giving some breathing room to e-cigarettes and other devices that take the smoke out of smoking.

President Maduro plays with fire

Andres Oppenheimer

Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro's decision to imprison opposition leaders Leopoldo Lopez and Antonio Ledezma will not help his beleaguered regime. On the contrary, it may backfire.

Judging from what I'm hearing from well-placed Latin American and U.S. diplomats, the Maduro regime's incarceration of the two internationally known politicians – who were under house arrest serving long sentences on phony government charges – has infuriated leaders around the world.

The arrests on Tuesday and the revelation Wednesday by the CEO of the Smartmatic voting technology firm that the Venezuelan regime had rigged his company's count of the government-convened weekend vote for a Constituent Assembly are likely to move more countries to take a stronger stand against the Maduro dictatorship.

"It will have an important impact," Chilean Foreign Minister Heraldo Muqoz said in a telephone interview, referring to the late-night raid by security forces into the two opposition leaders' homes, and their return to prison. "This can't go on. There can't be more arrests, and violation of the rule of law."

FAMOUS POLITICAL PRISONER

Lopez, the Harvard-educated leader of the opposition Voluntad Popular party, is Latin America's best-known political prisoner.

His wife, Lilian Tintori, a former TV anchorwoman, has been leading an international campaign for his release since he was first jailed in 2014. She has met with President Trump and the leaders of Brazil, Argentina, Peru and several other countries to share her husband's story, and to press them for greater pressure for a return to democracy in Venezuela.

It's hard not to be moved by the Lopez couple's story. During his three years in a military prison–until he was transferred to house arrest three weeks ago – Lopez was often denied permission to see his children Manuela, 8, and Leopoldo, 4. In a pre-taped video released by his family after his re-incarceration this week, Lopez – holding hands with his wife – announced that the couple is expecting a third child.

Ledezma also is a well-known international figure. He was the democratically elected mayor of Caracas, until late president Hugo Chavez created a Venezuelan Capital District that cut the mayor's budget and stripped him of all powers. Ledezma was imprisoned in 2015, and sent home under house arrest for health reasons shortly thereafter.

When the foreign affairs ministers of Latin America's largest countries meet Tuesday in Lima, Peru, to discuss the Venezuelan crisis, they will surely be influenced by the latest developments.

More countries may join Mexico and Panama in following the United States and slap financial and visa sanctions against top Venezuelan officials. Others, like Chile, will continue pressing for a credible mediation in Venezuela's political crisis, but this time adding – as Muqoz told me – the requirement that any such negotiations be "to permit the return of a democratic order that has been broken."

Skeptics say that none of this will help bring down the Maduro government, and that the latest moves by Maduro show that the Venezuelan dictator has decided to burn his bridges, and turn the country into a Cuba-style dictatorship.

Maduro surely would want that, but I don't think he will get away with it. Venezuela is not an island, like Cuba. And this is not 1959, when there was a Soviet Union able to bankroll bankrupt anti-American regimes.

ECONOMIC DECLINE

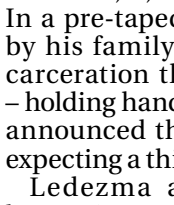

Unlike what happened in Cuba after the 1959 revolution, polls show that about 80 percent of Venezuelans blame Maduro for the near 1,000 percent a year inflation rate, and a more than 30 percent drop in the country's economy over the past three years.

And, more importantly, unlike in Cuba, the Venezuelan people's democratic instincts are very much alive, despite two decades of government propaganda and press censorship. More than 120 people have died in recent street protests, and they still turn out in massive numbers in opposition demonstrations.

The re-arrests of Lopez and Ledezma, and the farce of Maduro's Constituent Assembly vote, will not help Maduro buy time and weaken the street protests, as he hoped. Anything could happen, but my bet is that it will further enrage the international community, and further encourage Venezuela's courageous opposition.

Nine decades of warm library tales

Michael J. Lacivita

The Public Library of Youngstown and Mahoning County has played a very important part in my nonagenarian lifetime, starting during the Great Depression year of 1930, when I was 6 years old. A beautiful new building was dedicated at that time on Youngstown's East Side at 6 N. Jackson St. I lived at 38 N. Jackson St., just several houses from the library, which I considered my second home.

I can recall going to the library daily. It was warm in there compared to my basement living quarters, where I spent most of my time. I sat at the same library table each time; it was the magazine section. I could have been called a magazine worm rather than a book worm. My favorite magazines were National Geographic, Popular Science and Life. These magazines supplemented my public school education at Lincoln Elementary and East High School. These magazines were both interesting and educational.

SELF-EDUCATED AT LIBRARY

Webster's dictionary defines knowledge as an information of facts. In the old days, many people were self-educated by reading books in a specific field. As a result, you could become proficient in it.

Finally, while attending Youngstown College, now Youngstown State University, under the GI Bill just after World War II, graduating in 1951, my main study hall was the main library building near YSU. For my entire four years of college, many of the librarians became my friends and their help was invaluable. Even today, I regularly use the information services division of the library.

QUOTES OF THE DAY

Trump's agenda matters

By MARK DAVIS
The Dallas Morning News

It is tempting to bask in the daily dose of palace intrigue these days at the Trump White House, but the running narratives of who reports to whom are not ultimately important. What matters is the path forward for the president's agenda, and whether it is helped or hindered by the ever-changing cast of characters.

Change itself is not usually helpful. The ideal is to see a team selected, then watch it harmoniously coalesce on a smooth, sure path toward its goals.

That's not this presidency. But in fairness, that's not any presidency. Every administration has its sharp-elbowed infighting; this one simply has a special talent for putting it in a display window.

Amid turnover of this dizzying pace, the first question is: Are we upgrading at every position?

Sean Spicer to Sarah Huckabee Sanders as press secretary? Yes. Reince Priebus to John Kelly as Chief of Staff? Yes. Anthony Scaramucci to his successor as communications director? Without even knowing that successor yet? Yes.

Scaramucci's arrival and exit both warrant examination. His arrival showed Donald Trump's desire to work with people who resemble him. His departure shows Trump's unwillingness to work with people who embarrass him.

This is where the Trump haters step up to suggest there's irony in someone as brash as Trump possibly being embarrassed by the language of anyone in his sphere. But no Trump tweet or other public comment comes close to the reckless, inexplicable idiocy of Scaramucci's vulgar rant to a New Yorker reporter. The president likes fighters, but will not tolerate underlings who mortify critics and supporters alike for no reason.

ANYBODY'S GUESS

So does the arrival of a retired Marine general as chief of staff bring instant discipline? It brought Scaramucci's instant departure and delivered an instant message. From here on out, it's anybody's guess. Kelly will almost surely enforce a certain decorum among the ranks, but do not expect him to constrain the instincts of his boss.

Nor should he. The Trump tweets are the engine that inspires and delights his base, even as enemies float withering tales of Russia collusion.

But even the most loyal portions of that base are eager to see some actual results. The Obamacare repeal failure has not been his fault, and there is no doubt that the half-year of Trump has ushered in an America that feels very different in terms of borders, the economy, energy and various social issues, just for starters. Those changes have been welcomed by the vast majority of voters who sought exactly this type of change.

But as John Kelly plugs in to whip the troops into shape toward goals like tax reduction and regulatory reform, history observes that chiefs of staff are rarely famous and rarely long-serving; Barack Obama had four in his first term. The best evidence that Kelly is doing his job will be how seldom he appears in the headlines.

That will be a challenge in a carnivorous media environment that will obsess at the slightest whiff of a West Wing soap opera. The best thing Kelly can do is enforce message discipline around the Oval Office while the man inside figures out what his daily or hourly passions are.

John Kelly is a welcome asset who can be of great value, but the direction of the Trump administration will not be dictated by anyone but the president himself.

VW executive pleads guilty in emissions scandal

Associated Press

DETROIT

A German Volkswagen executive pleaded guilty Friday to conspiracy and fraud charges in Detroit in a scheme to cheat emission rules on nearly 600,000 diesel vehicles.

Shackled at the wrists and ankles and wearing red prison garb, Oliver Schmidt appeared before U.S. District Judge Sean Cox as part of the U.S. government's case involving the automaker, which has admitted to using software to get around U.S. emission standards.

Schmidt, 48, is a former manager of a VW engineering office in suburban Detroit who was arrested in January while on vacation in Miami. He faces up to five years in prison for conspiracy to defraud the U.S., wire fraud and violation of the Clean Air Act. A second count of giving false statement under the Clean Air Act carries a possible sentence of up to two years in prison.

He remains jailed and is scheduled to be sentenced Dec. 6. He also could face deportation.

Schmidt is accused of telling regulators technical problems were to blame for the difference in emissions in road and lab tests.

"Schmidt participated in a fraudulent VW scam that prioritized corporate sales at the expense of the honesty of emissions tests and trust of the American purchasers," Deputy Assistant Attorney General Jean E. Williams, who is in the Justice Department's Environment and Natural Resources Division, said in a news release after Friday's plea.

Schmidt's attorney declined to comment after the plea hearing.

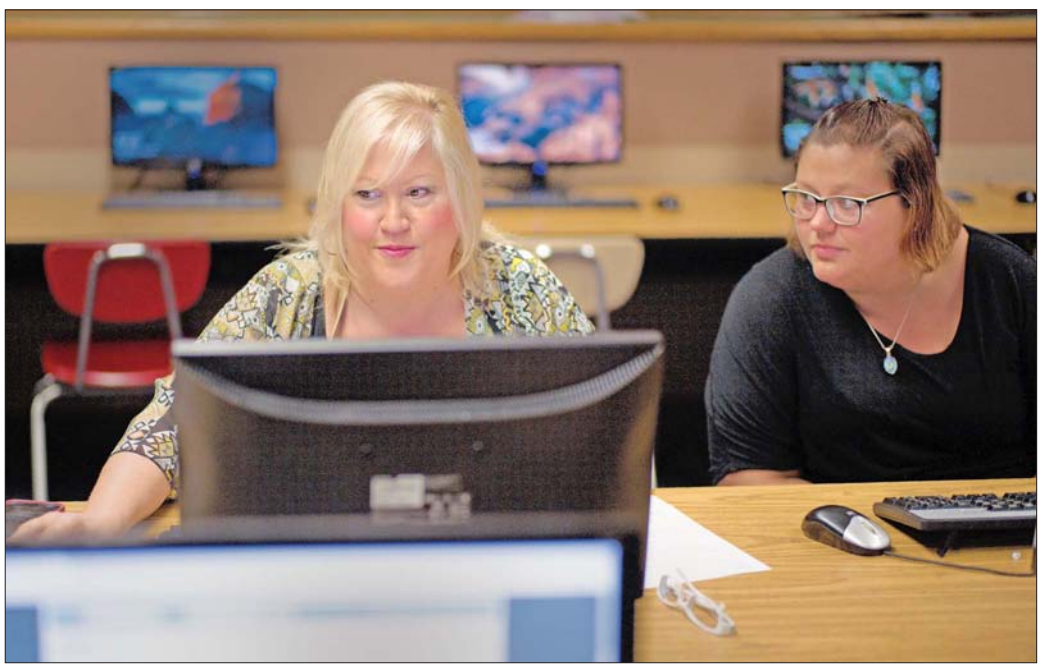

VW pleaded guilty in March to defrauding the U.S. government and agreed to pay $4.3 billion in penalties, on top of billions more to buy back cars. Most of the VW employees charged in a scheme are in Germany and out of reach of U.S. authorities.

U.S. authorities had been pressing Volkswagen over emissions test discrepancies, and the cheating had been going for several years. In 2015, news emerged in the U.S. of Volkswagen's use of software that turned off emissions controls.

