SAG honoree Alan Alda keeps using acting to make an impact

ALDA ON ACTING

By JOHN CARUCCI

NEW YORK

When Alan Alda receives his life achievement award from the Screen Actors Guild on Sunday, it will celebrate a career that includes multiple Emmy awards, an Oscar nomination and social activism over nearly seven decades.

◆ What: Screen Actors Guild Awards

◆ Where: TBS, TNT

◆ When: Sunday, 8 p.m.

And one that continues to thrive, despite a diagnosis of Parkinson's disease.

At 82, Alda is still practicing his craft, describing the idea of retirement as "a living hell."

"Thank goodness I'm still working and having fun. I'm doing 'Ray Donovan' and 'The Good Fight,' and anything else that comes up that looks like fun to do," the actor told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

"And I've been training and doing about a dozen things to hold back the progress of Parkinson's, which is pretty, you know, pretty successful. I'm still able to work and I do everything else that I do with a full heart," he added. "It's not at a point where it upsets me at all. I just cope with it, so I'm

'Serenity' now? No thank you

By JAKE COYLE
AP Film Writer

The elevator pitch for Steven Knight's "Serenity" would be: "Key Largo" meets "Westworld." And it's every bit as ridiculous as that sounds.

Seven decades after Humphrey Bogart indelibly steered a boat through stormy Atlantic seas, Matthew McConaughey has found his own tropical noir. But "Serenity," one very leaky vessel indeed, has a strange, heightened atmosphere that goes well beyond the usual thickened air of film noir.

McConaughey's Baker Dill is a fishing boat captain who, like Bogart was in "Key Largo," is a veteran. He lives the life of an ornery and heavy-drinking bachelor on Plymouth Island, a small spit of unknown whereabouts (the film was shot in Mauritius) where there's a single bar, the Rope, and everyone knows who's sleeping with whom. (In Dill's case, it's Constance, played by Diane Lane.) He lives in a shipping container by the shore and when he strips naked to, as he announces, "take a shower," he does a swan dive off the seaside cliff outside.

Maybe that's about what you'd ex-doing fine.”

Alda is best known best known for his yearslong stint as Capt. Benjamin Franklin “Hawkeye” Pierce on the iconic television sitcom, “M*A*S*H.” He also co-wrote and directed the series finale, “Goodbye, Farewell, and Amen,” which was the most watched series broadcast in American television history, drawing 105 million viewers.

His resume also includes features films, including “Same Time, Next Year” and “The Aviator,” for which he was nominated for an Oscar, to TV shows including appearances on “30 Rock.”

He will receive his SAG honor during Sunday’s Screen Actors Guild Awards in Los Angeles, joining a group that includes Morgan Freeman, Clint Eastwood, Rita Moreno, Dick Van Dyke and Lily Tomlin.

Alda has also been involved in numerous charities and organizations that have supported children’s causes and women’s issues, including his support for the Equal Rights Amendment nearly 40 years ago.

He hopes the legacy that endures, even more so than his acting, is his social activism, particularly when it comes to his work with the Alan Alda Center for Communicative Science at Stony Brook University in New York. The center works to bridge the gap between scientists and the public, and uses acting techniques, such as improvisational theater exercises to help make their message more relatable.

“I’m not going to notice what happens after I’m dead. But I would like to leave behind something of use to other people, and the work that I do on helping people communicate better is the only work I’ve ever done where I hoped it would not only still be there after I’m gone,” Alda said, adding that the center has trained more than 12,000 people in the medical and science professions.

“I’d like the whole world to benefit from it. So, maybe 50 or 100 years after I’m gone, it’ll be better and more widespread than it is now,” he said.

One initiative with the foundation is to “level the playing field” by training more women in the sciences, because as Alda

ALAN ALDA,
Actor

says, “I’m still a concerned feminist.”

He sees that same commitment to equality at SAG, especially with the awards ceremony’s executive producer, Kathy Connell. She has helmed the show since its inception 25 years ago, and was the first woman to produce a major awards show.

“I think the people who represent the actors, the union that represents the actors can be and has been, influential in helping the image of who we are as a country, as a culture, be represented on screen a little more effectively. So, I’m very happy that there’s this effort to do that by our guild.”