The software detected when cars were being tested and turned the emission controls off during normal driving. The result was the cars emitted more than 40 times the U.S. limit for the pollutant nitrogen oxide.

Schmidt told Cox on Friday that VW management directed him in 2015 not to discuss the software.

VW reached a $15 billion civil settlement in the U.S. with environmental authorities and car owners.

Hiring in July cuts jobless rate to 4.3%

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

A drop in the unemployment rate to a 16-year low raises a tantalizing question about the job market: How much better can it get?

Earlier this year, economists worried that the low unemployment rate meant businesses would struggle to find workers and that would drag down the pace of hiring. Those fears were heightened by a tiny job gain in March and modest hiring in May.

Yet Friday's jobs report suggests such concerns are premature. Employers added 209,000 jobs, after a solid gain of 231,000 in June, the Labor Department said. The unemployment rate ticked down to 4.3 percent, from 4.4 percent, matching the low reached in May.

Economists were particularly encouraged by the fact that more Americans are coming off the sidelines and finding jobs. For the first few years after the recession, many of the unemployed stopped looking for work.

Some were discouraged by the lack of available jobs. Others returned to school or stayed home to take care of family. The government doesn't count those out of work as unemployed unless they are actively searching for jobs.

That trend began to reverse last year and has continued into 2017. To many economists, that means robust hiring could continue for many more months or even years.

"There's more people willing to work than the unemployment rate would have you believe," said Nick Bunker, a senior policy analyst at the Washington Center for Equitable Growth, a liberal think tank.

Employers have added an average of 184,000 jobs a month through July, compared with 187,000 in 2016. Monthly job gains topped 200,000 on average in 2014 and 2015.

Trade gap doesn't make the US a global wimp

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Is the United States the 98-pound weakling of global trade?

President Donald Trump and his economic advisers think so. They point to 41-straight years of U.S. trade deficits as evidence that America has been outcompeted, out-negotiated and flat out cheated by trading partners such as China, Mexico and Germany – countries that consistently sell more to the United States than they buy.

Friday, the Commerce Department reported that the United States once again registered a trade deficit – $43.6 billion in June. So far this year, the trade gap is $276.6 billion, up nearly 11 per cent from January-June 2016.

Trump and his team view trade deficits as an economic evil that strangles growth and kills American jobs. They've promised to bring the deficits down – by imposing tariffs and other barriers to imports if they have to.

Many economists don't see things quite that way. They reject the idea that trade is a zero-sum game in which the prize goes to countries that export more than they import. They argue that Americans benefit from the wider choices and lower prices that imports offer.

"I don't see it as a question of economic weakness," says Dean Baker, co-founder of the Center for Economic and Policy Research think-tank. "You could say consumers gain. We get cheaper prices. Importers gain."

But there are losers, too, when cheap imports enter the country, Baker says, especially among factory workers facing foreign competition. "In the Midwest, Ohio, Pennsylvania, we lost millions of jobs," he says.

Ohio manufacturers release report

Staff report

YOUNGSTOWN

Ohio manufacturing is responsible for 18 percent of Ohio's gross domestic product, according to the Ohio Manufacturers' Association "2017 Ohio Manufacturing Counts" report.

The report gives several statistics on the state's manufacturing industry.

The report notes that the industry provides 700,000 jobs for Ohio workers and an annual payroll of $39 billion. It's responsible for almost $50 billion in products to 213 countries and territories.

Manufacturing, the report says, is the largest of the 20 sectors of Ohio's economy.

Ohio's manufacturing sector gross domestic product was $108.1 billion in 2015, ranking it third in the nation after California and Texas.

Ohio ranked second nationally in the number of new site selections for manufacturing projects in the past five years. Texas came in first.

Of Ohio's 14,139 manufacturing establishments in 2015, 40 percent were in six counties: Cuyahoga, Hamilton, Summit, Franklin, Montgomery and Lake.

Last year, Ohio ranked third in manufacturing employment nationally.

More than one out every 10 of Ohio's workers was employed in manufacturing in 2015. In Mahoning County, 7.2 percent of employment was manufacturing in 2015; Trumbull County's manufacturing employment was 14.1 percent; and Columbiana County's manufacturing employment was 14.7 percent.

The Ohio Manufacturers' Association's mission is to protect and grow Ohio manufacturing.

One Hot Cookie expands to Pa.

By KALEA HALL
khall@vindy.com

YOUNGSTOWN

One Hot Cookie will soon have two locations in Pennsylvania.

The speciality dessert shop known for its unique cookie offerings will soon have a location in Pittsburgh's Ross Park Mall and the Grove City Outlets in Grove City, Pa.

"It's the next natural progression of where we would go," said Bergen Giordani, co-owner of the cookie shop.

Bergen opened the business in 2013 in downtown Youngstown with her daughter, Morgen.

The pair saw success in their entrepreneurial endeavor and eventually opened locations in Niles and Boardman.

The Grove City One Hot Cookie location will open sometime in late August, and the Ross Park Mall location should open by next week in the upper level of the two-story mall.

"It's a manageable challenge," Bergen said.

The Boardman store at 1315 Boardman-Canfield Road will stay the base for the local business where the frostings for the cookies and the dog treats are made.

"We are a twist on a traditional sweet shop," Bergen said. "One Hot Cookie is a nontraditional bakery."

One Hot Cookie has 20 different types of cookies. There's salted caramel pretzel, a sugar cookie topped with caramel-covered pretzels, mini chocolate chips and cookies drizzled with chocolate sauce. Another favorite is the peanut butter cup, a double chocolate-chip cookie with crumbled peanut butter cups topped with chocolate sauce.

The shop also offers brownies, ice cream and popcorn. Cookies and brownies are served hot, hence the name: One Hot Cookie.

"We have tremendous support from the Mahoning Valley," Bergen said. "Everyone loves cookies, and we are trying to grow the brand. We have learned along the way that we need to be in a heavily trafficked area."

While running One Hot Cookie, Bergen is the development director for The Rich Center for Autism at Youngstown State University, and Morgen is a student at YSU studying medical laboratory research.

"I have tremendous support from the Rich Center," Bergen said.

Issue 2 opposed

YOUNGSTOWN

The Youngstown/Warren Regional Chamber's Board of Directors recently voted to oppose Issue 2, the Ohio Drug Price Relief Act, which will appear on the General Election ballot in November.

Issue 2 proposes to prohibit the state from entering into contracts in which the net cost of a prescription drug purchased by the state is more than the lowest price paid by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

New managers

COLUMBIANA

The Flynn Automotive Group recently announced two new managers to its team along with one manager relocating.

Todd Dauterman has joined Donnell Ford-Lincoln of Salem as general manager after more than nine years selling the Ford product in Columbiana County.

Dauterman replaced Davey Jones, who returns to Donnell Ford in Boardman as sales manager.

Jeff Kelly has joined the group as marketing manager, replacing Patty Morris, who retires after 27 years with the Flynn Group.

The David A. Flynn Automotive Group is eastern Ohio's largest automobile dealer group.

Strong month of hiring sends stock indexes higher

NEW YORK

Banks and other stocks climbed Friday after the government reported more gains in hiring last month, the latest signal that the economy is continuing to hum along. The modest gains wrapped up another quiet week for the stock market.

The Department of Labor said U.S. employers added 209,000 jobs last month. Investors sold government bonds and bet that interest rates are going to rise, which lets banks make more money on loans. Technology companies also rose. Weight Watchers soared after reporting a strong quarter while Viacom, the media company that owns Comedy Central and MTV, sank.

July was the second-consecutive month of strong hiring, suggesting that the U.S. economy is still growing steadily as countries in Europe and less developed countries come out of long slumps.

Toyota, Mazda plan $1.6 billion US plant

TOKYO

Japanese automakers Toyota Motor Corp. and Mazda Motor Corp. plan to spend $1.6 billion to jointly build an auto manufacturing plant in the U.S. – a move that will create up to 4,000 jobs, both sides said Friday.

The plant will have an annual production capacity of about 300,000 vehicles and will produce Toyota Corollas as well as a new Mazda crossover vehicle for the North American market.

Toyota wouldn't say where the plant would be built. But because the new plant will build the Corolla, chances are it will be located near Toyota's current Corolla plant in Mississippi to be close to parts supply companies. The companies expect the plant to begin operations by 2021.

Poland plays for world championship on ESPN2

By CODIE TALLEY
ctalley@vindy.com

Local softball will be featured on the national stage this afternoon. Poland — representing the Central region — will play for the Junior League Softball world championship at 3 p.m. in a game that will be televised on ESPN2.

Poland coach Matt Bobbey is excited for the opportunity.

"We're taking it in stride, trying not to think about it because we know we still have one more game to win," Bobbey said.

"But we're excited to represent the area and the Poland community on a national level, and win or lose we're gonna battle."

Poland will face off against a familiar foe in the championship game. They will play the Southeast regional winner from Mechanicsville, Va.

The squad from Virginia enters today's game with a 6-0 record, including a 3-0 victory over Poland on Monday, Poland's only loss in the tournament.

Bobbet said having already faced them will be an advantage.

" The game was 0-0 going into the sixth inning. We hung with them hitting-wise. We've seen their pitching, so we know what we have," Bobbey said. "We have to jump on them early. We've got some hot bats right now and we're playing well."

To get to today's championship game, Poland had to go through a tough team from Warwick, Rhode Island, that was 5-0 entering

Walker's 65 puts him in lead at Firestone

Rough season for 2016 PGA champ

Associated Press

AKRON

The sun finally came out, and Jimmy Walker saw a glimpse of what he hopes are brighter days ahead.

In a year marked by coping with Lyme disease and bouts of fatigue, Walker endured rain delays of nearly five hours Friday and posted a 5-under 65 for a two-shot lead going into the weekend at the Bridgestone Invitational.

Walker

The timing couldn't be better for Walker, who goes to Quail Hollow next week to defend his title in the PGA Championship.

"It hadn't been a lot of fun this year," Walker said. "But it's nice to see some putts go in and make some solid swings and keep rounds going, make par putts, just the stuff I haven't been doing."

INSIDE
♦Friday's pro golf scores, B5

He was at 7-under 133, two shots ahead of Thomas Pieters of Belgium, who had a 70.

Walker didn't have a lot going last year until he finished well in the Canadian Open, and then went wire-to-wire at Baltusrol the next week to win the PGA Championship. So maybe there's another spark he can find at Firestone Country Club.

"There's still a lot of golf on a hard course, but I know it's there," he said.

He also has a slew of players not far behind him in this World Golf Championship. Rory McIlroy put together a steady round of 69 and was three shots back, along with Zach Johnson and Hideki Matsuyama, who each shot 67.

The large group at 3-under 137 included Jordan Spieth, going after his third straight victory. Spieth missed a short par putt on the 15th and was slipping behind when he faced an awkward lie from the edge of a bunker . Stumbling out of the sand backward, he nearly holed the shot and made birdie, and then he stuffed his approach to 3 feet for birdie on the 18th hole to salvage a 70.

Jason Day, winless in nearly 15 months, also got back into the picture despite some mild back pain. He opened with three straight birdies and shot 30 on the front nine to get back near the leaders, though two bogeys on the back nine slowed him and he shot 66. He was in the group at 137.

Browns' QB battle rolls on with no leader

CLEVELAND

No touchdowns. No sensational plays. No clarity.

Cleveland's quarterback competition doesn't seem any closer to a conclusion.

Calling the play of his QBs "spotty" during a scrimmage at FirstEnergy Stadium, Browns coach Hue Jackson said he isn't ready to name his starting quarterback for the Sept. 11 season opener.

"This thing is still really fluid in my mind," Jackson said Friday night.

♦Thursday: Browns vs. Saints at FirstEnergy Stadium, Cleveland. Kickoff at 8 p.m.
TV/radio: WEWS/ WBBW-AM 1240, WYFM-FM 102.9.

The three-way battle between Cody Kessler, Brock Osweiler and rookie DeShone Kizer — Kevin Hogan doesn't appear to be in the mix — hasn't produced a clear leader and Jackson said he's eager for one of the quarterbacks to separate from the pack.

That just hasn't happened.

"You want somebody to be head and shoulders above everybody else, but let's be honest, when you have four guys that you are giving a bunch of reps to, it is hard to do," Jackson said. "Pretty soon, we have to stop that part of it and move forward with who we think can really go play quarterback for us. That is the fair thing to do."

Jackson is expected to mix up the rotation in camp over the next few days and he'll likely name his starter for next Thursday's exhibition opener against New Orleans early in the week. But that choice may not be the same quarterback he sends on the field for the regular-season opener on Sept. 11 against Pittsburgh.

"It doesn't mean whichever road we decide to travel for next Thursday, that doesn't mean that is the starter for the season," he said. "That might be for a game until we see more. We might need to see more. All of this is good information for me, good data for me, good data for our staff and good data for our executive team to really look at every possibility we have as we move forward."

While the QB situation is unresolved, the Browns got more reassurance that they made the right pick with the first overall in the draft.

Rookie defensive end Myles Garrett was credited with two sacks, but probably would have had four under normal game conditions.

"I am going with whatever they call. Coach said I had four," said Garrett. "They blew (the whistle) on two so I am just going to go with two."

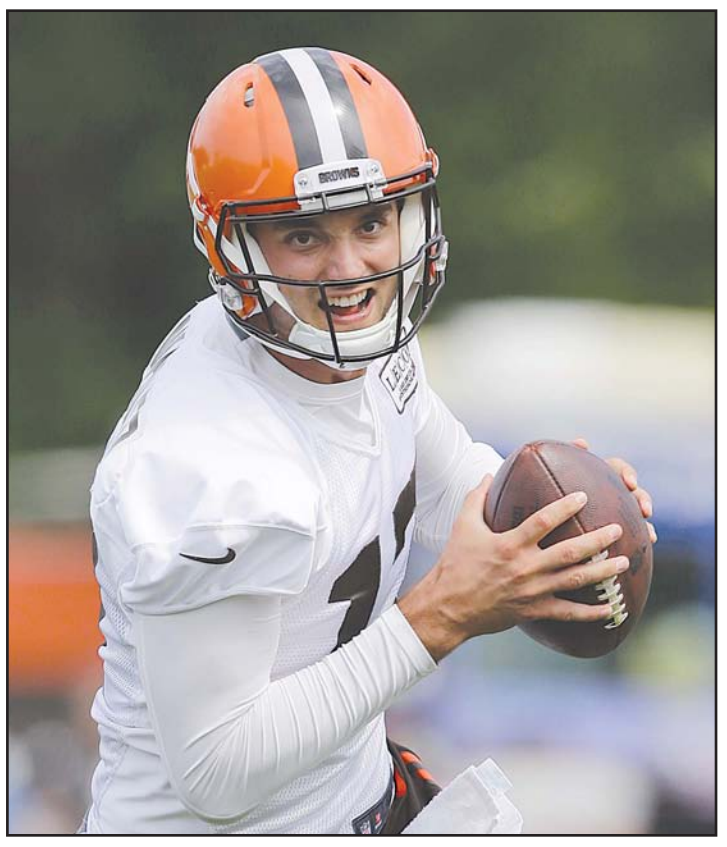

Although no official statistics were kept during the scrimmage, Osweiler unofficially had the best performance, completing 10 of 16 passes for 94 yards and leading the White team to two field goals in four possessions during a 15-0 win over the Brown team.

Kizer, who seems to be gaining more confidence with each practice, went 7 of 14 for 46 yards. But the second-round pick missed an easy touchdown when he badly overthrew wide-open running back Duke Johnson over the middle.

"For him to be that wide open and for me to miss is unacceptable," Kizer said. "I

Bauer (10-8) allowed one run in seven innings, on Todd Frazier's fifth-inning home run. Third baseman Giovanny Urshela made an outstanding defensive play on Clint Frazier's grounder to throw out Ronald Torreyes at home plate, and Gary Sanchez stranded the bases loaded with a strikeout.

Urshela made a diving stop of Matt Holliday's sixth-inning grounder and threw him out at first.

Edwin Encarnacion had two RBIs, and Austin Jackson and Michael Brantley each had RBIs.

New York had won seven of eight before the slide. The Yankees have scored six runs in the last four games, going 2 for 26 with runners in scoring position. A day after making three errors in the first inning, New York contributed to three runs with right fielder Aaron Judge's throwing error, Sanchez's major league-leading 12th passed ball and Chad Green's wild pitch.

Traded from Atlanta to Minnesota to New York, Garcia (1-1) became the first pitcher to make three straight appearances as a starter for three different teams since Gus Weyhing in 1895, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. Garcia gave up six runs — five earned — five hits and four walks in 4⅔ innings.

He was the second starter in two days to lose his Yankees debut after Sonny Gray was beaten by Cleveland and Corey Kluber in Thursday's series opener.

Judge, who leads the majors with 34 home runs, returned to the lineup after a day off. He singled in the first, walked in the fourth and fifth and struck out in the eighth. New York's star rookie is batting .174 (12 for 69) with 30 strikeouts since

'Sneaky-deep field' awaits starter

By TOM LAMARRA
Special to The Vindicator

CHESTER, W.VA.

The 3-year-olds who have competed in Triple Crown races traditionally have drawn the most attention in the Grade III West Virginia Derby, but this year's $750,000 race has attracted a field with many possibilities.

Three colts come to Mountaineer Casino, Racetrack & Resort today after quality efforts in the Grade III Iowa Derby on July 7. As a reference point, Concord Point and Prayer for Relief won the Iowa Derby in 2010 and 2011, respectively, before winning the West Virginia Derby.

Whitham Thoroughbreds' McCormick and NK Racing's Impressive Edge dueled for the lead in the 1 1/16-mile race until the final yards but held very well for second and third, respectively, behind Hence. Tom Durant's Silver Dust made a bold bid to get within a neck of the lead on the far turn in the Iowa Derby and kept on to finish a close fourth.

Cupid, winner of last year's 1 1/8-mile West Virginia Derby, used a victory in the Grade II Indiana Derby three weeks prior as his springboard. Multiple graded stakes winner Irap, who captured this year's Indiana Derby July 15, is awaiting a stakes at Saratoga Race Course, but the second- and fourth-place finishers, A.J. Foyt's Colonelsdarktemper and Albaugh Family Stable's Watch Me Whip, are entered at Mountaineer.

Add in Reddam Racing's B Squared, who finished second and third in two Grade III stakes in California against some of the top West Coast 3-year-olds, and the West Virginia Derby becomes quite the handicapping puzzle.

WEST VIRGINIA DERBY

♦TODAY at Mountaineer Casino, Racetrack & Resort. First post for the day's program is 2 p.m., with the Derby – the day's eighth race – set to begin at 5:21 p.m.

"It's a sneaky-deep field," said Mark Patterson, the assistant racing secretary at Mountaineer who is involved in recruiting horses for the race. "(The favorites) from the Triple Crown races are far from invincible. The Belmont Stakes was June 10, and that was a long time ago. The winner usually has raced much closer to the West Virginia Derby."

Patterson, who also handicaps races at Mountaineer, said the field is short on two things: true speed and true stamina. Patch and Lookin At Lee, who last ran in the Belmont Stakes, prefer to come from off the early pace. They have proven stamina but it's far from certain they'll get a legitimate pace, he said.

"It looks like a race in which nobody wants to go out there too fast early," Patterson said.

The West Virginia Derby usually attracts a good-sized field, and this year is no exception as 11 were entered. Patterson said he and racing secretary Joe Narcavish begin canvasing emerging and top 3-year-olds several months before the race and track those that fall by the wayside for a period of time. It's also a matter of educating trainers about the value of the race.

"A lot of guys know we're here, and they come about every year," Patterson said. "We try to recruit from far-away territories and talk with trainers who may not know what we're about and how prominent the race is. It's an evolving process to make sure everybody knows how big the race is. We always get a big field, but I'm surprised at the depth this year. Who else does that with all the other major 3-year-old races out there?"

KEEP YOUR EYES OUT

If you plan to visit Mountaineer for the West Virginia Derby program and want to get some information on how to handicap races and wager on them, HorsePlayerNOW representatives will be on hand on the deck on the track apron with plenty of information – and eye-patches.

One of the Derby favorites, Patch, had his left eye removed during his 2-year-old year and has generated a great deal of interest among racing fans. He has performed well on the racetrack; his only off-the-board finish in five starts came in the Grade I Kentucky Derby.

"We will be doing all-day seminars on how to handicap, read past performances, read the tote board, and understand money management and wager types," said Jeremy Plonk of HorsePlayerNOW, which is in its seventh year of the "Night School" online fan education program.

It will mark the third time the West Virginia Derby is part of the Night School Tour. Those who visit the booth also will get free tip-sheets and wagering information cards.

Plonk said the eyepatches will be given away free to fans in support of Patch courtesy of HorsePlayerNOW, which will feature the promotion on Twitter. Fans will be encouraged to share their "Patch pics" as well.

STEELERS

Tomlin's contract extended through 2020

PITTSBURGH

Mike Tomlin's strong first decade with the Pittsburgh Steelers has earned the coach the chance to work well into a second decade with the organization.

Tomlin and the team have agreed to an extension that will keep the 45-year-old in Pittsburgh through the 2020 season.

Tomlin is 103-57 in 10 years with the Steelers, who have captured one Super Bowl, been to another and earned five AFC North titles during his tenure. He is one of eight coaches to win 100 games in their first 10 seasons.

Steelers President Art Rooney said Tomlin "continues to prove he is one of the top head coaches in the National Football League." Pittsburgh went 11-5 in 2016 before falling to New England in the AFC championship game.

Tomlin called his 10 seasons an "amazing experience," adding his focus is on helping the franchise win a seventh Super Bowl.

TITANS

Friday night lights heralds camp break

FRANKLIN, TENN.

The Tennessee Titans found a way to break up the monotony of the opening week of training camp: Their first Friday night lights excursion.

The Titans loaded onto buses for the short drive south of Nashville to this historic town for their first night practice of camp. Coach Mike Mularkey, who has his own good memories of playing high school games on Friday night, called it a fun night.

"I've always enjoyed this," Mularkey said. "I've done this before other places I've been. It's a great environment. It's fun for everybody. I know the players' energy level was great coming down here. They didn't fail to perform."

The Titans chose Centennial High for its location right off Interstate 65 along with plenty of parking and bleachers on each side of the field. The team's grounds crew worked with the high school this summer to make sure the field was ready for the NFL team. The team also brought along inflatables with food trucks on hand.

So when the Titans got off the buses, they found a crowd of 6,822 waiting for a practice on a perfect summer night with temperatures in the mid-70s. They signed autographs before taking the field and then lined the edge of the field for the national anthem to kick the night off in style.

"That's a great turnout," Mularkey said. "Yeah I think it is. For a Friday night? There's lots to do in Nashville and to have them come out here and support us I think that's a great number."

DOLPHINS

Surgery is option for Tannehill

DAVIE, FLA.

Ryan Tannehill sat in the team cafeteria Friday, his left leg in a brace and propped on a chair as he watched practice from afar with a sullen stare.

He has again been demoted to the role of spectator, perhaps for the entire season.

Knee surgery is an option for the Miami Dolphins quarterback, although it's possible an operation can be avoided, coach Adam Gase said. But even then Tannehill is expected to be sidelined at least six weeks.