Alda has often portrayed affable, nice guys on screen, which he says often comes from the script. But when being regarded as a nice guy in real life, well, that’s something he attributes to his soul mate, his wife of 61 years, Arlene.

“Most of the good intentions I have come from my wife who helped me become a person better than any other person I can think of. So, I’m indebted to her. Not for what I have and what I do, but for who I am to a great extent,” Alda said.

And that’s what keeps him going.

“I’m always busy working and when I’m not, I can’t imagine not doing that except for when I sit down and play a card game on my iPhone,” Alda says.

He recalls the words of his late “M*A*S*H” castmate, Wayne Rogers, who played, Capt. “Trapper” John McIntyre on the show.

“I’m having fun. My friend Wayne Rogers used to say don’t forget, fun, fun, fun, and he had fun.”

Sheryl Crow and Hozier to headline LaureLive

By GUY D’ASTOLFO
dastolfo@vindy.com

CHESTERLAND

LaureLive, the two-day rock festival in Geauga County, will return in June with headliners Sheryl Crow and Hozier, and a bit of a Youngstown flavor.

The festival, now in its fourth year, boast 30 musical acts, including The Vindys and JD Eicher. It will take place June 8-9 at the Laurel School’s Butler Campus on Fairmount Road.

Tickets are now on sale at LaureLive.com and Ticketfly.com. Single-day passes are $75 ($20 for children age 3-10), and weekend passes are $115 ($35 for children). Enhanced experience tickets are $265 ($150 for children) for one day, and $395 ($195 for children) for a weekend pass.

The June 8 lineup will include Hozier and an undercard of Dirty Heads, Moon Taxi, Misterwives, Coin, Dennis Lloyd, Alec Benjamin, The Blue Stones, Moto pony, The Suitcase Junket, Northern National, The Vindys, Rebounder, Julia Thompson, JD Eicher and The Dead Licks.

The June 9 lineup includes headliner Crow, plus Trombone Shorty (who also played the fest last year), Lake Street Dive, AJR, Rodrigo y Gabriela, Red Sun Rising, Castlecomer, Emily Hackett, Caroline Jones, Doc Robinson, Clubhouse, The Furies, Front Porch Lights, Ashley Fulton and the Shootouts.

The Irish artist Hozier, best known for his song “Take Me to Church,” will release a new album, “Wasteland,” in March.

Crow, a nine-time Grammy Award winner, is a multiplatinum artist whose body of work includes “All I Wanna Do,” “Soak Up the Sun,” “Everyday Is a Winding Road,” “My Favorite Mistake” and “Strong Enough.”

Food lines at LaureLive were long last year, and the organizers have taken steps to alleviate them. The festival has joined forces with chef Fabio Salerno’s “Lago” brand, which already creates items for Cleveland Browns Stadium, Quicken Loans Arena and the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame.

There will be nine food stands and five food trucks in the main concert area, plus additional food trucks on the south side of the concert venue adjacent to Stage 3. The total number of food vendor windows will be at least 25, far exceeding that of any other year, according to a press release from LaureLive.

The festival also made it a point to book more Northeast Ohio acts this year, or national bands with members from the region. In addition to the Vindys and JD Eicher, these include Red Sun Rising, COIN, Clubhouse, Julia Thompson, Doc Robinson, Front Porch Lights, Ashley Fulton and the Shootouts.

REVIEW

pect of a McConaughey movie set anywhere near a beach. But then strangely exaggerated metaphors begin popping up everywhere. Dill’s boat is named “Serenity” and he’s dubbed the elusive giant tuna he obsessively chases “Justice.” (That’s right. “Serenity” is about a fisherman hunting a tuna named Justice.) But why is he, for example, so pointedly drinking from a mug labeled “World’s Greatest Dad?” Why does he say things like “I’m a hooker without a hook?” And why on earth does some spilled water momentarily telepathically connect Dill to his young son who sits somewhere far away in front of a computer screen? Didn’t McConaughey get all his interdimensional parenting out of his system in “Interstellar?”

It turns out, there are answers to these peculiarities and others.

‘SERENITY’

McConaughey

A big reveal eventually washes ashore that both explains the film’s clumsy pseudo-reality and makes it only more absurd. You can’t say Knight, the talented screenwriter of “Eastern Promises” and “Dirty Pretty Things” and the writer-director of “Locke,” isn’t going for something audacious and grandiose here. “Serenity” isn’t the sort of misfire you are likely to quickly forget; its aim is too high and the results are too off balance. One tends to remember a fish named Justice.