Tannehill, who missed the final four games of last season with two sprained ligaments in his knee, reinjured it in practice Thursday. An MRI was inconclusive, and the Dolphins are consulting with a multitude of specialists.

"I wouldn't say second and third opinions — we're probably going deeper than that, talking to a lot of people, making sure we get the right information," Gase said. "Everything is on the table right now."

There's no timetable for a decision, he said.

BILLS

Starting left tackle to practice next week

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y.

Cordy Glenn's sore left foot checked out fine and the Buffalo Bills starting left tackle is expected to resume practicing next week, a person with direct knowledge of the injury told The Associated Press.

The person spoke to the AP on the condition of anonymity on Friday because the Bills have not disclosed that information after Glenn missed his second straight day of practice. Without disclosing the nature of the injury, coach Sean McDermott referred to Glenn's injury as "general foot soreness," and said it was too early to determine whether surgery would be required.

McDermott also revealed Glenn traveled to have his injury evaluated by foot specialist Robert Anderson in Charlotte, N.C., on Thursday.

McDermott had expressed concern on Thursday over an injury that has nagged the Bills' top-paid offensive lineman all offseason.

"It is concerning, because it's gone on so long," he said.

Glenn did not speak to reporters after practice.

It's unclear how the injury developed. Glenn was held out of the team's spring practices before being cleared for the start of training camp. He practiced on a limited basis during the team's first six sessions before being held out on Thursday.

Ohio State searching for a deep-ball threat

Associated Press

COLUMBUS

There are no marquee names among the Ohio State wide receivers. At least not yet.

The Buckeyes are hoping one of the half dozen or so experienced receivers can become a household name — or at least emerge as the reliable deep-ball threat the team has been missing.

The candidates for go-to guy include Parris Campbell, who was expected to be a star last year and just didn't get there, and fellow junior Terry McLaurin, who seems poised to step from his role as special-teams stalwart to reliable pass-catcher. McLaurin has just two career TD catches, while Campbell is still looking for his first.

Then there's Johnnie Dixon, who is fully healthy for the first time in his three years at Ohio State. Sophomores K.J. Hill, Binjimen Victor and Austin Mack showed flashes of potential last season and looked like seasoned veterans in the wide open spring game.

Coach Urban Meyer has said true freshmen Trevon Grimes, Jaylen Harris and Elijah Gardiner also could see playing time.

"I feel like the attitude is back," McLaurin said. "You see out there if you watch practice, every ball that's in the air, we want it, we've got to have it. I talk about it every day. I talked about it in the spring — that attitude, that swagger. I think it's back."

Receivers coach Zach Smith said he needs six wideouts who are game-ready. But the Buckeyes will settle for one who can consistently get open downfield and catch long throws from J.T. Barrett. Smith said receivers "underperformed" last year, but that was just part of the problem.

"It's not looking for a deep-ball guy," he insisted. "It's looking for the offense to complete deep balls and execute them. We've had guys get open, we've had guys not get open. The quarterback doesn't make a great throw, the O-line doesn't protect. It's been an offensive issue. Call it the perfect storm."

Meyer and new offensive coordinator Kevin Wilson have made it clear that completing long passes is a priority. And they like the development and maturity of this group of receivers.

"It's one of the best groups we've ever had, culturally," Meyer said. "There are zero issues. It's just show up and go to work, be at your body weight and give your very best. They are unproven, but those kind of players usually turn out to have very good careers."

Campbell is expected to operate out of the hybrid H-back position that Curtis Samuel owned last season. Expectations are high, even though the junior has just 13 catches for 121 yards in his career, all last year.

"I've developed as a player, I've developed as a leader, and my attitude, my effort, everything I put into this program is starting to surface," Campbell said.

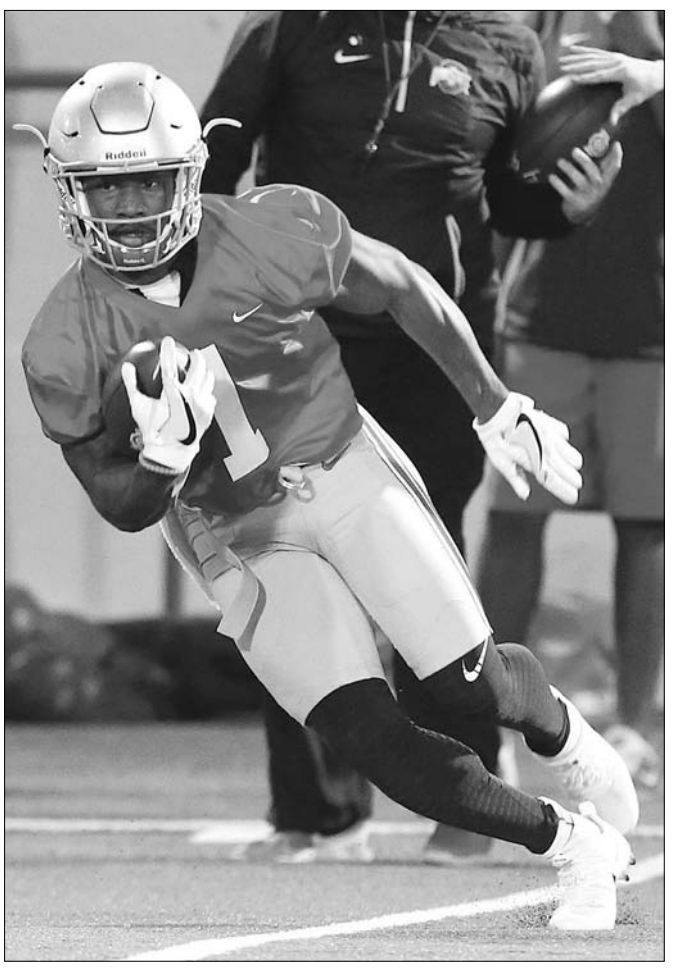

Smith said this is Campbell's time.

"He's always been a role player, always been a really good player, but he's never had to be the guy," Smith said. "We had Michael Thomas, we had Curtis Samuel, now it's Parris's turn to be the guy on offense."

Besides returning tight end Marcus Baugh, who caught 24 passes for 269 yards and two touchdowns, Hill is the most productive returning receiver, catching 18 passes for 262 yards and a touchdown last season.

The fleet Dixon may be the most intriguing of the bunch. Plagued by knee problems since he got to Columbus, the junior has been limited to just 14 games in three seasons and says he almost quit after last season. But he didn't miss a spring practice for the first time in his Ohio State career, and caught a team-leading six passes for 108 yards in the spring game.

"It's the best feeling I've had in a while," Dixon said. "I haven't been healthy really since early high school years, so being healthy is big. I enjoy it. It's fun being out there every day."

New Hall of Famers campaign for more RBs

Associated Press

CANTON

For several members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame's class of 2017, it was a time to campaign while celebrating.

Terrell Davis wants more attention paid to the running game, and stronger hall consideration for running backs — something similar to this year, when both he and LaDainian Tomlinson were selected.

Morten Andersen, just the second full-time kicker to make the hall, spoke out Friday for the guys who put the foot in football.

Kenny Easley can't believe there are only eight pure safeties enshrined.

So while enthusiastically embracing their entry into the hall, which will happen tonight along with Kurt Warner, Jerry Jones and Jason Taylor, Davis and Andersen and Easley represented.

"The running game is not just go to minicamp and then training camp in shorts and T-shirts and think you will be successful," Davis said when the unusual presence of two running backs in the same hall class was mentioned. "You need the pads on, need lots of hitting and repetitions. It's like an orchestra.

"I think now they are realizing in the NFL you've got to find other ways of getting the running game going."

Davis pushed for more Broncos in the hall. From the two Denver teams he helped win NFL titles in 1997 and '98, only John Elway and Shannon Sharpe also are in.

TODAY

♦Pro Football Hall of Fame induction ceremony, 7 p.m. TV: ESPN.

"Steve Atwater, Jason Elam, Rod Smith, [owner] Pat Bowlen," he said, reeling off the names. "Those are ones I played with and I certainly think they will all be in."

Andersen joins Jan Stenerud as the enshrined kickers; Ray Guy is the only pure punter in the hall. Although Andersen is the NFL's scoring leader and kicked for 25 seasons, it took him eight years of eligibility before getting in.

Considering the role kickers play, especially in today's game, he believes that trend will change.

"With my election to the Hall of Fame and the level of skill today, it moves the conversation along," Andersen said. "I would argue that, besides the quarterback position, kickers affect the outcome of games more than anyone.

"There are a lot of guys I feel should be looked at more seriously," he added, mentioning not only kickers such as Gary Anderson and the still-active Adam Vinatieri, but special teamer Steve Tasker and punter Sean Landetta. "It's a tight squeeze.

"It feels good to be on the other side, and now it's my obligation to enhance their chances. I hope it's not another 21 years where no one gets in."

Andersen doesn't expect a special teams player to get in yearly, instead targeting "every three to five years." Easley, selected by the seniors committee, is in more of a rush to see safeties inducted.

"We set the tone on defense," the former hard-hitting Seahawks star said. "We're going to get a lot of these guys in the hall. Between John Lynch, Atwater, Brian Dawkins, Darren Woodson – any of those four are fine, or all of them.

"I prefer all of them," he added with a laugh, calling for a "megasafety class."

Beyond that quartet – Lynch has been a frequent finalist in the voting – Easley recognized another group that soon will be eligible.

"We've got a lot of guys coming behind them, you know, Ed Reed, Troy Polamalu," Easley said. "We got some guys who [annually] will be genuine contenders."

Davis' election was delayed by questions about such a short career: Davis played seven NFL seasons, the last two wrecked by injuries. But the other five were spectacular.

His comparison, he noted, is Gale Sayers, who also had a mercurial career but was a first-ballot entry. That led to more campaigning by Davis.

"Now the precedent is reset," he said. "It should not be how long you played. What it should be based on is how well you played in the NFL."

Asked about the exclusivity of any hall of fame, Davis said: "That's what makes it special, everyone can't get in."

Then he chuckled.

"But when you're on the other side, you say, 'Can't they open the floodgates and unplug the hole and let guys in?'" the game. Poland prevailed 6-4 thank in large part to a hot start offensively. The offensive attack was led by Lexi Diaz, who finished with three hits and two RBIs. Brooke Bobbey added two hits and Poland totaled 10 hits.

"We jumped on them early, scored three runs in the first inning and had them on the defensive," Matt Bobbey said.

Camryn Lattanzio's two-run homer put Poland up 5-0 and a dominant outing for pitcher KaiLi Gross sealed the win. Gross pitched the whole game and struck out nine.

"Our pitching and defense came through. They were a very good hitting team, and their bats didn't wake up until late in the game," Matt Bobbey said.

After finishing fifth in last year's World Series, Bobbey credits experience and pitching to the success of this year's run.

"Bringing back the experience of our core group of players, and adding KaiLi to our team has made things easier on us," he said.

Gross, along with Bobbey's daughter, Brooke, create a dynamic pitching duo that gives Poland an edge.

"Having two good pitchers allows for them to get extra rest in between games and gives them more time to recover," Bobbey. "KaiLi's been pitching great and we're gonna try and ride her arm to a championship."

will go back and obviously, check out the footwork on that play, check out the read, where my eyes are and make sure that we can make the correction going into tomorrow to continue to get better as much as we can. I have played better. This is a unique opportunity to go against the guys in the situation that we are in."

Kessler completed 4 of 6 passes for 29 yards, and the second-year QB did little to distinguish himself following a rough few days of practice.

Hogan was 5 for 5 for 71 yards, but he picked up major yardage on a play where he appeared was about to get drilled by Garrett.

NOTES

The Browns got a scare on the third play from scrimmage when starting LB Christian Kirksey went down with an apparent leg injury. He walked off the field under his own power and Jackson gave him the rest of the night off. "He could have gone back in, but I shut that down real quickly," Jackson said. ... Rookie S Jabrill Peppers returned punts and got some time with the first-string defense. "He is coming on, just more comfortable, understanding the defense better," Jackson said. "I saw him smack a couple of people today, which is good. That is who he is and that is what we think he will bring to the table." ... The kicking battle was a draw as rookie Zane Gonzalez made field goals of 39 and 22 yards, and Cody Parkey made his from 40.

the All-Star break and has struck out in 22 consecutive games.

Jackson doubled in a run in the second, took third on the throw and scored when Sanchez couldn't handle Garcia's pitch with Roberto Perez batting.

Brandon Guyer led off the third with a single and headed for third on Michael Brantley's single. Judge's throw hit Gyuer and bounced into the photographer's pit, allowing Guyer to score.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Yankees: Green's wild pitch in the fifth bounced off Sanchez's right hand, but the catcher remained in the game. ... OF Brett Gardner fouled a ball off his chin in the fifth, but singled later in the at-bat.

Indians: LHP Boone Logan (torn back muscle) will likely miss the rest of the season. The injury occurred July 19 and was diagnosed as a high grade latissimus strain. Logan, who is on the 60-day DL, will not have surgery.

UP NEXT

LHP Jordan Montgomery (7-6) starts for the Yankees today after allowing four runs in 2⅔ innings — the shortest start of his big career. RHP Danny Salazar (4-5), who starts for Cleveland, has given up two earned runs in 13 innings in two starts since coming off the disabled list.

The Indians' Michael Brantley scores on a sacrifice by Edwin Encarnacion ahead of the throw to Yankees catcher Gary Sanchez in the third inning of Friday's game in Cleveland. The Indians defeated the Yankees, 7-2.

Friday's other MLB games

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Tigers 5, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE

Justin Upton hit a grand slam in the eighth inning to back a strong pitching performance by Justin Verlander, and Detroit beat Baltimore. Jim Adduci also homered for the Tigers, who have won six of seven. Verlander (7-7) struck out 10 and gave up two runs and six hits over seven innings. Two singles and a walk loaded the bases for Upton, who sent the first pitch deep into the left-field seats. It was his third slam of the season and seventh of his career.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 2

BOSTON

Mitch Moreland homered with two outs in the 11th inning, lifting Boston to a victory over Chicago. Moreland, a defensive replacement in the 10th, drove a pitch from Aaron Bummer (0-2) over the Green Monster for his 14th of the season. It was Boston's second game-ending homer this week.

Twins 8, Rangers 4

MINNEAPOLIS

Bartolo Colon threw his first complete game in two years to earn his first win with Minnesota, Brian Dozier homered twice and the Twins beat Texas. Robbie Grossman homered and had three RBIs for the Twins. In his fourth start for Minnesota, the 44-year-old Colon (3-9) scattered nine hits and allowed four earned runs for his 37th career complete game.

Astros 16, Blue Jays 7

HOUSTON

Alex Bregman hit a two-run homer and Marwin Gonzalez added a three-run shot as part of a nine-run fourth inning, and Houston beat Toronto. Tyler White had four hits, including a two-run homer in the sixth and a solo drive in the eighth, and finished a triple shy of the cycle. Every Astro hitter had at least one hit. Yuli Gurriel had a two-run homer in the first, an RBI single in the third and also finished a triple shy of the cycle.

Mariners 5, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY

James Paxton tied a Mariners' record by winning his seventh straight start, and Seattle beat Kansas City. Paxton gave up two runs and four hits in six innings with one walk, seven strikeouts and a pair of wild pitches. David Phelps, Nick Vincent and Edwin Diaz each followed with a perfect inning as Seattle improved to 13-8 since the All-Star break. Diaz got his 22nd save in 26 chances.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Reds 3, Cardinals 2

CINCINNATI

Joey Votto drove home a pair of runs with a double and a single, and Asher Wojciechowski went five innings in his return to the rotation on Friday night, leading Cincinnati over St. Louis. Votto had a pair of RBI hits off Mike Leake (7-10). Billy Hamilton added a run-scoring single off Leake, who allowed eight hits in six innings.

Nationals 4, Cubs 2

CHICAGO

Daniel Murphy hit two home runs to back Tanner Roark, and Washington beat Chicago. Murphy hit a two-run homer in the first and connected off Kyle Hendricks leading off the sixth for a 3-0 lead. Roark (9-7) didn't allow a run until Javier Baez chased him with a two-run homer with one out in the seventh.

Braves 5, Marlins 3

ATLANTA

R.A. Dickey won for the first time in seven starts, Nick Markakis hit a three-run homer and Atlanta overcame Giancarlo Stanton's two home runs to beat Miami. Dickey (7-7) allowed three hits, three runs, one walk and struck out three in six innings.

Dodgers 6, Mets 0

Friday's other pro golf results

WOMEN'S BRITISH OPEN
ST. ANDREWS, SCOTLAND

I.K. Kim, the best player in women's golf right now, emerged from the cold and wet with a 4-under 68 to build a two-shot lead in the Women's British Open going into the weekend. A two-time winner on the LPGA Tour over the last two months, Kim dropped only one shot in some of the worst conditions at Kingsbarns Links and reached the halfway point at 11-under 133. She was two shots clear of Lexi Thompson and Georgia Hall of England. Kim displayed a remarkable fortitude in weather that veered erratically toward the end of the day between bright sunshine and torrential downpours. The 29-year-old from South Korea atoned for her lone bogey with three birdies and an eagle on the 538-yard 11th hole.

PGA CHAMPIONS
BLAINE, MINN.

Two-time tournament winner Kenny Perry shot a 7-under 65 Friday to hold a share of the lead after the first round of the PGA Tour Champions event just outside of Minneapolis-St. Paul. Perry, who won in Minnesota in 2014 and 2015, opened his round with six consecutive birdies. He finished with another one to join Mike Goodes atop the leaderboard at TPC Twin Cities. Scott Verplank, Marco Dawson, Gene Sauers and Jay Haas finished at 6-under. Steve Flesch, Colin Montgomerie and Brandt Jobe were among the golfers to card 67s. Jeff Sluman leads a host of golfers who shot opening-round 68s, three shots off the lead. Perry, who won the U.S. Senior Open earlier this season by two shots at the Salem Country Club in Massachusetts, finished his front nine on Friday at 7-under 29. Perry cooled off after that, picking up his first bogey on his 17th hole before an easy birdie putt brought him even with Goodes.

ELLIE MAE CLASSIC
HAYWARD, CALIF.

Stephen Curry was certain to miss the cut against professional golfers one notch below the PGA Tour. But not before leaving some of golf's best players impressed that a two-time MVP for the Golden State Warriors could enter their arena and look respectable. Curry opened with a 4-over 74 on the TPC Stonebrae and needed a career round to stay for the weekend. Instead, he shot 39 on the front nine Friday. He was 8 over for the tournament with six holes to play and was well below the projected cut at the Ellie Mae Classic. No matter. "That was awesome what he did yesterday," British Open champion Jordan Spieth said Friday at the Bridgestone Invitational. "I think he certainly beat most everybody's expectations, but I don't think that really surprised him. It was pretty cool — really cool — to see. You see him fist-pumping out there, and just him talking about how nervous he was when he heard his name called, it just makes us feel a little better when sometimes some of the stuff he does looks like a robot." One of the highlights for Curry in the opening round was a long birdie putt and telling his caddie to "Go get that" from the cup. That was the famous line Spieth said to his caddie at Royal Birkdale two weeks ago after a 50-foot eagle putt to take the lead.

BRIDGESTONE

like 2015, 2016," Day said, alluding to his best stretch of golf when he rose to No. 1 in the world. "I was just pouring in everything. I know that it's still in there. I've just got to keep practicing hard. I know it will eventually happen."

Day felt he was slowed by the last — and longest — of the rain delays. He returned to three-putt the 10th for a bogey and never got back any momentum.

It was like that for everyone who slogged through a 10-hour day.

The second round was delayed 45 minutes at the start, and then another 45 minutes when a small band of storms rolled through. A delayed of some 3½ hours followed, making it feel like two separate rounds and one long day.

Walker still isn't out of the woods just yet. He first thought he had mononucleosis around the Masters, and it eventually was diagnosed as Lyme's disease. He has tried to muddle through the year when his energy allowed, though there hasn't been a lot of practice.

And even a 65, which matched his low score of the year, wasn't smooth sailing.

"It's day to day," he said. "I felt pretty good all week physically, and I wake up this morning and I've just got his overall flu feeling in my body. So I take some Advil, it goes away. And then during the last break, it came back, so I took some more. Now it's gone. You just never know when it's going to spike up."

But he felt good enough to make birdie on both par 3s on the back nine, and drop only one shot on the round.

Fishing bug bit me early

A photo snapped when Dwight Eisenhower was president surfaced recently to reveal a bit of history that says a lot about my roots as a fisherman.

The snapshot came to light as my sister, Kitty, was going through stacks of family stuff. The picture shows Kitty and my cousin, Parke, flanking me. By the age of the children in the photo, it looks to have been around the time when I was 5 or 6 years old.

On closer inspection, the picture itself says a lot.

First, I'd like to have an XL version of the shirt I was wearing on the day the camera caught us kids. Great look, perfect for a 21st-century picnic or ball game.

But more important in that photo is the look on my face. My smile said it all. The photo shows me holding a stringer of fish and wearing a grin across my mug.

That's what fishing does – still to this day.

For me and for many, fishing is more than catching fish. Each fishing trip is a sensory experience that, if we let them, will linger long after the day's catch is forgotten.

The fishing bug bit me early. Among my earliest memories is a night fishing trip with my father and uncle. Still in my brain is the vision of the Coleman lantern hanging on a pole off the side of the boat and moths circling the intense light.

Burned in my memory of that summer night experience is the hiss of the lantern as the pressurized chamber fed fuel to the glowing wicks. I always got a kick when Dad lit the Coleman because it meant one of three things: fishing, camping or a backyard wiener roast. All three were fine with me.

Back to that old photo. The other two kids are not exactly smiling. While my face was beaming as three fish dangled from the stringer I was clutching, sister Kitty and cousin Parke were simply gazing at the photographer.

I see it this way: I was enjoying myself in the company of three fine fish, while my sister and cousin were just tolerating the situation.

Fishing always is a joy. Whether the heat is intense or the cold is intolerable, I find the fun of fishing. Whether the fish are biting or lockjawed, I enjoy the experience on the water.

The sensations I soak in make each fishing trip memorable.

My most recent trip was like a National Geographic documentary. I was at Lake Milton and the morning began cool and fresh under low clouds that soon lifted.

I pointed the boat up the river and spied ospreys in the sky near the Ellsworth Road bridge.

A 40-inch muskie rolled up out of the murky water and chased the lure I was retrieving.

A dozen or so bass liked my topwater and plastic baits. Ducks and geese paddled in the river current and a pickup truck clattered over the Shillings Mill bridge. Squirrels rattled in the hardwoods towering up from the Mahoning River bank.

All images for the fishing memory book.

But as in much that defines our lives, fishing also is competition. You and me versus the fish. You and me versus the other anglers. So that photo of me grinning while gripping the stringer of fish with stone-faced sister and cousin standing by sends one final message.

Why was I smiling? Because I had fish and they didn't.

That's fishing.

The sights and sounds of summer

Scott Shalaway

One evening a few weeks ago, my wife and I played cards with our daughter and her husband at their home near Asheville, N.C. A cool breeze drifted through an open window and so did the cacophony of a katydid chorus. Hundreds, if not thousands, of katydids sang almost in unison. It was so loud I had trouble concentrating on the game. (Maybe that's why I didn't win a single hand.)