Whether a tamer film would have been better or worse is hard to say. On the plus side, there’s a blonde Anne Hathaway in full femme fatale mode, an occasion Knight celebrates with some of the most excitable camera moves you’ve ever seen.

She plays Dill’s ex-wife who has tracked Dill, via Facebook, to Plymouth with the proposal that Dill take her abusive and alcoholic husband (Jason Clarke, a caricature of vileness) on a fishing trip and leave him at the bottom of the ocean in exchange for $10 million.

Certainly, Knight is more than capable of taking a simple if familiar genre set-up like that and turning it into something interesting. His “Locke” memorably made a terse thriller out of a plot that featured Tom Hardy alone in a car for nearly the film’s entire running time. But he has added a second layer of parable to “Serenity” that, without giving anything away, has something to do with that far-away boy and little to do with basic narrative structures.

“Serenity” may be hopelessly at sea but all of the performers are nevertheless fully committed to the tale, particularly Hathaway and McConaughey, who apparently has a thing for movies with boats (“Mud,” “Fool’s Gold”). Both are led astray by a wayward script about a fisherman named Dill who’s caught in a bit of a pickle. “Serenity” now? I wouldn’t recommend it.

'The Favourite': a delicious but vicious acting feast

By JAKE COYLE
Associated Press

Yorgos Lanthimos' "The Favourite," a wicked blast of nasty fun, gleefully dispenses with the usual decorum of the period drama to free its powerhouse trio of actresses — Olivia Colman, Emma Stone and Rachel Weisz — in a deliciously performed romp through the wigs and corsets of 18th century British aristocracy.

That the acting — and that includes the spectacular supporting player Nicolas Hoult, too, as Tory leader Robert Harley — should be such a feast in Lanthimos' latest is a surprise. His earlier films ("The Lobster," "The Killing of a Sacred Deer," "Dogtooth") were intentionally performed in a flat, emotionless manner that seldom rose above an awkward monotone.

But the brisker "The Favourite" is, to a degree, a departure for Lanthimos who this time is working from a script by Deborah Davis and Tony McNamara instead of his usual collaborator, Efthimis Filippou. "The Favourite" is no less vicious or pitiless than their previous films, nor does Lanthimos find the customs of early 1700s English royals any less grotesque than the contemporary norms he's so savagely satirized before.

Yet "The Favourite," a triangular power struggle in Queen Anne's court, is indeed a riot, albeit a frigid and disquieting one. And it's not just because Lanthimos favors anachronism over historical accuracy. It's the pleasure of seeing three of the finest actresses weave between one another in ever more absurd acts of seduction and betrayal.

In a rickety and crowded carriage, we arrive in Queen Anne's court with Abigail (Stone), a distant relative of the queen who, having been lost by her father in a game of cards, has slipped out of the nobility. She's desperate to restore her standing with a position in the royal household, and after initially being sent to scrub floors, the Duchess of Marlborough, Sarah Churchill (Weisz), takes her on as chambermaid.

Our glimpses of Abigail's so-called "diminished circumstances" are vivid enough to earn our sympathies and warrant her increasingly cold-blooded tactics for elevation. In one of many such transactional exchanges, Abigail allows a more high-born man into her chamber at night and asks if he's there to rape her or seduce her. "I'm a gentleman," he defensively protests. "Rape then," she matter-of-factly replies.

Through cunning, blackmail and flattery, Abigail soon has the ear of Queen Anne (Colman), not to mention her bed, a newfound status at odds with the queen's previous confidante and lover, Sarah. Weisz's duchess is using her position with the queen to extend the war with France, and her methods of manipulation are far more aggressively controlling.

Through wide-angled and fish-eye lenses Lanthimos tracks the three-sided drama, pulling it toward its most primal expressions.

Much of "The Favourite" is caustically clever but it's Colman who elevates it to something magnificent. Her Anne is a glorious and sad ruin of a queen, a woman wrecked by time and heartache.

With its spurts of violence, splashes of blood and cynical sexual encounters, "The Favourite" is, oddly enough, about love. In their opposite ways, Sarah and Abigail offer a melancholy dichotomy: Love is either flattery and false, or honest and abusive.