Now, a few weeks later, the katydids are singing in our backyard about 300 miles north of Asheville. They have not yet reached the point of drowning out more subtle night sounds.

Male katydids sing from early evening well into the night. The song is harsh and burry and sounds something like "Ch-ch" or "Ch-ch-ch" or "ch-ch-ch-ch-ch." The phrases are repeated about once a second, and the rhythm suggests the insect's name: Ka-ty, ka-ty-did or kay-ty-did-did.

An additional familiar voice will soon join the late summer nocturne. Snowy tree crickets generate a seemingly endless series of high-pitched melodic chirps. During the day, they feed quietly amidst the foliage of trees and shrubs. Thanks to their small size and cryptic pale green color, they blend in with their surroundings. At night, their song is ventriloquistic. Shine a light where you think the tree cricket must be, and sure enough, it's not.

Another summer night sound is the "peent" of the common nighthawk, kin to the whip-poor-will. Scan the sky around the lights at a nighttime baseball game, and you're almost certain to see these birds sweeping the sky for flying insects. Listen intently when the din of the crowd subsides, and you may hear their distinctive nasal "Peent!" For the rest of the month nighthawks will gather in flocks as they prepare for migration.

Similarly, chimney swifts scour the sky during daylight hours before they descend into chimneys to roost. If you know a chimney being used by the swifts, watch it in the evening just before sundown.

At dusk swifts assemble and descend en masse into chimneys to roost. In late summer, hundreds or even thousands, may spend the night in abandoned industrial and residential chimneys. Watching them return for the night is like seeing a plume of smoke descending back into the chimney.

A familiar sound on hot summer days is the pulsing drone of dog day cicadas. Singing cicadas usually signal the arrival of uncomfortable heat and humidity.

Much less frequent and predictable are late summer swarms of dragonflies. Over the last few weeks, I've received several emails and letters from readers reporting large aggregations of dragonflies, usually hovering above the grass in a wet meadow. I received similar reports of dragonfly swarms back in 1993 and 2011. Some readers described the phenomenon as "clouds of dragonflies that darkened the air just above the ground."

Though dragonflies are expert aerial predators, they are harmless to people. They do not sting, but they are serious predators of flying insects. So dragonflies are great to have around.

Entomologists suggest that late summer swarms of dragonflies may be responding to population explosions of tiny flying insects such as mosquitoes, gnats and midges. In such cases, these tiny insects would be invisible to the distant human eye. It might seem that the dragonflies appear for no reason, but they are enjoying a feeding frenzy. When the prey disappears, so do the dragonflies.

If you prefer stationary targets, roadsides and old fields have already begun to burst into their late summer colors. Bright patches of yellow signal that goldenrod has begun to bloom. By the end of the month, unmowed fields will transform into oceans of gold.

Scattered among the goldenrod, watch for dark purple flowers atop stems that can reach 4 or 5 feet high. Ironweed is one of my favorite summer wildflowers.

And if there's a damp meadow nearby, look for dense stands of Joe-Pye-weed. Its pink-purple flowers are butterfly magnets. Tiger swallowtails find it particularly irresistible.

Birds dominate our senses in spring, but from mid to late summer, insects and wildflowers take center stage. Take time to notice the changing of the guard.

Dr. Shalaway can be heard on Birds & Nature from 3 to 4 p.m. Sunday afternons on 620 KHB Radio, Pittsburgh or live online anywhere at www.khbradio.com. Visit Scott's website www.drshalaway.com or contact him directly at sshalaway@aol.com or 2222 Fish Ridge Road, Cameron, WV 26033.

Bill Rudge Ministries celebrates 40 years

Staff report

HERMITAGE, PA.

Bill Rudge Ministries, 280 N. Buhl Farm Drive, celebrates 40 years of ministry Tuesday.

Rudge and his wife, Karen, began the ministry in 1977 with no money and no facilities. The ministry has grown to an outreach covering more than 130 countries around the world.

His upcoming book, "The Impossible," will tell of numerous miracles documented throughout the years to show God's faithfulness to the ministry.

Bill Rudge Ministries has led dozens of mission trips into remote and often dangerous areas to minister at conventions, churches, schools, leper colonies, hospitals and villages.

Rudge and his son BJ have spoken at many churches, schools, colleges, seminaries, military bases, prisons and other gatherings.

BRM offers training programs for students, military personnel, mission teams, church groups and others at its Ultimate Challenge Obstacle Course.

More than 30 staff members and volunteers serve in various aspects of the ministry, either from the Hermitage headquarters or from their own offices throughout the country.

To find out more about the ministry, go to its website, billrudge.org, or call 724-983-1223.

Pope's Sistine Chapel choir launches US tour

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY

The Vatican's Sistine Chapel Choir is embarking on its first U.S. tour in 30 years, hoping to show audiences in New York, Washington and Detroit that it has abandoned the habits that earned it a reputation as the "Sistine Screamers."

The Pontifical Musical Chapel Sistina, colloquially known as the "Pope's Choir," bills itself as the world's oldest choir, part of the tradition of liturgical choirs that have sung for pontiffs since the first centuries of the Roman Catholic Church.

Today, the group of 20 adults and 30 boys performs regularly in the Sistine Chapel below Michelangelo's masterpieces, at Masses the pope celebrates in St. Peter's Basilica and for international concert appearances.

Hearing the singers' dulcet tones today, it's hard to imagine they earned the nickname the "Sistine Screamers" a few years back for their habit of belting out their numbers operatically, relying on volume instead of technique.

These days, the choir once again is drawing talent. Its current members include singers from Poland, Britain, Brazil and Argentina.

Diegogaston Zamediom 40, says being the first Argentine singer in the choir of the first Argentine pope is the "maximum of the maximum."

Dear Annie

'Torn' knows what is best for daughter

Dear Annie: I have an 11-year-old daughter who has ADHD. Most of the time we are able to control her behaviors and impulsiveness with medication. I have learned over the years to pick my battles with her behaviors.

My mom recently told me about a family reunion coming up. I told her that I would not be attending. Being surrounded by large groups of people tends to overwhelm my daughter and makes her behaviors worse. A lot of the family that is going to be there I haven't seen in probably 20 years. Though I would like to see some of them, I don't feel it's fair to force my daughter into a situation that is very uncomfortable for her.

I suggested getting a babysitter so I could attend, but my mom is saying that I'm not welcome without my daughter because I'm letting her dictate my life. According to my mom, I am to make my daughter go and make her behave. How can I tell my mom that with that many people it's just too stressful for my daughter and that she has not yet learned the skills to deal with all that anxiety? I'm conflicted. I want to be able to see my family and do what's right for my daughter, too.

TORN IN WISCONSIN

Dear Torn in Wisconsin: It sounds as if Grandmother is trying to play Mother. It's up to you to decide what's best for your daughter. If you're at all open to it, ask your daughter if she would like to go for a little while and meet everyone, and have a babysitter with you in case she feels overwhelmed and needs to leave. If you'd rather not try that, I say leave your daughter with a sitter and go to the reunion anyway. Your mother is not the only person who will be there. I'm sure your other family members will welcome you with open arms.

Dear Annie: I would like to reiterate your advice to "Motherless in the Midwest," whose mother seems to hate her. I hope that your sentence, "Your mom has her limitations, for whatever reason; this is as much as she can give you," resonated with the writer so that she can find peace.

My mother was verbally and physically abusive. I severed the relationship in my early 20s despite all my friends saying, "But she's your mother!"

The anger I carried controlled my life until my early 40s, when, through counseling, I finally accepted that my mother did the best she knew – as she was abused as a child. However, I wouldn't keep a friend who treated me as my mother did, so it was the right decision for me to walk away and finally let go of all the hurt and disappointment.

I'm happy to say that I have done much better with my own daughter – not without our own struggles – but we have a very close relationship.

BEEN THERE, Too

Dear Been There, Too: In the face of persistent toxic behavior, detachment is often the best and only option. Though I'm sure it wasn't easy, I'm glad you were able to make the right decision for yourself and forge a healthier relationship with your own daughter. I'm printing your letter here for anyone trying to find the courage to do as you did.

Some pointers for a great picnic

Dear Heloise: For fun family and friends times, we like to go picnicking. Here are some hints we use for food safety and to stay organized:

- More than one cooler or basket is an absolute must: a cooler for the cold food and drinks, a basket for chips and snack foods, and a basket or tote for accessories (knives and forks, napkins, plates, blankets, games, etc.).
- Only cold food goes in the cooler. Don't expect the cooler to cool foods; refrigerate them the night before, and layer wrapped frozen meats with ice cubes in the cooler. Pack the cooler full to help keep it colder.
- Don't sear or preheat meats at home. Bacteria can grow rapidly on food that is not cooked thoroughly.
- Grab those extra condiment packs from a quick-serve restaurant.
- Hot foods, including vegetables, should be eaten within two hours of preparation.
- Don't forget to have fun! Leave the electronics turned off, and grab a football, deck of cards or board games. Time to make some memories!

Dear Heloise: I read your column in the Orange County (Calif.) Register. I want to keep some of your hints to reference later.

To hold your column until I'm ready to "laminate" (with tape) the front side, I lay the back side of the newspaper column against the sticky side of leakproof sealing wrap. Then I cover the front side of the article with the clear packaging tape.

Now I can cut it out and tape it to the fridge, microwave, a mirror, a notebook or wherever I want, and it is protected from splashes.

Dear Heloise: There's no need to slice yourself instead of your bagel. Lay the bagel flat, cut first downward so that you have two semi-circles. Then stand each half-bagel on its flat cut and slice downward again.

Four perfect quarter-bagels that still fit in the toaster just fine. If you then insist on having circles again, just spackle the pieces together with a little extra cream cheese!

How does Jack die on 'This Is Us'? Answer coming

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.

The details of a tragedy looming over "This Is Us" will be revealed in season two.

Dan Fogelman, creator of NBC's time-shifting hit drama series, said the circumstances about the death of doting family man Jack will be part of the show's sophomore season that begins Sept. 26.

"If that is a question that is haunting people, in the course of the second season" they'll get the answers they need and more, Fogelman told a TV critics' meeting, surrounded by the show's ensemble cast including Milo Ventimiglia, who plays Jack.

His character's ultimate fate – but not how he meets it – has been a key part of the show that travels between the past and present of Jack, wife Rebecca (Mandy Moore), their three children and family circle.

Fogelman said the season's first episode will create "some momentum" toward filling in the blanks about Jack's death. But characters who die are revisited in the show's era-hopping that's intended to illustrate how "the past influences the present," he said.

"Jack has been dead the entire season, and he's nominated for an Emmy," Fogelman said, wryly.

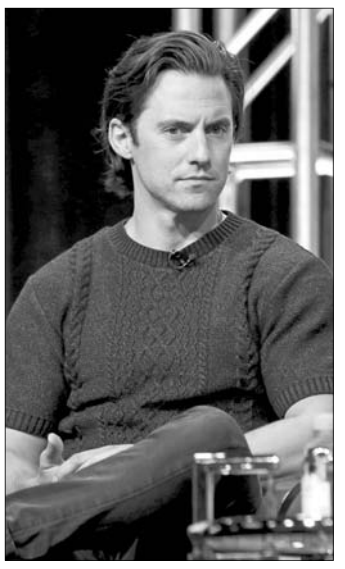

The hit drama earned 11 Emmy nominations for next month's ceremony, including acting nods for Ventimiglia, Sterling K. Brown, Chrissy Metz and Ron Cephas Jones. Its best-drama series bid is the first for a network show since "The Good Wife" in 2011.

The show's present-day story line will pick up shortly after it ended last season and on the 37th birthday of siblings Randall (Brown), Kate (Metz) and Kevin (Justin Hartley) – one year after they were first introduced in the season-one opener.

The focus will include Randall's fervent wish to adopt a child; Kate's pursuit of a singing career, and Kevin's acting career. Sylvester Stallone will make an appearance as star of the movie that could represent Kevin's big break.

For parents Jack and Rebecca, seen in the early years of their marriage, the action begins immediately after a bitter argument. Moore also will spend a "lot of time" in aging makeup for the later years in which her widowed character has remarried, Fogelman said.

"I'm so happy to have this job. I'll sit in age makeup and prosthetics makeup as long as I have to," Moore said.

The 'Sharknado' secret

By BERENICE BAUTISTA
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY

The memes and mockery abound, but "Sharknado," which has conquered audiences, netted dozens of celebrity cameos such as George R.R. Martin, Ne-Yo and Kelly Osbourne, and has turned into an annual event. The fifth installment of the TV movie series about airborne sharks arrives Sunday with new celebrities and international settings.

"As a viewer I appreciate it because it's fun, it's escapism, it's pure entertainment. But how do you explain it? I don't know," said series star Ian Ziering, who along with Tara Reid fights a tornado of sharks with a chain saw. "Major motion picture studios spend hundreds of millions of dollars trying to capture some of whatever it is that makes our little 'Sharknado' movie globally popular."

"It's kind of like the secret sauce: No one really knows for sure. I wish I knew, I would be making my own movie," he said with a laugh.

"Sharknado: Gobal Swarming" premieres Sunday on Syfy. It finds Ziering's Fin Shepherd an expert in "sharknados" who is called upon by governments around the world to fight the crazy phenomenon.

Filming took the cast and crew to Europe, Asia and Australia. This year's cameos include Olivia Newton-John, Bret Michaels, Clay Aiken, Charo and the Mexican weather girl Yanet Garcia.

"Now that we've become a global movie it's not just people who want to be in the movie, there's countries who have solicited," Ziering said.

"I think the craziest place that we shot that was, (where) they were looking at us like we were out of our mind would be Tokyo when we were running in the streets at night, like screaming. They don't understand the language, and they're looking at us and this crazy hair, and he's got this in his hand, People were like, 'What the hell is going on?'" Reid said.

The plot has been nonsensical from the beginning and has created many memes on the web. Even Ziering found it ridiculous at the beginning.

"When I read the first 'Sharknado' movie I thought it was terrible, I told my wife that I couldn't do this movie, that it would be the end of my career," said the actor, who starred in the popular '90s TV series "Beverly Hills 90210" and "Melrose Place."

"I am an actor, but my most important job is provider of my family. I didn't have very much confidence in the movie, but I did it anyway to provide for my family."

AT A GLANCE
- What: "Sharknado 5"
- When: 8 p.m. Sunday
- Where: Syfy

The love of the fans has led to a yearly installment since 2013, all of them directed by Anthony C. Ferrante.

For Ziering, the biggest challenge has been "keeping it all together."

"We're saying things that are so ridiculous that sometimes you really want to laugh really hard," he said. "But you have to take all of this really seriously, because in the context of this movie these are very serious scenarios."

At this point the only way he would stop being part of "Sharknado" would be "if Fin Sheperd ever got eaten and is not able to chain saw his way out of the shark."

Swift, DJ in court over claim of groping

By P. SOLOMON BANDA
Associated Press

DENVER

Taylor Swift and her support team didn't call police after she said she had been groped by a Denver radio host during a photo session before a concert.

Instead, they called his boss, and David Mueller lost his job. The disc jockey later sued the singer-songwriter, saying he had been falsely accused and wanted $3 million in damages.

Swift countersued, claiming sexual assault, setting up a civil trial set to begin Monday in federal court in Denver that will largely turn on who the eight-member jury believes.

Both sides say no settlement is in the works.

The lawsuits provide differing accounts of backstage events before Swift performed at a 2013 concert at the Pepsi Center in Denver.

Swift tried to keep the situation "discreet and quiet and confidential" and was upset by Mueller's claim that "for some reason she might have some incentive to actually fabricate this story," her attorney, Douglas Baldridge, has argued in court.

Swift is seeking a verdict that awards her $1, while holding Mueller responsible and "serving as an example to other women who may resist publicly reliving similar outrageous and humiliating acts," her lawsuit states.

Some entertainment attorneys say celebrities often want to address such situations outside court.

"Once celebrities decide to take legal action, it's going to hit the press, they're going to be called as a witness and they have to spend time with that," said Tre Lovell, a California-based attorney who represents entertainment management companies.

Mueller, then 51, was a morning host at a Denver country-music station when he was assigned to attend Swift's June 2, 2013, concert.

In court documents, Swift said, "He took his hand and put it up my dress and grabbed onto my ass cheek, and no matter how much I scooted over, it was still there." Mueller's attorney, Gabriel McFarland, argues that Mueller may have been misidentified after someone else touched Swift.

RECORD REVIEWS

DAN WILSON

♦Album: "Re-Covered"

♦Grade: A

Dan Wilson helped write that tune? And that one, too? If you still read album credits or liner notes, you may find Wilson's name attached to some of your favorites songs.

Formerly of Trip Shakespeare and Semisonic, the Minnesota-born Wilson has collaborated with an impressive array of musicians. On "Re-Covered," he performs his songs made famous by a dozen artists including Adele, John Legend, the Dixie Chicks, Chris Stapleton and Taylor Swift.

Adele's "Someone Like You" and the Dixie Chicks' "Not Ready To Make Nice," both Grammy winners, as well as LeAnn Rimes' "Borrowed," came with very personal stories.

For Adele, it was the end of a relationship, while the Dixie Chicks sang about the controversy after Natalie Maines' critical comments of President George W. Bush in 2003. Rimes bared her feelings about her real-life affair with future husband Eddie Cibrian.

Wilson proves his empathy, especially on "Someone Like You" with backing from The Kronos Quartet, his versions conserve the originals' intimacy with time healing some of the wounds.

Other highlights include "All Will Be Well" (The Gabe Dixon Band), "Landing" (brother and former bandmate Matt Wilson) and "Home" (Dierks Bentley).

Leaving the oldest song for last — the only one here Wilson wrote alone — the album ends with Semisonic's "Closing Time," its gentleness making it easier to see how it was meant to be about a baby's birth.

Recorded mostly in a week-long session co-helmed by Ryan Adams producer Mike Viola and backed by musicians like Elvis Costello drummer Pete Thomas, "Re-Covered" has sufficient flourishes to avoid sounding like a collection of demos and straightforward arrangements that let the songwriting stand on its own plentiful merits.

TODAY'S HOROSCOPE

Happy Birthday! In The Next Year: The cosmic fairy dust can't wait to blow a gift your way, so kick this one off with a wish list. It's a brand-new beginning. Stay away from doing the same thing the same way as last year. A big change comes within seven weeks. You'll educate yourself and bump up the financials by November. March brings a contract. Capricorn and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 14, 3, 20, 37 and 41.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Are people swayed by the positive traits of former president Barack Obama's astrological sign? The 44th American president was born when the sun, Mercury and Uranus were in Leo. Obama projects command and charisma (that's his sun), talks hopefully (that's Mercury) and promises change (that's Uranus), just as this configuration suggests. Leos are big thinkers with charisma to match.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). To honestly and respectfully speak your mind on a regular basis to your close loved ones (without being overly worried about how nice it sounds) is a healthy part of adult relationships.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). If you're being honest, you may admit that you've burdened yourself with too many responsibilities: bad for you, bad for your relationships. It will be hard to reassign some of this, but do it before you start feeling resentful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). When you're in deep, waves of emotion are a ride. You get swept into the swell, rise and rush forward with the force. When you're not in deep, you're like a person knee-deep in the ocean. The wave could rudely knock you down.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You are not your feelings. Having this or that kind of feeling doesn't make you this or that kind of person. While you experience a feeling, there's a core part of you that is a witness to your experience of it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). If you think you know what it was and what it is, you might be right. But you won't know for sure until you step back, open your imagination and ask, "What could it be?"

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). This weekend features either a big project or a massive one. Regardless of the scale, everything that comes together will be the result of a series of small action steps.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Today is like a rope game. Hold on when it's tugging and you might get burned. You can't always decide beforehand when you'll let go. Trust yourself. You'll probably feel it when the moment is right.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The benefits of an exciting hobby cannot be underestimated in the weeks to come. To cultivate such an interest will turn up your joy and vitality, not to mention enhance your image.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Someone has to lay down the law, and it will probably be you. You won't mind playing bad cop to another person's good cop as the means to an end. You do this in the name of keeping the peace.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). When someone keeps reaching out to you even though you're not reaching back, there's a motive to examine. Is it love? Profit? Are you somehow a key to their personal narrative? It's worth analyzing now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You are generous, but don't be too quick to share all you know. Those who haven't paid their dues yet won't know what to do with all the information. Only those who have worked hard to get to a certain level will understand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). While it's best to avoid conflict today, don't mistake that for avoiding life. It would be wrong to assume that your honest feelings, thoughts and drives will automatically cause a problem.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I would be very appreciative of your insights regarding my relationship to a Scorpio man born Nov. 18, 1953 (around 5 p.m.). I was born March 22, 1959, at 8 a.m. We have been together a long while. I find your insights uncanny and would enjoy reading your answer." Yours is a high-energy, intellectual union. You two stimulate one another's curiosities and interests to the point of overflow. I wouldn't be surprised if you had a large library of books, games -- maybe you're even hobbyists or collectors. You love a good debate, too, and it's your mental chemistry that keeps you both from ever getting bored with each other. This relationship isn't all brains. You two have a passionate connection. Your Venus in Taurus knows just what your sweetie's Venus in Scorpio likes. Your appeals to his heart may start at his stomach. That's the appetite of the senses, strong glue for keeping you in each other's arms. The cherry on top: You two have the Saturn mark for many more happy years together.

THE VILLAGE IDIOT
Jim Mullen

I've heard that if you want to pronounce the actor Michael Caine's name the way he does, you simply say "My Cocaine." Try it: "I'm going to see that new movie starring My Cocaine."

The film "Trainspotting" was one of many British films that had to be overdubbed to make it more understandable to Americans. Even then, words such as bevvy, dosh, gaff, coffin-dodger, draftpak and square-go were a puzzlement to many of us.

Sometimes when I'm watching those British shows on PBS, I wish there were subtitles. My friends who speak British fluently say it's not that hard to learn, and that many of the words are almost the same as ours, just pronounced differently. They say that with a few years of hard study, even someone as stupid as I am might learn to speak it fluently.

But they were all pretty sure that even then, I would still have an atrocious American accent.

Tragically, Rosetta Stone does not have a course for American English speakers to learn British English. It would be such a big help to people like me, and it could be a golden opportunity for them. There could be big money in such courses as "Learn British English," "Learn Irish English," "Learn Scottish English" and "Learn Indian English."

Of course, knowing how to understand British English would just be your first step into learning other foreign languages. You could then learn how to speak Public School English or RADA (Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts) English. Then it's on to Welsh, Cockney, Scouse, Canadian and Australian English.

Once fluent in those, you could move on to BBC English: the most difficult of all to master. Though it is a dead language like Latin that few will ever actually speak, they say that knowing it makes it easier to learn other languages.

Face it: Accents can be a problem. And as more and more of us use voice-dictation technology on our smartphones and other devices, speaking some kind of standard English will become more and more important. I have a neighbor who grew up in France and speaks excellent English.

She recently bought an Amazon Echo, the voice-activated speaker/personal assistant. While it works properly most of the time, it can't always understand her. She'll say something like, "Alexa, play some music by Johnny Cash." Alexa will answer, "I'm sorry, but I can't find any music by Zhon E. Kahsh."

As Tony Schwartz, the recording pioneer said, "A message is not what has been sent, but what has been received." Boy, was he ever right. Who hasn't heard the story of the mom who was new to texting, who received a message from her son that his dog had died? She texted back, "Sorry to hear that, lol." She thought "lol" meant "lots of love" whereas her son read it, properly, as "laughing out loud." I'm not sure if they're speaking to each other yet.

But what's really strange about my inability to understand the British is that they seem to have no problem understanding me. And I've never heard of a Hollywood movie being overdubbed into British English. This seems to be a one-way street: They can understand us, but we can't understand them. Maybe they all have a gift for languages, but that sounds a little far-fetched.

It's much more likely that I'm just tone-deaf when it comes to understanding other people's accents. Years ago, I was in a taxi on a rainy Christmas Eve, in a rush to get home to be with my family. Everyone else had the same idea, and the traffic was miserable. The name on the cabbie's license was all vowels – a Scrabble tray of U's and O's. I asked the driver where he was from. He said something that sounded like "Bed E Bum."

I said, "Bed E Bum? I never heard of it."

He turned around and stared at me in astonishment. He said, in perfect American English, "You never heard of Bethlehem?!"

Firefighters rescue woman entangled by boa constrictor

SHEFFIELD LAKE, OHIO

An Ohio woman called 911 in a panic July 29 with ample reason: A 5½-foot long boa constrictor she had rescued a day earlier had wrapped itself around her neck, was biting her face and wouldn't let go.

"Please hurry," the frightened woman told a dispatcher. "He's biting my nose."

The dispatcher sent firefighters and police to the woman's home in Sheffield Lake, a community about 25 miles west of Cleveland in Lorain County, but seemed stumped.

"I've never heard of this before," the dispatcher is heard saying in a recording of the woman's call.

Rescuers arrived within minutes and found the woman lying in the bloodied driveway of her home, the snake holding tight just as she described.

A firefighter cut off the snake's head with a pocket knife and the 45-year-old woman, who hasn't been identified, was taken by ambulance to a hospital for treatment.

The woman told the dispatcher during the call she had rescued two boa constrictors the day before and that she owned nine ball pythons.

Some bones found at worksite are missing

PHILADELPHIA

A researcher says some of the more than 70 full sets of human remains excavated from a Philadelphia construction site last winter have gone missing.

Kimberlee Moran, the director of forensics at Rutgers University-Camden, says the bones of about 12 people can't be located.

In February, construction crews working on a 10-story apartment building in the city's historic district started unearthing coffins and fully intact human remains.

That's when owner PMC Properties contacted archeologists.

The site was a burial ground that dates to 1707. All the remains were supposedly exhumed in the 1800s and moved to a different cemetery, but that apparently didn't happen.

Researchers at Rutgers University-Camden removed the remains and are studying them before they're reinterred.

Jonathan Stavin, executive vice president of PMC, says locations where bones were stored are being checked again.

TV Pipeline

Jennifer Finnigan finds her television 'Salvation'

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Q. I'm glad to see Jennifer Finnigan on "Salvation," but is "Tyrant" over? — Mary Wade, via e-mail

A. Yes, FX canceled the show — in which the actress played the American wife of a Middle Eastern dictator's son — last year, after its third season. Well, technically, just before its third season ended ... since the network announced just before it was televised that the finale also would be the series finale. FX was hoping to see audience growth for the drama in Season 3, but that ultimately didn't happen.

Finnigan has said how grueling the "Tyrant" shoot was for her, particularly in emotional terms. Though she told us she "almost felt like a prop" during the first two years, she found challenges in the material she was given in the last round. Now expecting her first child with actor husband Jonathan Silverman, she says she appreciates "the pleasant, happy environment" that she has found the "Salvation" set to be.

Q. I know Jill Flint is starring in "The Night Shift," but I've also enjoyed her appearances on "Bull." Will she do any more? — Tim Phillips, via e-mail

A. In fact, she's set to return in the CBS drama's Season 2 premiere on Sept. 26. She'll undoubtedly cross swords again — supposedly figuratively, but with the professionally adventurous Flint, you never know — as her attorney character Diana Lindsay mixes it up with trial consultant Jason Bull (Michael Weatherly) again.

Q. Why haven't we seen any reruns of "Homicide: Life on the Street"? —Marty McNeil, Mineral Ridge, Ohio

A. Several cable networks repeated the much-acclaimed, Emmy-winning show after its NBC run ended, including Lifetime and the now-defunct Court TV and Sleuth. As for now, it may just be getting a rest, but its eventual return would seem likely ... especially since many classic-TV channels would be suitable for it. A complete-series DVD set of the drama, previously released by A&E Home Video, was reissued on the Shout! Factory label just last month.

Q. While I still enjoy "Battle of the Network Stars," I miss seeing a television actor as the captain of each team. Who had that role the most during the show's original run? — George Davis, Providence, R.I.

A. You're probably going to be surprised. Over the course of the specials done between 1976 and 1988, comedian Gabe Kaplan — yes, classic-TV fans, "Mr. Kotter" himself — filled that job six times, five for the ABC team and once for the NBC squad. Right on his heels was Robert Conrad, who captained the NBC players five times.

Among others who had multiple stints as the leaders were William Shatner (four), William Devane (three), and with two each: John Davidson, Jamie Farr, John James, Lorenzo Lamas, Pernell Roberts, Telly Savalas, Daniel J. Travanti and Dick Van Patten.

Q. Why was Kellie Pickler's performance on "A Capitol Fourth" on tape when the rest of the show was live? — John Blake, Clermont, Fla.

A. She was taken ill on July 4, and all that was said was that "her doctor advised against" her performing that night. The PBS show's producers decided to air the dress rehearsal from the night before ... and they made it extremely clear with an on-screen disclaimer throughout the segment (and on social media afterward) that it was prerecorded.

They'd gotten into a bit of a sticky wicket last year, when there was inclement weather in the nation's capital, by showing fireworks from a previous edition and not indicating that. Some sharp-eyed viewers called them out on it.

Q. Is Jan Hammer, who composed the "Miami Vice" theme, still making music? — Sarah Close, Buffalo, N.Y.

A. It's been a while since the Prague native offered a new recording, but he said several years ago that he was working in a compilation of his compositions that hadn't been released yet. Much of his existing catalog can be sampled (if not purchased for digital download outright) through his very thorough website, www.janhammer.com.

‘Sharknado’ strikes the whole world in fifth Syfy edition

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Since “Sharknado” has been an international success, it only makes sense for the campy horror-movie series’ plot to go global, too.

Franchise star Ian Ziering has wanted that for a while, and he takes his chainsaw-wielding character Fin around the world when Syfy debuts “Sharknado 5: Global Swarming” Sunday, Aug. 6. There’s a reason for Fin’s trek: His son (Billy Barratt) with longtime love April (fellow series returnee Tara Reid) is caught in a shark-raining storm making its way from country to country, and as they pursue the boy, they encounter such figures as the Pope (played by Fabio ... really) and the Queen of England (Charo ... really, again).

The usual shooting schedule for a “Sharknado” is 18 to 20 days, and “Beverly Hills, 90210” alum Ziering reports “this one took a little longer,” due to the number of locales involved (some doubling others). “Every time we went to a new country, we did get a day or two to catch up or slow down to the time zone, but it still represented a tremendous challenge. We shot in Bulgaria, London, Rome, Tokyo and Sydney. I left home, flew east, and continued to fly east until I was back home.”

Particularly pleased to work with Dolph Lundgren — another of the new “Sharknado” co-stars who also include Olivia Newton-John (and her daughter, Chloe Lattanzi), “Saturday Night Live” veteran Chris Kattan and “American Idol” alum Clay Aiken — Ziering enjoys also having behind-the-scenes participation in the series, “whether it’s helping find cameo stars or working with the script as we’re shooting it. The script has to stay malleable to allow for location boundaries, and in finding the words for a smooth segue from scene to scene, there’s some rewriting that has to go on. I work with the director to facilitate that. In fact, we all do.”

Ian Ziering stars in “Sharknado 5: Global Swarming” Sunday on Syfy.

It helps to have a souped-up chainsaw for any “Sharknado,” and “Global Swarming” certainly offers one. “I think the heaviest one was in ‘Sharknado 2,’ ” Ziering recalls. “That was a Timber Saw that was almost 40 lbs., and that’s not something that’s easy to wield with one hand. We always look for ways to make the shark kills over the top, and the signature weapon in this movie is a divine weapon — there’s a hint — that’s like a hybrid chainsaw. It’s got exhausts! I picked it up and I was like, ‘Oh, yeah.’ ”

Even if the entire globe seems to be the ultimate “Sharknado” destination, don’t rule out others yet to come.

“Of course, if the fans want it, there will be a ‘Sharknado 6,’ ” promises Ziering, who launched his Chainsaw Brands fashion line from his link to the series. “These have fulfilled two bucket-list items for me: Not only do I get to play an action-adventure hero in a science-fiction movie, I get to work with people I’ve been a fan of my whole life ... and with every one of these movies, I make new friends. I really have to pinch myself.”

The Bold and the Beautiful

Everyone awaited word from Bill on whether Forrester won the competition. Katie and Wyatt were at a loss about what to do about their mutual attraction. Bill asked Caroline to go along with his lie. Zende was frustrated when Nicole opted to skip the post-competition party. Eric called Quinn, telling her he's ready to come home. Sheila tried to convince Eric to divorce Quinn. Katie told Wyatt of his suspicions about Zende and Maya after seeing their intimate moment at the club. Eric's sudden proclamation about his marriage altered Quinn's elation about a reconciliation. Ridge admitted to Steffy that his actions caused irreparable damage to his relationship with his father. After a conversation with Sheila, Charlie realized she still had feelings for Eric. Katie asked out Wyatt via text. After learning what Eric had planned for Quinn, Ridge took steps to fix the trouble he caused.

Days of our Lives

Abigail was seriously injured when she saved Chad's life. Marlena was in deep trouble. Hope and Rafe hunted for Dario. Brady was upset by a conversation he overheard between Nicole and Maggie. Gabi revealed to Chad that Abigail's marriage to Dario was for the purpose of getting a green card. Anjelica had trouble keeping a cohort in line. Marlena found herself in a familiar place. Abigail survived surgery but wasn't yet out of the woods. Chad told Andre that he'd be turning himself in once Abigail pulled through. Tripp was determined to make Kayla pay. Brady could not shake his suspicions about Nicole and Eric. Gabi overheard Chad declare his love for Abigail. Eric comforted Jennifer. Tripp accused Kayla of killing Ava. Brady was upset when Nicole lied to him.

General Hospital

Carly was forced to wait. Sonny began to lose hope. Nina played defense. Nathan delivered a strong warning. Finn surprised Hayden. Sonny faced a decision. Carly let Jordan have it. Avery was inconsolable. Ava took pains to hide her appearance. The past caught up to Hayden. Jason held vigil. Oscar offered support. Nelle scrutinized a gift. Hayden felt guilty. Valentin dealt with an intruder. Laura received a stern warning. Julian tried to cheer up Ava. Carly sought Michael. Dante helped Carly. Jason sought the truth. Sam struggled with reality. Ava received a proposal that could change her fate. Laura had a plan.

The Young and the Restless

Devon assured Neil he no longer had feelings for Hilary. Sharon received a call from Crystal telling her she ran away, but the call was disconnected before she could get any more information. Abby and Zack kissed. Hilary accused Jordan of caring for Lily more than he cared to admit. Paul encouraged Lauren to give Sharon a chance. Sharon was appreciative when Scott agreed to write an exposé of the sex ring in the hopes of helping girls like Crystal. Still feeling the effects of her concussion, Victoria's behavior left Abby and Victor concerned.

Christel Khalil stars as Lily on "The Young and the Restless" weekdays on CBS.
